UBCM Calls Emergency Meeting

An emergency meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities executive will be held Friday in New Westminster.

This was announced today by Mayor H. J. Gardner of Williams Lake, president of the UBCM.

The move follows province-wide concern by municipal leaders at the large increase this year in school costs.

"We are very concerned about the rising cost of schools," Mayor Gardner said in a telephone interview.

"What the answer is I'm not too sure."

Municipalities have found they must raise up to an extra five mills towards the cost of schools this year.

Mayor Gardner said he didn't plan on an executive meeting until June, but the widespread concern at school costs brought a response from municipal leaders for an immediate UBCM meeting.

THOUGHT MISTAKE

One interior city mayor, when he saw school costs up 4.29 mills, shrugged it off at first as a mistake.

"It came as a great shock when I realized the figure was accurate," he added.

The increase in the Victoria area is 4.8 mills.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen has received support from other municipal leaders in his call for a royal commission to examine all aspects of provincial-municipal responsibilities and cost-sharing formulas.

This request will be introduced at the annual UBCM meeting in September at Prince George.

Scooped Moon 'Lumpy'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor III dug a trench about three feet long and at least six inches deep in the surface of the moon today but uncovered nothing spectacular.

The trench, the second scooped out by a two-by-five-inch shovel in less than three hours, turned up a considerable amount of lumpy material much like that on the undisturbed surface.

Pictures of the operation, televised to controllers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, showed no surprises and nothing to indicate the moon's surface might be unsafe for manned landings.

Early today the spidery device did its first digging—a foot-long trench in three jerky motions lasting two seconds each.

The scoop made a second pass through the trench about an hour later but spokesmen said the pictures were not clear enough to show whether the trench had been deepened.

Surveyor III first dropped the scoop into the soil between two of its legs, creating a rectangular hole about 1½ inches deep.

After a brief delay to let the electronics of Surveyor's overheating camera cool off, the shovel was moved to the right and lowered again with its scoop opened.

The trench that resulted when the scoop was pulled back appeared sharply defined in photographs. This indicated the lunar soil was strongly cohesive, similar to wet sand.

A spokesman said the texture and grain of the soil around the spacecraft appeared about as expected—not too soft for a man to walk on nor so hard it would damage a landing vehicle.

Armored Cars Halt Attacks on Chinese

JAKARTA (Reuters) — Indonesian troops and police, using armored cars, today blocked off Chinatown and other business centres in Jakarta after hundreds of young Indonesians ran wild and destroyed Chinese-owned property.

Youths armed with Molotov cocktails, knives, crow bars and bicycle chains marched to the Communist Chinese Embassy for retaliatory against Chinese merchants who staged an anti - government demonstration Thursday.

Troops prevented them from forcing their way into the tightly barred building.

Many Chinese citizens were rescued by troops when their vehicles were stopped by the mob.

The earlier Chinese demonstration was over the death of a Chinese held by the government.

Stopped from entering the embassy by hundreds of troops and police, the angry Indonesians demanded expulsion of the Chinese and a break of relations.

The demonstrators also set fire to Chinese-owned cars near the embassy and stoned Chinese stores.

BUT COURT HARSH ON BURNS

'Bagpipe Skirl Not Noise'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bearded Scot stood resplendent in kilt and sporran in magistrate's court Friday and smiled when his playing 'a the pipes was defended.

But he had to turn the other cheek when Magistrate Les Bewley called Robbie Burns a "third rate poet."

Pipe Major Gordon Webb, 26, of the University of British Columbia pipe band was charged with causing a disturbance during a nocturnal skirl outside a downtown apartment on Burns Night, last Jan. 26.

Webb, and two of his companions who had joined in the piping, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Evidence was that an irate apartment dweller tossed four pans of water on the celebrants, but to no avail.

Axel Tuhman testified the three entered his apartment and left only after repeated requests.

Magistrate Bewley dismissed the charges after defence counsel referred to an appeal court decision which ruled the bagpipes are not noise.

The magistrate, who said his background was part-Phoenician and part-Norman, said he was at a loss to understand "the veneration of a third-rate poet who talks about that unheard-of thing called the haggis."

'Reluctant' King Backs Greek Coup

ATHENS (CP)—King Constantine swore in seven more ministers to complete a new Greek cabinet today after a day of hesitation over whether to put the royal seal on a military administration.

The swearing in was announced by a government spokesman who told journalists: "The king is with us."

He said that three of the seven new ministers were judges. They join the four army officers and the new prime minister, Constantine Kollias, who set up the government Friday night after an army coup.

Some sources said the 26-year-old king was reluctant earlier to sign a decree which would have made the new cabinet and the new emergency laws legal.

KING BALKED

He was reported to have balked at giving his approval until the government was filled with more civilian figures.

Meanwhile, the Greek navy and air force were reported to have thrown full support to the army leaders who took over the government in Friday's pre-dawn coup.

A government source termed as wild some reports that a split had developed between the army coup leaders and other army officers, the navy and the air force.

"The three arms are fully behind the coup leaders, who are determined to lead the country forward and out of the chaos created by the political bickering," the source said.

Premier Kollias said that the coup had been "bloodless" except for two casualties.

He said "calm and order" prevailed throughout Greece.

As the Greek capital returned toward normal, Kollias issued a statement broadcast by the Greek armed forces radio.

"The army's intervention was bloodless there were only two casualties. One casualty was from a ricocheting bullet and the other when the victim did not obey orders of a soldier under instruction."

Communications were still spotty and news correspondents were told to exercise "self-censorship of responsibility," to avoid speculation and to report only what they see and are told by officials.

Military units that had ringed Athens were withdrawn.

Diplomatic reports in London and Copenhagen said the king was at Tatoi Palace outside Athens at the time of the pre-dawn coup Friday. This raised a possibility he may have been caught by surprise. A Turkish dispatch said even top army officers also may have been surprised by a coup launched by a handful of officers, joined later by others.

A pooled dispatch by AP correspondent Philip Dopoulos from Athens reported the night was filled with sporadic shooting in and around the Greek capital. The dispatch said there were unconfirmed reports that

Tornado Toll Mounts

CHICAGO (UPI) — The wreckage left by the worst tornado onslaught ever to smash northern Illinois yielded new bodies today.

National guardsmen patrolled devastated towns with orders to shoot looters on sight.

The death toll of the vicious band of twisters which hit eight states Friday stood at 50. Scores of persons, many of them children, were still missing and the fatality count appeared certain to rise.

Total damage was estimated at close to $50 million.

Eighteen twisters carved a 175-mile path across northern Illinois and struck with lethal power at the Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn and the farm town of Belvidere, 55 miles to the northwest.

There were 27 dead at Oak Lawn and 20 at Belvidere. Other deaths were recorded in Chicago, suburban Stone Park, and Jonesville, Mich.

An estimated 1,500 persons were injured in the Illinois cities and communities of Oak Lawn, Belvidere, Chicago, Stone Park, Hometown, Evergreen Park, Barrington, Lake Zurich, North Barrington, Woodstock and Glenview.

Illinois was not alone in suffering the tornadoes' fury. Twisters hit from Oklahoma to Ohio, where the last of the night's funnel clouds were sighted near Fluffton at 2 a.m. today.

Damage in the Grand Rapids, Mich., area was estimated at $3 million and twisters also touched down in Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin and Indiana.

As midwesterners tried to dig out from the tornadoe's devastation, tornado watches were ordered today for parts of six eastern states—central and eastern New York, northeast Pennsylvania, northwest New Jersey, southeast Virginia, southern and eastern North Carolina, and northeast South Carolina.

With dawn, the search for more bodies began. In Oak Lawn, deputies probed the rubble of what had been the Fairview store and discovered the body of 18-month-old Christine Casey. Across the street, they came upon the body of her mother, Mrs. Joan Casey, 30.

Close to 800 Guardsmen were ordered into Oak Lawn with orders to shoot to kill if vandalism or looting broke out. Sheriff's deputies arrested one man discovered in an abandoned home as a looter. The officers used a police dog to sniff him out.

Gov. Otto Kerner sent an urgent call to the White House for federal aid and hurried to the disaster areas. He flew over the wreckage of Belvidere and described what he saw as "a corridor of destruction."

As Kerner arrived, more than 100 Guardsmen clad in battle fatigues joined with deputies and police from throughout northern Illinois in a grim, foot-by-foot search of the devastated area around the town's high school.

The men formed a human chain as they moved across the area where the roaring black funnel caught children as they emerged from the school Friday.

It was here that children were crushed to death

U.S. Drugs Available To China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration has advised U.S. drug manufacturers of its willingness to lift its embargo on China enough to permit a shipment of epidemic-fighting drugs to that Communist country.

Officials said Friday 14 drugmakers were advised of the U.S. government's position at a quiet meeting Wednesday with Lawrence C. McQuade, assistant commerce secretary for domestic and international business.

The meeting was called by the government, it was said, to advise the firms that if they received any inquiries about drug shipments to China and government would be disposed to approve them to fight three epidemics reported ravaging that country.

It can be assumed, a source said, that because of this green light the companies will approach potential buyers of drugs to fight menigitis, cholera and infectious hepatitis.

NO GOVERNMENT AID

Officials emphasized, however, that the program will not involve any government aid and that any shipments will be purely commercial ventures for cash.

The easing of the embargo would involve such drugs as cholera vaccines, tetrocycline, sulfa drugs and penicillin.

One reason for the secrecy of the Wednesday meeting was said to be a fear that if the offer were publicly announced it would be rejected out of hand by the Chinese.

Sources said the administration decided on the new course partly for humanitarian reasons and partly to prevent the reported epidemics from spreading to friendly countries near China. "This doesn't indicate any real lowering of barriers," one source said.

Officials said they had received no applications from drug manufactureres to send medicines to China prior to the meeting and have received none since.

Youths Kept in Jail Awaiting Sentence

Two 19-year-old boys who stole a fishing reel from an Esquimalt sporting goods store will wait a week in jail before being sentenced.

Lawrence Parker, 615 Fernhill, pleaded guilty to the theft when he appeared in central court Friday. Kenneth McGill, 2390 Oak Bay Ave., who pleaded not guilty, was convicted after a trial.

Both will return to court next Friday for sentence. They were remanded in custody.

Laing Interested In Indian Plan

Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing has agreed to meet B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to discuss self-governing municipalities for Indian reserves.

In a letter to Mr. Campbell, Mr. Laing said the meeting should be after May 1 when he will hold talks with the National Indian Advisory Board on the same question.

Mr. Laing said he wrote Mr. Campbell because the latter had quoted him in a public speech as showing no interest in the idea.

He told Mr. Campbell in the letter that the federal government is most interested in municipal systems for reserves.

Mr. Laing said Mr. Campbell seemed to suggest that the reserve lands be turned over to individuals rather than the Indian band before achieving municipal status.

The federal government is afraid that the reserves might fall more and more into the hands of a few individuals, depriving the Indians of their livelihood.

He said: "These are lands held by the Indians and I have laid down a general policy of no more land sales. We want to develop them. There is 6 million acres involved."

when the twister flung their school buses against the wall of the school and more fell inside the building—in the words of a survivor—"lying all over, their faces mostly covered with blood."

Others were blown into the fields and Belvidere Mayor Clark M. Hetland said "scores of children" were still missing and feared dead.

In Belvidere and Oak Lawn, bulldozers groaned to plow paths through the welter of stacked-up cars, demolished homes and downed trees.

Oak Lawn Mayor Fred Dumke, a paraplegic who toured the devastation walking with the aid of painful braces, issued a call for help and added, "Anyone who is not coming here to help, stay the hell out."

Dumke was fearful of what searchers would find in a trailer court which looked like the target of a bombing attack in the tornado's wake. The court was at least 50 per cent destroyed.

"There must still be bodies in there and there must still be people in there," he said. "There is devastation we haven't even seen yet."

By a rough count, there were at least 1,000 injured in the Belvidere area and about 500 around Oak Lawn.

VANCOUVER CHIEF TELLS PROBE

Police Need Bugging Protection

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Police Chief Ralph Booth complained Friday that city police are being bugged.

The chief told the royal commission on invasion of privacy that criminals and business firms are invading the force's privacy by monitoring police radio transmissions.

"It is in the public interest to see that the police department is protected from these intrusions," Mr. Booth said.

He said it is illegal to monitor transmissions without authority, but the law in not effective enough to prosecute.

"Monitoring the police radio is fast becoming a common practice by the criminal element," he said.

He said news media and other persons are duly authorized to monitor the transmissions.

"But local car towing companies and who knows who else are monitoring for business or personal gain," he said.

The chief presented a brief to Commissioner R. A. Sargent in which he said controls over police use of bugging devices, suggested in other briefs, would play into the hands of criminals.

"A criminal couldn't wish for anything better than placing restrictions on the police," he said.

one person was killed and 10 wounded.

The Athens account said there also were unconfirmed reports that the navy commander, Admiral Constantine Engolfopoulos, refused to co-operate with the army coup leaders and was placed under arrest.

The first travellers reaching Rome from Greece reported today they heard gunfire in the streets but witnessed no bloodshed. Some said, however, they had heard rumors in Greece that three persons were killed in Athens and six in the Salonika area in northern Greece.

The diplomatic reports reaching London and Copenhagen said the army leaders who pulled off the coup in the king's name may have forced him to sign the royal proclamation putting the military in charge.

Not a word has been heard directly from the king in Greek broadcasts.

Martial law still was in force throughout Greece, but coup leaders relaxed restrictions and appealed for calm and order. Workers were told to return to their jobs.

Political leaders and about 8,500 known leftists remained in custody in military detention centres.

Premier Constantine Kollias heads the new government along with Lt.-Gen. Gregory Spandidakis, deputy premier and minister of defence, who was believed to have led the army coup. Others in the government are Brig.-Gen. Styliakos Patakos, interior minister; Col. Nicolas Makarezos, co-ordination minister, and Col. George Papadopoulos, head of press and information and minister to the premier's office.

Puerto Rican Admits Link with JFK Plot

MANILA (AP) — A Puerto Rican described as a Communist agent for Cuba was the centre of controversy Saturday following reports that he had suggested he was drawn into a plot to assassinate president John F. Kennedy.

Luis Castillo, 24, was presented Friday by officials of the Philippines National Bureau of Investigation to some local reporters after NBI agents said he had confessed under questioning that:

- He had been in Dallas, Tex., at the time of the 1963 Kennedy assassination and had been given a rifle to shoot "a man in an open car."
- He entered the Philippines in the guise of a Filipino to contact Communist leaders here.

Newspaper reports say Castillo is seeking asylum in this country because "I am afraid to go anywhere . . . I am as good as dead now."

University-Run Hospitals Urged By Quebec MDs

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons Friday called for the establishment of university-run hospital centres which, the organization said, would serve to improve the quality of medical teaching and ultimately to produce more highly qualified professors.

The college made the recommendation in a brief to the provincial commission investigating health and welfare.

The organization also reiterated a stand in favor of a government-backed plan for medical care which would cover the whole population and provide for all medical needs.

But doctors should be allowed to opt out of such a plan, there should be some measure of fees designed as a deterrent to any exploitation of the plan and doctors should be paid on a fee basis rather than as salaried employees.

The college is supported in its stand on the medical care question by the Federation of General Practitioners, the Professional Association of Dental Surgeons, the Professional Association of Pharmacists, the Professional Association of Optometrists, the Professional Association of Dispensing Opticians and the Associations of Doctors of the Public Health Service of the City of Montreal.

SOME VOICE CRITICISM

Several other medical groups, however, came out strongly against any form of government control of medical care. These groups say they include large segments of the doctors who come under the Quebec college.

The groups against a government plan said government should be called on to foot the medical bills of the needy and, in what they call a relative way, for those who qualify neither as needy or as well off.

Dr. Gustave Gingras, president of the college and its official spokesman, said the group was appearing before the commission for the second time in eight days because it wanted to expand on some points left unexplained in its previous submission.

The brief said university-run hospital centres were needed because students now enrolled in the three largest faculties of medicine in Quebec—those at the universities of Montreal, McGill and Laval—do not have the opportunity to come into contact with the sick during their first two years of studies.

The quality of medical training and the calibre of future professors of medicine would improve if provision were made for the bringing together of medical students and hospital patients.

Dentists and specialists in other medical and allied disciplines should also have access to the hospital centres, the brief said.

The brief said the college recognized the right of resident doctors to receive higher pay than they are getting now. However, interns and residents should not be allowed to supplement their incomes during the period of post-university training by taking on a private practice or by assisting a practising physician.

SHE CRAVES 'SELF EXPRESSION'

Stalina's Odyssey Ends in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — An odyssey across three continents has brought Svetlana Stalina, daughter of the late Soviet dictator, to the United States seeding, she says, life with freedom of self-expression.

In a simply-worded statement she said disenchantment with the communism, taught her since her childhood, and discovery of a deep religious faith had led to the decision to defect from her Soviet homeland.

"I found it was impossible to exist without God in one's heart," she said on her arrival Friday.

"But that was a great change because since that moment the main dogmas of communism lost their significance for me.

"I have come here in order to seek the self-expression that has been denied me for so long in Russia," the red-haired 42-year-old widow explained.

She said she had struggled against the break because it meant leaving her two children in Moscow and not seeing them again for a long time, "but all was in vain—I felt it was impossible to go back."

On the evening of March 6 she went to the American Embassy in New Delhi requesting asylum in the U.S. and began the journey that took her from India to Italy, then Switzerland and finally the United States.

ARRIVING IN NEW YORK from Switzerland Friday is Svetlanda Stalina, 42, only daughter of late Russian dictator Josef Stalin. (AP Wirephoto.)

Miss Stalina declined to say whether she had been granted permanent asylum here. In Washington the state department said:

"She is free to remain here as long as she wishes and is free to leave whenever she wishes."

Prior to her arrival the department notified the Soviet embassy she was on her way. There has been concern in the capital over the possible effect on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Already here when she arrived from Zurich, Switzerland, was the manuscript of an 80,000-word autobiography written in 1963 which has been turned over to Harper and Row for publication Oct. 16.

In a written statement she said she left Moscow last December to take the ashes of Brijesh Singh, the man described by the Soviet government as her husband, to India.

"I fully expected to return to Russia within one month's time," she wrote. "However, during my stay in India I decided that I could not return to Moscow.

"In recent years, we in Russia have begun to think, to discuss, to argue, and we are not so much automatically devoted any more to the ideas which we were taught."

BURNABY (CP) — Four firemen were overcome by smoke and fumes and a fifth suffered cuts during a fire that heavily damaged a chemical plant here Friday.

The fire destroyed 6,000 gallons of volatile fluids at the Record Chemical Co. Western Ltd. plant and ate into a two-storey office building at the front of the premises.

Residents in the area reported hearing an explosion as the fire broke out Friday night. Smaller explosions punctuated the blaze, which continued until early today.

12 Tear Up Hymn Sheets To Protest Unity Service

PARIS (UPI) — A dozen French Roman Catholics tore up hymn sheets in Notre Dame Cathedral today to protest a church unity service attended by Britain's Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey.

The action took place at the beginning of a ceremony in which Ramsey and Paris Archbishop Pierre Veuillot knelt in prayer together before the cathedral's high altar to demonstrate the ecumencial spirit of the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches.

The group shouted its opposition to the ceremony after ripping up the hymnals, then they were quietly escorted out of the ancient church by ushers.

Ramsey had earlier been welcomed at the ornate door of the cathedral by Veuillot. Both churchmen, wearing their purple robes of office, embraced each other and paused for photographs before entering the cathedral.

After the ceremony Ramsey visited French President Charles de Gaulle.

"We have talked about all the questions which preoccupy all Christians," he said after seeing the French leader.

He recalled he had already met de Gaulle briefly at the funeral in London of Sir Winston Churchill "but today was my first real meeting with the president and it was for me a great privilege to speak with him," he said.

Ramsey was accompanied throughout the morning by British ambassador Sir Patrick Reilly who later gave a reception in the archbishop's honor at the British embassy.

Labor Split In Britain On Vietnam

LONDON (Reuters) — Sixty members of the ruling Labor party rebelled in the Commons Friday against the British government's support of U.S. President Johnson's policies in Vietnam.

Their private members' non-government motion called on Prime Minister Wilson's administration to agree that the cessation of American bombing in Vietnam is the first preliminary move which alone could create conditions for meaningful negotiations aimed at ending the Vietnam war.

The government does not agree with this.

But the motion was not voted on for procedural reasons. The rebels showed their dissent by voting 60 to 1 on a technical motion to close the debate.

Labor left-wingers turned up in force and virtually took over the chamber on a day when most members had left for a long weekend in their home districts.

The government spokesman, Foreign Undersecretary William Rodgers, said to stop bombing now without any response from Hanoi could be disastrous to later prospects in more hopeful circumstances.

Named to Board

C. W. G. English today was appointed by the provincial cabinet to a three-year term on the Esquimalt zoning board of appeal, succeeding S. J. Roozendaal.

15-Month Term For Delinquency

Ira Burleson of Plumper Bay was sentenced to 15 months in jail when he appeared in central court Friday on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

The offence involved a 13-year-old boy.

He was also fined $50 or 30 days for supplying liquor to a minor.

Get It in the Open

THE SURGING DISCONTENT of British Columbia's municipalities with the existing financial arrangements imposed by the provincial government, coupled with the predicament posed by this year's sharply rising mill rates, is about to precipitate an emergency meeting of the UBCM executive to get action on the problem.

The municipalities have long sought a round-table session with provincial government representatives to iron out the difficulties they face in the escalating costs of administration and education. The increasing incidence of taxes on real property to meet expenses at the municipal level threatens side effects in the form of deterrents to home-owning, community improvement and local business expansion.

The province's gift of annual grants to individuals living in their own homes, and now capital grants to home builders, is seen as a stop-gap arrangement with heavy overtones of vote-catching. What is wanted is an overall review of the whole financial set-up between province and municipalities — a public airing of opinions and arguments on both sides and a sensible joint approach to what is becoming one of the most pressing urban problems of our times: the difficulty of providing increasing local services from a restricted tax base.

That seems to be a fair request. If the government has what it considers to be convincing arguments in favor of its present course, then the conference would provide full scope for their presentation. But the stock reply to such requests has been the minister's assertion that his door is always open to municipal representatives, but apparently only one by one. Another government reaction is to compare the British Columbia situation with that of other provinces, while claiming the British Columbia treatment of municipalities is the most generous in the country.

This means little, for it affords the B.C. municipalities no benefit to hear of others' troubles. They are concerned with their own mounting expenditures and the problem of meeting them, and the possible predicament of reeves in Saskatchewan or New Brunswick is of no help to them.

In this situation, support is widespread for Mayor Stephen's proposal that a royal commission study the whole problem and come up with some recommendations. Mr. Campbell's unfortunate reply to this suggestion — that it is merely a political ploy of the Liberal Party — does him no credit and certainly is no answer to the problem. The support for the proposal now coming in from reeves in all parts of the province puts the accusation of narrow political partisanship in its proper light.

On two grounds the provincial government should stop dodging this increasingly urgent problem and give the municipalities some satisfaction. First, there is a bona fide financial problem which should be faced and if possible solved one way or another—and this solution should not entail attempts by local taxpayers to avoid their proper responsibilities when these are identified.

Secondly, the mere fact that elected municipal councils all across the province are seeking help and a frank approach to the problem should move the government to stop sheltering behind its superior position and face these local officials who are just as genuinely the representative voice of the people as are their senior colleagues, and much nearer to the electors.

Reigning and Ruling

THE DICTUM THAT "THE KING reins but the people rule" was enunciated not long ago by former Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou, but it was overturned by an army-supported seizure of power.

The events leading up to this third, and most critical, interference with the democratic process of the country are tangled and disputed. what is evident is that after eight years of rule by a rigid right-wing element, Mr. Papandreou came to power in 1963 because the Greek voters believed his Centre Union Party would provide better government for the country than the right-wing National Radical Union Party.

Mr. Papandreou's troubles began when he took it for granted that a parliamentary majority meant he was entitled to subject all the instruments of state power — particularly including the army — to parliamentary control. This was resisted by both army and palace and the king's first interference with the government came when he refused the prime minister's advice regarding a defence minister.

The so-called Aspida plot followed, with Mr. Papandreou's son accused of promoting a left-wing element in the army and the prime minister counter-claiming it was a palace scheme to discredit him. Then two years ago, the king dismissed the prime minister and appointed in his place the leader of a break-away faction of Mr. Papandreou's party. This government limped along until earlier this month when parliament was dissolved by the king and a caretaker National Radical Union Party government was named to supervise elections May 28.

Friday's army take-over, and the mass arrests of both right and left-wing leaders—including Papandreou father and son and the newly-named Premier Canellopoulos — indicates that the military clique and its advisers had little confidence in winning support in free and democratic elections. The palace junta has announced that the take-over was to assure public order and has intimated that the elections will be held as scheduled. Voting under conditions of army rule, and with many principal political leaders jailed, will be farcical at best, and the situation could deteriorate into violence.

The events in Greece will cause widening ripples throughout the NATO community, the perilous United Nations-supervised truce on Cyprus could be affected and trouble may be expected along the borders between Greece and the Communist Balkan countries. Because of the potential for trouble, it is going to be difficult for the Western nations to avoid being involved in this crisis. Involvement, however, should not become a commitment to uphold, at this date in history, the Divine Right of Kings.

President Frei to Latin Americans

WHATEVER THE LASTING results of the summit conference in Punta del Este, the gathering has produced an interesting prescription by a Latin American leader to overcome some of the difficulties which prevent a number of the states from making progress.

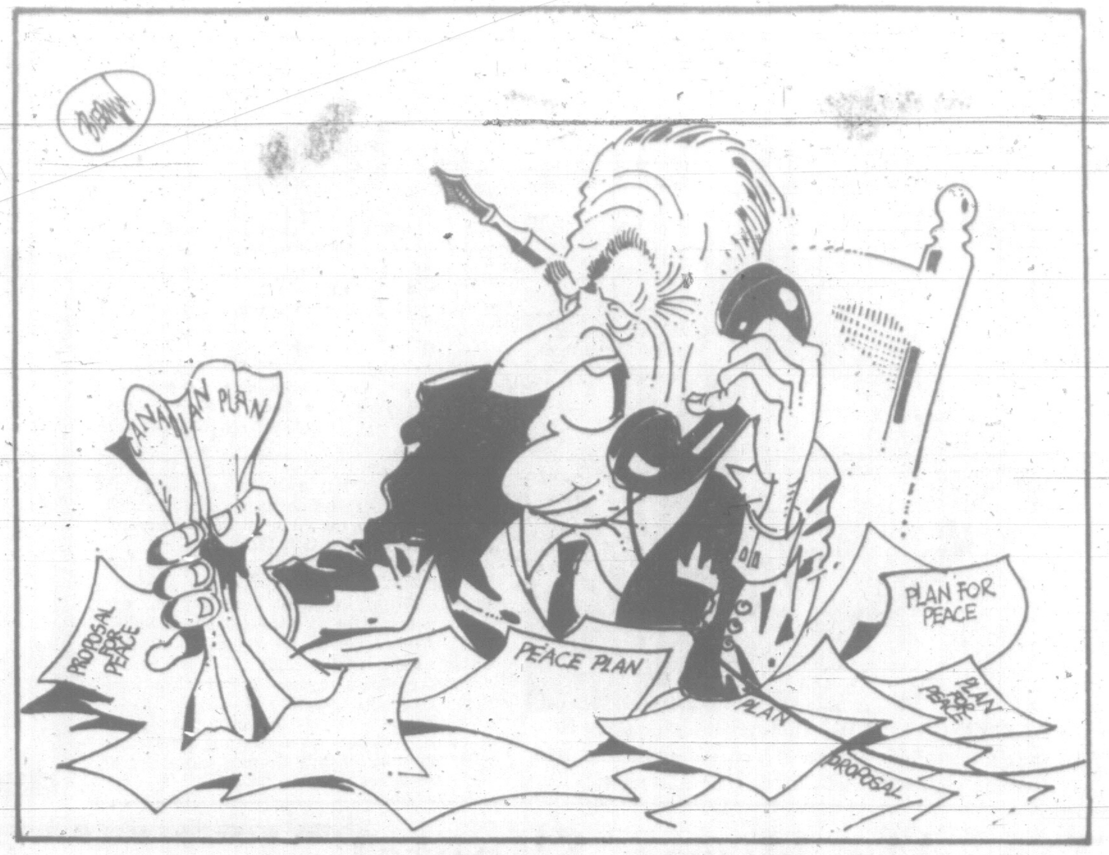
In his remarks to other chief executives, Chile's President Frei talked sound common sense.

"Either we take the road toward a humane and free society, or we fall inevitably into chaos, violence and totalitarian systems," the Chilean president declared.

He added the point that while the co-operation of the United States is essential to Latin American advance, no external aid can replace internal efforts to improve conditions. It is not the documents signed at Punta del Este that will bring about changes in the condition of the Latin American countries, he said, but "the will of our nations" to put the intent of the agreements into effect.

The searching comment was not one that could appropriately have been voiced by someone from outside Latin America. But coming from President Frei, who has earned a name for his efforts in liberal reform in the southern continent, the advice carries weight and should be palatable to his colleagues.

Internal combustion, he says in effect, must provide the real energy for progress in Latin America. Without that, outside assistance will fail.



"... Hello ... Humphrey? ... I've lost count ... is it our turn to accept or reject ... ?"

WITH MR. GORDON BACK

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Experiment Could Be Liberally Explosive

THAT sincere and tortured ideologist, Mr. Walter Gordon, said a few days ago that the Liberal party would be defeated at the next election if it were controlled by its right wing. Only its left wing could hope to win. This speech presumably was read by Mr. J. W. Pickersgill, an abler colleague, who regards ideology as unworkable in Canada and anti-Liberal. But has Mr. Gordon ever read Mr. Pickersgill's classic work on Liberalism? One is almost inclined to ask whether Mr. Gordon has ever met Mr. Pickersgill in the flesh. In print, at any rate, the two men are strangers.

Hutchison

Compare, for example, Mr. Gordon's latest attack on the right wing of Liberalism with Mr. Pickersgill's definitive book, The Liberal Party, wherein he writes as follows:

"It is fashionable now for political writers to ask whether the Liberal party is moving to the Right or Left, as though one of these directions marked reaction and the other progress. Historically the political terms Right and Left belong to those who regard politics as a class struggle. The Liberal party has never accepted the idea that conflict between classes is essential to political progress or that progress will result from class war . . . In the Liberal view progress is made by moving forward and not by moving sideways, either to Left or Right.

In moving to the Left and regarding politics as a kind of class war, Mr. Gordon collides with Mr. Pickersgill and most of the cabinet. But there is nothing new here. The collision has been under way, with repeated accident and bloodshed, since the government took office four years ago. That the cabinet should be divided between two wings is now taken almost as the norm of politics, along with a Conservative party divided between factions too numerous to count.

The only real news in Mr. Gordon's speech is the announcement that he has not re-entered the cabinet to remain silent, reasonable and non-ideological, as Mr. Pearson undoubtedly hoped. Already the strange theory that Mr. Gordon would be safer inside than outside is breaking down and the final results of this experiment should be interesting, probably explosive and perhaps [illegible]

Meanwhile thoughtful Canad[illegible]ke the present reader will see at once that Mr. Gordon doesn't really know the difference between Right and Left, or else he is not being frank with us.

In condemning the right wing of his party Mr. Gordon, a man of hereditary wealth, considers himself the chosen champion of the poor, the aged and unfortunate — a worthy cause approved by all decent men. But he does not tell these people what his policies would mean to them.

Two Divisions

Those policies fall into two rough divisions. On the one hand, he would continue to inflate the currency so far as inflation was needed, in his judgment, to stimulate the economy. On the other, he would restrict foreign goods and investment so far as restriction was needed to save the nation's sovereignty from foreigners. What he does not seem to realize, or at least does not admit, is that both policies would damage no one so much as the poor.

In one sense Mr. Gordon's policies belong nevertheless to the Left. They are authoritarian. They rely on the power of the state. They deny the first premises of Liberalism as laid down by Mr. Pickersgill, the party philosopher. And of course they are in all essentials the policies of the New Democratic party as expressed every day, and expressed much better, by Mr. Douglas. In another sense these policies are of the Right, since their chief victims would be the poor.

No one, I imagine will argue that inflation can help the poor, though it may sometimes help the members of strong labor unions who are able to keep their wages rising faster than the price level, as most Canadians cannot. Less understood is the effect of restrictions on foreign goods and investment—effects certain to be felt by all working people, strong and weak alike.

Accepts the Costs

Mr. Gordon, knows as well as anyone that a reduction in foreign imports will raise Canadian prices and a reduction in foreign investment will diminish, if it does not stop, the growth of Canada's living standards. As a sincere patriot he is prepared to accept these costs, believing that wealth is less important than the nation's independence. If he would admit the consequence of his policies he would be both logical and candid but he does not. He tells us that we can be richer if we are more isolated, that we can eat our cake and have it, too.

Whether he belongs to the Right or Left is not worth arguing in practical politics. He alone has raised these fine-spun ideological questions which will not interest his colleagues. What alone interests them is whether Mr. Gordon will push his new found ideology and class doctrine far enough to smash the government and the Liberal party. What will interest the ordinary Canadian, who cares little for government or party, is whether Mr. Gordon's policies will actually be adopted now, or under some future government.

It is safe, I think, to say that they will not be adopted by the Pearson government under a prime minister who recently said that national sovereignty had become almost obsolete in the modern world. They cannot be adopted anyhow without the resignations of men like Messrs. Sharp, Pickersgill, Hellyer, Winters and others who, in Mr. Gordon's imaginary filing system and demon list, form the hated Right.

More likely, in the nature of Canadian politics, some illogical but workable compromise will be invented to keep both the so-called Left and Right together. Even this familiar working arrangement will become impossible, however, if Mr. Gordon continues to attack the majority of the government in which he sits as a loyal member. His enmity is considered dangerous but his friendship is smothering. No government can long survive his brand of loyalty.

Of Small Account

The fate of the government will be of small account compared with the non-ideological question raised by Mr. Gordon. In a word, does he believe that a nation improverished by lack of capital and foreign trade, a nation whose savings are eroded by inflation, will be better able than a prosperous nation with sound money to resist American influence? If he believes this he has not read our history and will believe anything.

Stripped of all its fancy ideological trimmings, the central fact of the past and present is that Canada never considers union with its rich neighbor so long as it is doing well itself. But if Canada's living standard falls too far below that of the neighbor then and then only will union look attractive. This is not an issue of Right or Left. Mr. Gordon's current obsession. It is an issue of human nature which he seems unable to grasp. Perhaps someone should introduce him to Mr. Pickersgill's book, or even to Mr. Pickersgill.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

Storm Clouds Gather Over Southern Africa

ONCE again this past week, the UN spotlight focused on explosive race relations in southern Africa. Until there is some major tragedy — until, for example, there are more Sharpeville massacres — it may be hard to get outsiders excited about racial conflict that far from home. Even next door, race relations are getting to be a bit old hat. But the day will come when southern Africa explodes, and that day may come sooner rather than later. The UN majority is trying to fend off such a crisis — or more precisely, it is trying to precipitate a diplomatic crisis in the hope of fending off a human one.

Frye

This is not an easy task. Many diplomats, too, are bored with race problems in Africa, and many governments — including those in Washington and London — doubt the desirability of a diplomatic crisis. They are doing their utmost to prevent one.

The immediate confrontation at the UN, therefore, as the General Assembly begins a special three-week session is between black Africans who want a showdown between the UN and South Africa, and Americans and British who do not.

The principal subject on the formal Assembly agenda is South-West Africa. "South-West" is a barren but potentially rich semi-desert area which South Africa governed under a League of Nations mandate until last fall, when the UN calcelled the mandate on grounds of flagrant misrule.

The cancellation has taken effect only on paper. South Africa, has, in fact, continued to rule the territory. Now the Africans want the UN to enforce its ouster verdict.

Three alternate courses of action are before the Assembly:

1. An African plan, which calls for dispatch of a governing council to South-West Africa, complete with UN police force. When South Africa refuses it admission, as everyone expects, the Africans would demand UN sanctions, and the long-sought showdown would be at hand.

2. An Anglo-American approach, supported by Canada and Italy, among others, which boils down to an effort to negotiate an agreement with South Africa.

3. A Latin American compromise, which would seek to impose UN rule on the territory but would do so more gradually, with less immediate prospect of a confrontation between the UN and Pretoria.

Africans have nothing but scorn for the idea of attempting to negotiate with South Africa.

They regard negotiations as both futile and undesirable — futile, because they say South Africa would never turn over "South-West" to the UN, and undesirable because they want a head-on collision, leading to pressure for fundamental changes in South Africa's treatment of its non-whites at home. Without such changes, they believe there will be bloodshed.

Washington and London, for their part, are unwilling to join in pressure on South Africa at this time.

Pressure means a severance of trade, of capital investment, and of other forms of co-operation which benefit both South Africa and her trading partners.

In addition, the United States and Britain think — or profess to think — it might be possible to negotiate an agreement for the peaceful transfer of authority over South-West Africa.

South Africa has encouraged such hope. In recent months, since Prime Minister B. J. Vorster succeeded the assassinated H. F. Verwoerd, there have been minor modifications in South Africa's foreign policy in the direction of moderation.

One such move involved submission to the UN of data on South-West Africa, something Pretoria had been unwilling to do since the 1940s. It was not a formal acknowledgment of UN jurisdiction, but it was an indirect gesture suggesting some flexibility.

Another of Vorster's moves was to bid to give the Ovamboland tribes of South-West Africa, who constitute a majority of the non-white population in the territory, a form of limited self-rule under white tutelage.

This infuriated Africans at the UN, because it constituted defiance of UN efforts to give the whole territory independence. But it seemed to suggest a willingness to partition the territory.

Partition might be a possible basis for negotiation. South Afria might conceivably agree to split the territory with the UN, and the UN, as a practical matter, cannot obtain all of it unless Russia provides an invasion army — of which there is not the slightest sign.

But the Africans do not want a negotiation on the basis of partition, or on any other basis. They do not want to leave apartheid (extreme white supremacy) intact, unchallenged, in South Africa.

The UN, therefore, seems to be in for a donnybrook: a bitter clash between activist Africans, who control a majority of the votes, and cautious Anglo-Americans, who have the economic power to determine what happens in practice.

It willbe surprising if any tangible progress is made toward racial harmony in the process.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Those who like to wander along the roads and trails will perhaps have noticed that there are no new cones on the Douglas firs.

This is one of the off years in seed production, although last year was one of the best we have had for nearly a decade.

Last year almost every tree produced an abundance of seed, ensuring that the foresters will be able to produce seedlings for replanting in logged-off areas, and help re-establish our forests.

Normally this is the season when we are able to see the inch-long flaming red and yellow pistilate flowers, with the bright yellow pollen being carried on the wind to the staminate flowers that grow on the end of the twig. In the early stages they are almost indistinguishable from the needles.

The brown cones that one now sees hanging from the branches are last year's cones, some of which will hang on for a year or more.

Do you know that the triple-pronged bracts between the scales are found only on the Douglas Fir?

We notice that the Flowering Dogwood will not have so great a display of blooms as last year. Some trees that blossomed then have no blooms at all this year.

The maples, too, are only putting on a token show of flowers. Trees side by side show a great variation even when they are the same age.

If there is an over-abundance of fruit in one year there is bound to be a slacking off for a few years, as the seed production of almost all plants runs in a cycle.

This is nature's way of striking a long-term even balance which will in turn be reflected in the insect population — all of which makes sure of the survival of the species.

COMMON FEELING

English literature to my mind is a literature that is especially interesting for the Russians. I think that we and the English give a lot of interest towards tradition. To us tradition means a great deal, and English literature is very traditional, meaning that even writers of today, writers that are very far removed from, say, Fielding or Dickens or Thackeray, still have in them sometimes a subconscious feeling of tradition.

We're Coming Back

Over the Easter holidays I had the pleasure of visiting your beautiful city. I felt I had to write and commend all the people of Victoria on their courtesy and fine hospitality, expecially the bus drivers.

On our way to church on Easter Sunday we arrived one hour early. The bus driver suggested we take a round trip with him on his route, which proved very interesting as he showed us all the points of interest.

I am looking forward to visiting Victoria again, but in the summer time when I will be able to visit your beautiful Butchart Gardens. — Mrs. A. Sund, Edmonton, Alta.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

Progress in disarmament negotiations has been agonizingly slow over the past decade and except for the nuclear test ban treaty there have been few dramatic breakthroughs.

This week saw another typically timid step forward which in effect merely regained a retreating step taken last month.

At issue in the current talks is a proposed treaty to block the spread of nuclear weapons.

The U.S. and Russia were on the brink of agreement early last month in the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva when they were thwarted by some of the smaller powers.

Germany and Italy balked at signing a treaty that would cut them off from developments in peaceful use of atomic energy. The Geneva talks were then duly recessed to allow the U.S. time to try and bring its recalcitrant allies into line.

This week, after a meeting of the North Atlantic Council in Paris, the U.S. sent word to the Russians it is ready to start talking again.

The smaller powers did not give the U.S. carte blanche on the final wording of a non-proliferation treaty but an "understanding" was reached on the general principles of such a pact.

Hardest to convince were the Germans who also had reservations about the inspection machinery proposed in the treaty which they fear would invite "industrial espionage."

The Bonn government is smarting over repeated Soviet accusations that it is planning nuclear aggression and it was reported, the Germans want the U.S. to insist on a clause in the treaty specifically prohibiting such talk.

German Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger will have an opportunity next week to press his views on other western leaders.

President Johnson, Prime Minister Wilson, President de Gaulle and other top officials will travel to West Germany to attend the funeral of former chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who died this week at the age of 91. Officials said arrangements had been made for the leaders to hold summit talks as they did last at the funeral of President Kennedy in 1963.

Adenauer was chancellor for 14 years after taking over in 1949 at the age of 73 and is credited with leading his country from the ruins of the Second World War to its present prosperity.

This week followed the depressing pattern of many others in the Vietnam war—lots of talk about peace coupled with a further escalation in the fighting.

The peace talk was sparked by proposals made in the House of Commons last week by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, who suggested a joint pullback from the demilitarized zone as a first step leading to negotiations.

South Vietnam picked up the ball this week and offered to negotiate "at any time" with Hanoi on the proposal either directly or through a third party such as Canada.

Then the U.S. suggested creation of a 26-mile buffer strip between North and South Vietnam supervised by the International Control Commission.

Initial reaction from Hanoi was predictably cool, but Mr. Martin continued to pursue his plan with British leaders and UN Secretary-General U Thant, while Canada's top representative on the ICC was despatched to the North Vietnam capital.

Most agreed however that chances for any meaningful peace talks are as remote as ever and the U.S. provided fuel for their pessimism by bombing the major port city of Haiphong for the first time.

North Vietnam said more than 100 civilians were killed or wounded in the raids. The U.S. said it was aiming only at hydro-electric plants.

Weeks of political instability in Greece were capped by an army takeover prompted by King Constantine.

The king took the action to block a comeback by former premier George Pandreou, leader of the powerful Centre Union party and an outspoken foe of the monarchy.

Election of a new parliament had been set for May 28 and Papandreou planned to open his campaign Sunday. Military leaders, acting under the king's orders, now have suspended all political activity.

Michener's Appointment Wormwood for The Chief

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — It was a great homecoming for the new family that moved into the old house across the street from the Pearsons.

Visitors kept dropping in all afternoon. Actually, you'd have thought it was a funeral, from the frock coats and striped pants the men were wearing. And in a way maybe it was: the funeral of the notion that the viceregal office is incompatible with the free and easy spirit of Canadian democracy.

Waring

Two of the visitors were very special, but for different reasons.

There was Mike Pearson, famously pleased with his choice of his old friend and political foe, Roly Michener, as his new neighbor in Government House.

And there was John Diefenbaker, whose cool has been upset by Pearson's selection of a former Tory MP to whom at one time Dief would hardly give the time of day. In Diefenbaker's book, ex-MP Michener was listed among the Harknesses, the Fultons, the Heeses, the Balcers, the Sevignys and all the rest of that intrepid band who had dared question the omniscience of Dief the Chief. So the meeting must have been a strained one.

One can only guess how it went, but Dief is too experienced an actor after 27 years on the parliamentary stage to permit any gaffes on his part. Like it or not, he would tell himself, this man is now Her Majesty's representative. And he would act accordingly, for to him the monarchy is more than the framework of political power; it is a mysticism.

So he would creak an appropriate bow, and extend a hand and best wishes to the man who, a few short years ago, he had made Commons Speaker. The Speaker who had so angered Prime Minister Diefenbaker by his impartial rulings that Dief furiously shouted at him to "Sit down!" The man Dief had curtly dismissed in 1962 with only appointment to the privy council as a perfunctory acknowledgement of five years of outstanding service in the Commons chair. The man who, after 19 years' service as a Tory politician, had been left to make a living as best he could as a lawyer many years removed from the practice of his profession.

It was Premier Duff Roblin of Manitoba who provided a job for Michener: as chairman of a provincial royal commission on local government. And it was Pearson who provided Michener's next job, as high commissioner to India. And his next.

All these ghosts were in the big drawing room at Government House when His Excellency the Governor-General received the Right Honourable Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. But the Governor-General's smiling countenance and the bland mask of the visitor would not have revealed their presence.

What do you say in a circumstance like that? Congratulations, I knew you had it in you? Dief had wished and known no such thing. So probably he would stick to safe platitudes about the great significance of the office of governor-general—just as he did in the speech he made in the Commons when Prime Minister Pearson announced Michener's appointment.

Whimsically, His Excellency might have said, "I owe it all to you, Chief. If you'd appointed me to the bench in '62, I'd only be a provincial judge today. Thanks for everything."

But in Rideau Hall protocol insists that ghosts be not raised nor skeletons rattled. A pity, in a way. After 100 years and 20 GGs, the place must be the most haunted house in Canada.

Testing Time—Too Busy Now For the Other Distractions

By ART STOTT

A professor friend of mine this week offered a terse reply to the suggestion that things seemed to be settling down at the University of Victoria after recent weeks of fitful fever.

"Perhaps," he said, "we're too busy now."

Stott

The half dozen words do not say it all, but they supply a simple and effective frame within which to mount the picture of youth in ferment. The fact is that, as the rules are drawn, students at Gordon Head now are facing what might be called their moments of truth.

Whether the system is good, bad, faulty, lacking in merit or unfair, they have been putting down on paper some evidence of what they have learned during the year.

As a hopeless reactionary, I'm inclined to think the process has some value. It is frequently argued that education is a great deal more than the accumulation of facts. Of course it is. Some of us are hopeful enough to believe that it includes the stimulation of reasoning processes, the growth of judgment, the recognition of points of view. And we are realistic enough to accept the idea that some of the "facts" of earlier times have turned out to be fallacies, that recently acquired knowledge has disproved some formerly established theories.

But we are also inclined to the viewpoint that to reason things out, to form judgments, it is necessary to consider evidence—in this case some of the facts that an old-fashioned system of education set forth as building blocks in the learning process.

It is my hope, and my presumption, that as the students at the University of Victoria set down on paper answers to questions posed by their department heads they, the students, will bring into play and demonstrate the development of mental processes. The mere photographic memory that can reproduce an unreasoned facsimile of a text or lecture notes with sufficient accuracy to achieve a pass mark isn't my idea of the superlative in the cultivation of the mind. I want more than that from higher education here.

Furthermore, I appreciate the limitations of examinations. I've heard the arguments about the subjective nature of tests and the difficulties of the student, high-strung or phlegmatic, to communicate the answers under pressure at the time of testing. At the same time, I have certain reservations about abandoning the method and leaving it to an individual professor, or perhaps a particular group of professors, to determine the achievement, educationally, of the student.

I accept the principle that some professors have a gift which would make their judgment of a student's advancement superior to an appraisal of marks on an examination alone. I'm not so sure that all have the capacity. Whatever his vocation, a person can be good or bad at it—be he doctor, lawyer or Indian chief.

At any event, universities in British Columbia continue to follow the examination system. As I understand it, the policy is to determine, through written submissions to specific propositions, what the student has learned in certain subjects during the course of the year and how his abilities have developed to make this knowledge comprehensible to others the people who mark the papers.

A student knows this when he begins his term. If he wants to receive credits for his work and promotion he accepts the tests as a condition of acquiring them.

This certainly should not be all that a university gives to its students. But examination time does draw attention to one important purpose of attending a university—the acquisition of knowledge and the expansion of mental capacities to understand it. To some of us, this seems somewhat more important than sporadic ructions and demonstrations that could destroy a university's ability to serve that purpose.

The students seem to appreciate that fact. They're too busy now for the other distractions.

With few exceptions the dirty business of fighting in the jungles (above) and rice paddies of Vietnam is now left to the Americans. The Army of the Republic of Vietnam, for a variety of reasons outlined in the article below, is no longer an effective fighting force.

South Vietnam's Army Enfeebled

By PETER ARNETT

What role is the Vietnamese Army now playing in the war, compared with the U.S. military effort? A Pulitzer prize-winning correspondent discusses this question.

SAIGON — The South Vietnamese Army was created as an anti-Communist force 12 years ago amidst the wreckage of the French Indo-china empire. It never managed to mature, and now it lacks the strength, the unity and the morale to meet the challenge.

The huge U.S. military commitment to Vietnam has not had the effect of revitalizing the troops who once fought alongside other foreigners—the French union forces—on the same battlefields that Americans stalk now.

In much of the country, U.S. troops have replaced rather than reinforced Vietnamese. Statistically, the Vietnamese Army is fighting much less than it did two years ago when, in the months of crisis, American ground troops were rushed in to prop up Vietnam against a Communist military victory.

All the present Vietnamese generals fought on the French side in the Indo-China war, and the shadow of those days of defeat by the Communist peasant army still falls heavily in Saigon.

The stigma of having once belonged to a defeated army has never really been erased from the Vietnamese officer mentality. It becomes manifest at times in curt refusals of offers of American troops to help Vietnamese units under duress.

There are obvious reasons for the Vietnamese Army's weakness, its demoralization, its factionalism.

Vietnamese dead in the American period of the Indochina war are reaching toward 400,000. In the French period, 1,000,000 Vietnamese died.

Coups have exiled or sent into retirement many skilled senior military figures. The rapid expansion of the armed forces since 1963 has stretched the thin corps of leaders so that at least one-half the officers are probably inadequate.

Officers are selected purely on educational abilities and are often promoted for political loyalties.

The practice of appointing officers as province and district chiefs and to bureaucratic jobs in Saigon cuts down the available supply of leaders and offers opportunities for graft.

Korea Training

The Vietnamese Army was trained to resist a Korea-like invasion across the demilitarized zone, rather than the guerrilla conflict that developed. These tactics did not change despite the U.S. advice.

In the six Vietnamese airborne battalions, most of which trace their lineage to French paratrooper units at Dien Bien Phu, officers are expected to stand erect in battle to urge their men forward. This bravado resulted in 22 officer casualties in one battalion in one month.

But this spirit is rare among the 700,000-man Vietnamese armed forces deployed across the country. Many can remember how the North Vietnamese war machine subdued the French. They see that the North Vietnamese still take on the best forces the United States can muster.

Founders Of B.C.

Rev. Thomas Crosby

Rev. Thomas Crosby was a man of peace — until someone interrupted his worship. He proved his mettle once at Kitimat before the turn of the century where he was holding a service for his Indian followers.

A medicine man, jealous of Crosby, led a gang of his cohorts to the church, vowing they would stop the proceedings. Crosby went to the door, doffed his jacket and challenged the medicine man to enter, if he dared. He completely cowed him.

Crosby was born in Pickering, Yorkshire, England, in 1840 and went to Woodstock, Ontario, in 1856 when he joined the Methodist Church and became a lay preacher. He answered an appeal for missionaries to work in British Columbia in 1862. He arrived at Victoria where he worked as a laborer to repay his borrowed passage money. Then he served at Nanaimo Indian School where he mastered the Indian tongue within a year. Later he served at Chilliwack and in Victoria. He was ordained for his work despite his lack of formal theological training.

Crosby went back to Ontario on a speaking tour to raise funds for his mission. He married a minister's daughter and brought her West to share his work. He went to live among the Tsimpsheans of the north coast area and built a home and church at Port Simpson and travelled by canoe to the villages of the Skeena and the Naas and to the Queen Charlottes.

For 10 years he covered 2,000 miles a year until in 1882 he raised money in the east for a small power boat, the Glad Tidings, the first mission vessel on the coast. He was given the honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

His service, far from civilized comforts or medical aid cost the lives of three of his children — but it won thousands of the native people to his religion. His fame was also great among the people of this church in the southern settled areas and when he died in Vancouver in 1914, the whole province mourned him.

How to Use Expo Site When the Fair Is Over?

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA — While the last feverish preparations are being made for the opening next week of Expo 67, small groups of public-spirited Canadians are much more concerned with what will happen to the site of the fair after it closes, on Oct. 27.

Newman

They're considering how to implement several imaginative concepts for the permanent use of St. Helen's Island and its soaring buildings, motivated by their determination that some worthy legacy should survive Expo, both to mark its own success and to commemorate in a meaningful way the celebration of Canada's Centennial.

No definite commitments have been made, but the prime minister's office has been sounded out on several projects, and at least the idea of using the 986 acres of the Expo site (and the $222 millions already spent on it in capital expenditures) for some permanent public installation has been approved in principle.

City-Owned

The city of Montreal, which will actually own the site and most of the buildings after June, 1968, has also been engaged in these discussions, again without definite commitment, but with approving proddings to the initiators of the various projects involved.

The most exciting suggestion for use of the Expo site is that of Maurice Strong, head of the federal government's external aid office (and formerly a leading Montreal businessman) who is advocating that Canada erect on the St. Helen's Island complex an Institute for the Advancement of Man.

The institute would be a unique international institution. It would concentrate on attempting such intellectual breakthroughs as divining the basic causes of conflict among societies, studying the dynamics of nationalism, and the reasons underdeveloped societies don't nurture individual entrepreneurial skills.

As envisaged, it would quickly become one of the most exciting intellectual workshops in the world, with top experts in each academic discipline being recruited for specific projects.

One suggestion is that the institute might sponsor a system of annual awards (not unlike the Nobel prizes) to statesmen, social workers, scientists, and others who make the greatest contribution toward the advancement of man.

Seek Backing

This idea is being supported by the Centennial International Development Program, an affiliate of the Canadian Centennial Commission headed by Duncan Edmonds, a Winnipeg business executive and former executive assistant to External Affairs Minister Paul Martin. Approaches are expected to be made to the commissioners of the nations represented at Expo to find backing for the idea.

Although Canada would provide much of the institute's initial financing, its international character would call for substantial contributions from other countries as well. Suggestions have also been made that Prime Minister Pearson could promote the idea during his meetings with the many heads of state who will be visiting Ottawa this summer.

Another, separate, Montreal group is exploring a less ambitions version of this suggestion, which calls for the eventual establishment on the Expo site of a small but excellent international university. This idea originated in 1962 with John Parker, a Montreal school principal and city counsellor, and Max Bedford, a professor at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon.

They want to establish an institution of higher learning which would train international civil servants in such subjects as international law and economics. It would be the only universiy anywhere which operates outside any national framework of its own.

The Saskatchewan group has presented a private brief on the subject to Paul Martin, calling for an initial federal expenditure of $20 millions. (The brief suggests that the international university's first president be Lester Pearson.)

Also backing the idea of an international university on the Expo site is a group led by Professor Theodore Domaradski of the University of Montreal, who heads the World University Committee, a group established at the annual meeting of the Canadian Learned Societies in Sherbrooke, Quebec, last summer.

Stumbling Block

One of the main stumbling blocks to the idea of an international university is expected to be Quebec's attitude toward the establishment of a federally-financed university in the province. But Domaradski's group has made initial approaches to Marcel Masse, Quebec's minister of state for education, and claims to have received at least an interested audience.

Still another approach is being discussed by Roy Matthews, an economist who is research director of the Canadian-American Committee in Montreal.

He supports the grander idea of an institute for the advancement of man, but favors a slower and smaller start by the establishment, after the fair of an Institute of International Development in Expo's international trade centre. It would encompass the activities of existing international organizations now based in Montreal.

None of these proposals have been officially adopted by any of the governments involved in putting on Expo 67, but out of all the suggestions is bound to emerge some long-term project that will be as imaginative as Expo itself.

THE GALLUP POLL

Johnson Party Defectors Could Beat Him in 1968

By The American Institute of Public Opinion

If criticism of the president's Vietnam policies were largely limited to Republicans, Mr. Johnson could go into next year's election with some equanimity. But, with a growing segment of his own party critical, he may find himself in the same position as Senator Goldwater, who in 1964 was faced with a large defection of members of his own party.

President Johnson's explanations, of why U.S. forces are fighting in Vietnam, have left many questions still unanswered in the minds of voters. Moreover, the president has failed to persuade a majority of the citizens of the nation that he is handling the situation in the best manner.

The most recently recorded views on the president's handling of the Vietnam situation show the weight of opinion on the disapproval side. Nearly four Democrats in ten say they disapprove.

The question and results: "Do you approve or disapprove of the way Johnson is handling the situation in Vietnam?"

The proportion of Democrats who object to the president's handling of the Vietnam war has grown steadily over the last year. A survey conducted a year ago showed 18% of Democrats disapproving of the way Johnson was dealing with the situation, in contrast to 38% today.

The man from Beach Drive folded his napkin, lit a cigar and said to our Maitre d', Leslie: "And just think, no dishes to dry."

He said: "I hate dishes. I just get my pipe drawing and the paper opened and the wife says 'dishes.' The kids are grown up now, so there's no dodging it. And do you know, it takes just as many pots for two as it did when the family was home."

His wife said: "The family is home, George. The boys came just as I left to meet you. They were fixing their own meal when I left."

"Don't tell me . . ." said the man from Beach Dirve.

"I told them to leave the dishes in the sink," said his wife.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

The 7th Edition, a Victoria group which is undobtedly the most versatile band in town, are finally getting the recognition they deserve.

Placing second in last month's city wide Battle of the Bands, at the Tango, they showed the crowds how they can mix a taste-of-brass with all the chart-topping songs of today as well as being experts at the Tijuana slund that is currently so popular.

Formerly known as D. J. and The Syndicate, Vic Summerfeldt, guitar; Reg Young, bass; John McGrath, trumpet; Ted Keehn, saxophone; Scott Summerfeldt, organ; and drummer Dave Johl, are being sought for many teen dances as well as dances geared for the older set and are receiving rounds and rounds of applause whenever they take the stage.

Due to be released next week in Canada is a double LP Live at the Grooveyard.

Recorded at the Vancouver teen spot, The Grooveyard, the records feature seven of Vancouver's top bands.

Included are The Night Train Revue, Kentish Steele and the Shantelles, The Soul Unlimited, Jayson Hoover and The Epics, The Nocturnals, The Stags and The Schockers.

Retailing at $5.98 the records were ready a few weeks ago but some difficulty in the cover set things back a bit.

While on the Vancouver music scene, The Collectors, whose first recording effort has climbed ski-high on charts all over Canada and the United States, might just be coming to Victoria in the next little while with their hit, Looking At a Baby.

A promoter in town is busy trying to set a date for a dance and show with Collectors' Claire Lawrence, saxophone, organ, flute and vocals; Howie Vickers, organ and lead singer; Bill Henderson, guitar and vocals; Glenn Miller, bass and vocals; and drummer Ross Turney.

Leading Organist At Cathedral Wednesday Night

Christ Church Cathedral, where a tradition of presenting the finest of music has been maintained for many years, will host one of the world's major organists next Wednesday night.

Dr. Francis Jackson, organist of famous York Minster, will give a recital of sacred and secular works in the cathedral, starting at 8.

As usual with the cathedral, there is no admission charge, but a collection will be taken.

Dr. Jackson's distinguished career includes his appointment in 1960 as president of the Incorporated Association of Organists and to the advisory committee of the Central Council for the care of Churches in London, a body that deals with historic organs.

He has appeared in many cathedrals, has toured Europe and Canada and broadcasts frequently.

At the International Congress of Organists in 1957 in London, Dr. Jackson gave the opening recital in Westminster Abbey and in 1966 was one of the recitalists in a series commemorating the Abbey's 900th anniversary.

Jill Wins Rose Bowl In Music Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Two major trophies in the Greater Victoria Music Festival were carried off, Friday night, by a 19-year-old soprano and a 16-year-old pianist.

Jill Paver competed with five other A class winners for the coveted Rose Bowl, but Linn Hendry, having won all open classes in which she had competition, was unchallenged for the City of Victoria Medallion.

The Festival Highlights concert, ending the two week festival, was attended by a near-capacity audience at McPherson Playhouse.

It was an audience that was instantly won over as Penny Beavan opened the program with a poised, artistic unaccompanied performance of the folksong, Blow the Wind Southerly.

The exceptional quality was sustained, from that auspicious beginning, throughout the evening that concluded with Linn Hendry playing the Chopin F sharp minor Impromptu and some exquisite singing by the Amity Singers.

BURSARY AWARD

Cecil Cope named tenor Guiseppe Bianco as runner up to Miss Paver for the Rose Bowl, and presented him with a bursary prize.

Other competitors were Carla Levinson, Norma Selwood and Don Twine.

The opening address was given by Mayor Hugh Steven. Dr. J. F. K. English was chairman and Mrs. Norma Mickelson presided over the awards. Presentation were made by festival president H. C. O'Donnell.

Awards, mostly in the form of bursaries and some book prizes were made as follows: The Aldyen Hamber Chapter IODE bursary to solo accordionist Sheila Woolsey; Banff School of Fine Arts Scholarship, cellist George Kiraly; Congress of Strings Scholarship, Edward John Lees, violinist; the Edith Ellis bursary, Don Mayer, clarinetist.

The Canadina Broadcasting Corporation Award which includes a half-hour broadcast by the winning choir, went to the Amity Singers, conducted by Rodney Webster.

SIGHT PLAYING

A Hilda King Bursary for piano sight playing was won by Frances Crampton; the Royal Conservatory of Music Alumni Scholarship by Linn Hendry who also won the Victoria North Kiwanis junior bursary. The Bernard Rain Strings award went to Mary Chard.

Bill Dyson and Donna Dougan won the Royal Canadian College of Organists, Victoria Centre, awards for junior and senior organ classes respectively, and Kathryn Allison won the Audrey Johnson speech arts bursary.

Three bursaries went to Pat Patterson in piano classes. These were the Victoria School of Music, Xi Nu Chapter Beta Sigma Phi Sorority and Royal Schools of Music Association awards.

Victoria Musical Art Society bursaries went to Darien Hunt for violin and Rosemary Sims for voice. The North Kiwanis vocal bursary went to Miss Paver.

Registered Music Teachers' Association awards went to Wendy Stofer (two), David Sims and Irene Boese, and the School of Music string bursary to Nancy Meredith.

BOOK AWARDS

Henry Birks and Sons prize of a watch was awarded to pianist Jane Tsai and the Ethel James and J. Ingram Smith book awards to singers Frances Smith and Carla Levinson.

'On Monday Next' To Open Tonight

Several experienced and favorite local actors as well as some promising newcomers make up the cast of Victoria Theatre Guild's On Monday Next, the comedy which opens tonight at Langham Court Theatre.

Ted Gaskell directs the play. It is scheduled to play nightly through next week, Monday to Saturday.

Phillip King's light farce spoofs a theatrical company preparing for an opening, and playing the role of the producer is Richard Litt whose stage experience actually includes professional rep in England.

Mr. Litt has played many outstanding roles in this city, his last being as leader of the four knight-tempters in Murder in the Cathedral.

Connie Thomson is another whose role in the play reflects her background. Miss Thomson plays a veteran actress who has been in the theatre all her life.

As a matter of fact, Connie can scarcely recall a time when she was not occupied with the theatre, and finds it impossible to remember the many roles she has taken.

Stanley Bowles won an acting award in the 1965 Dominion Drama Festival, acted in the Disney film, The Wild Heart, and played several parts on the local stage.

GLAD TO SPEAK

Denise Wood who made her Theatre Guild debut in The Miracle Worker, with an unforgettable performance as blind Helen Keller, is rather glad she gets to speak in this one, considering she was a speech arts medalist for B.C. in 1965 and '66.

Roles in Cradle Song, Seven Nuns and Dead On Nine, have been Doreen Renton's preparation for a leading part in the current production.

Guild, Barbara Copeland and Alan Wyatt.

Curtain time for all performances is 8:30. All seats are reserved and tickets are available at Eaton's.

Coming out from their busy habitual haunts behind the scenes to make rare on-stage appearances are Daye Foster, Rene Larkin, Jim Cotton and Bud Bishop.

Completing the cast are two newcomers to the Theatre

Arion Club Songfest On May 6

Theme song with which members of the Arion Club have opened each rehearsal and concert for the past 75 years is Ecce Quam Bonum, Latin version of the first verse of Psalm 134.

In English it reads, "Behold how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Arion's 75 years of continuous activity is evidence of how well they have taken their motto to heart.

Canada's oldest established male chorus, the Arion Club will celebrate its 75th anniversary May 6 with a Centennial Festival of Song at Central Junior Secondary School.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

Assisting in the diamond jubilee celebration will be two troups which owe their existence to the parent club. From Eugene, Ore., will come the noted Gleemen and also featured will be the Rotary Boys' Choir.

The occasion also celebrates conductor Frank Tupman's 50th anniversary as a choral director.

Major works will include Handel's Let Their Celestial Concerts All Unite; a Manx folk tune, Fishermen's Night Hymn; Schubert's Sanctus; Bach's Now Let Every Tongue, and the Soldiers' Chorus from Faust.

Ted Boulden, associate conductor of the Arion Club, will also participate.

FANTASY OF IAN FLEMING

BOND, JAMES BOND

Who Will Remember the Name 007 in Years Ahead?

THE LIFE OF IAN FLEMING by John Pearson; Clarke, Irwin and Company, 1966; $7.25.

Reviewed by arjorie Menhenett

"James Bond was born at Goldeneye on the morning of the third Tuesday of January, 1952"—thus formally does John Pearson announce the birth at Ian Fleming's Jamaican estate of the most popular fictional hero of our time.

However, this announcement occurs over half way through the biography, and James Bond was the creation of a man then 43 years old; the secret agent sprang full-grown from Fleming's brain, but he had been developing to adulthood for most of Fleming's lifetime.

The character who emerged from Fleming's imagination on that January morning has always seemed to me precisely what his creator himself was wont at times to call him: "that cardboard dummy". And the milieu in which he moved, on which Ian Fleming lavished careful attention and research, was never more than the backdrop for essentially vicious escapades.

I have not found James Bond a satisfactory character.

But Bond was, from the very beginning, modelled after Fleming himself: not so much as he was, but as he would have liked to have been. As John Pearson puts it: "James Bond is not Ian Fleming, nor is he an Ian Fleming that ever was. He is Fleming's dream of a self that might have been—a tougher, stronger, more effective, duller, far less admirable character than the real Fleming."

In this biography Pearson has done with his hero what Fleming (an almost pathologically reserved man) never, perhaps, cared to do with Bond: supplied the background and the psychological stuffing that makes the subject come alive and turn into a human being.

Marjorie Menhenett teaches English at the University of Victoria.

Bond, of course, remains the "cardboard dummy" that he always was, but he is nevertheless an integral part of Fleming's makeup—the embodiment of his dreams of action and achievement. And just as an understanding of Fleming helps to explain the phenomenon of James Bond, so Bond helps to illuminate Fleming. They are parts of the same whole.

Ian Fleming's life had a kind of superficial glamour which did nothing to alleviate the pain and difficulty he had in coming to terms with the world. According to Pearson, "evidently from the start he had one of those natures for which the world is uncomfortable in whatever shape they find it." Born into an enormously wealthy family, Fleming's own share in the family fortune was entirely subject to his mother's approval of his activities; his father was killed in action in 1917, leaving Mrs. Fleming with the absolute power to disinherit any of their sons.

Living up to his mother's expectations did not come easily to Ian Fleming.

He had a very poor record at Eton and was equally unsuccessful in his one term at Sandhurst where his mother had entered him in hopes that the discipline of military life would bring him into line.

Only at the Forbes Dennis' school in the Tyrol did Ian Fleming finally begin to fulfil his intellectual promise, get to work, and largely make up for the college education he had missed.

Under the Forbes Dennis' guidance, Ian decided to aim for the Foreign Service.

However he failed to qualify in the entrance examinations, and turned instead to the first of a series of jobs which he was to take in the hope that in one of them he would find the freedom, the excitement, and the scope for his active imagination that he needed to sustain his interest and escape the boredom that always threatened to engulf him when he was subjected to routine.

As a sub-editor for Reuters and then in his six-year stint in finance, first as a merchant banker and then as a stockbroker, he sought without success the role which would suit his eccentric capabilities.

Only during the Second World War, as personal assistant to Admiral Godfrey in the Admiralty, did Ian Fleming ever find "the one career in which he was to be completely at home and in which every side of his complex and contradictory nature could be made the most of."

Located at the "nerve centre of the Naval Intelligence Division," Fleming "had a finger in virtually everything" and latitude, furthermore, to follow up his own imaginative ideas on how to deal with the enemy. The role pleased him. But the war ended and Fleming returned to the restless search for a civilian niche.

A similar yearning for the romantic, the exciting, characterized his private life. But here he was not even temporarily successful in realizing his fantasies. Fleming would have liked to have been a connoisseur of fine things—wine, food, books—but in point of fact, though his collection of first editions was a valuable one, he did little of the work of collecting himself, and soon came to regard his library merely as a capital investment. "He had his bright idea and moved on, as he always did."

As for his gastronomic pretensions, it is Pearson's opinion that Fleming "was never really interested in food and wine—it was the idea of the perfect meal that excited him."

He was a romantic without either the patience or the perseverence to realize his dreams. Only through James Bond did Fleming realize his fantasy of being a connoisseur.

The reality of Fleming's erotic life more nearly approached that which he attributed to his fictional hero.

Pearson defines him as "something more than a philanderer, something less than a rake"—"a womanizer who did not really like women." Fleming was enormously successful with women, but refused to recognize them as human beings they were "there to be slept with and then forgotten."

Like James Bond, though for different reasons, Fleming would not risk emotional involvement. It is Pearson's belief that "by refusing to accept that a mistress could also have a mind, he remained safe from love and all its uncomfortable complexities and safe from being found out."

He could maintain his mystery.

"For Ian Fleming was a mystery. Not even his best friends, male or female, felt that they knew or understood him. He had constructed for himself a "solitary dream world" and in order to preserve it "he would never risk revealing himself to another human being."

James Bond is the product of this dream-world. His world is Fleming's fantasy world. And this fact accounts, Pearson believes, for what he calls the "odd, airless landscape of the Bond novels, "for their oddly claustrophic atmosphere": "all the emotions are Fleming's emotions, the fads and beliefs are his fads and beliefs, and even when he bases his action on a genuine incident from real life it has a habit of becoming so overlaid by the fantasies with which he enhanced ordinary existence that it too becomes indelibly his own." Bond is a dream figure, in a dream world.

In assessing this biography, the question which must be asked is whether Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond, merits Pearson's careful research, this beautifully-done book? And this becomes, essentially, the question: does James Bond merit them?

From one point of view it seems to me, the answer must be no. Ian Fleming is dead.

James Bond is an ephemeral phenomenon. In 20 years, or 50, his name must be totally forgotten.

But this is not the whole story. Today, over much of the English-speaking world, James Bond is still a by-word. His appeal to millions of readers warrants investigation. And Pearson's biography serves the very worthwhile purpose of explaining how he came to be: born of the life and dreams of a man who grew up between the world wars, the stunted shoot of a particular social class at a particular moment in time.

Bond is the creation of a man who was alienated from the values of his society and found no other, of a dilettante who committed himself to nothing but found his only happy role in the challenge offered his ingenuity in time of war, of a man who finally looked at himself in the mirror and created a hero who has appealed to millions: 007 (licence to kill).

James Bond is, says Pearson, "the ideal Mitty figure for Fleming and for all of us who watch and want but do not do." The judgment has an uncomfortable validity.

LOOKING AT BOOKS

By Guess and By Gosh It's Bard's Birthday

By JOAN COLDWELL

Every year at this time a service is held in London's Southwark Cathedral to celebrate Shakespeare's birthday and flags fly in Stratford-on-Avon.

COLDWELL

Actually it is only by guesswork, with a touch of sentimentality that the 23rd of April has been proclaimed the day Shakespeare was born. The Stratford parish register tells only that he was baptized on the 26th of April, 1564. But it records the day of his death, 52 years later, as the 23rd of April and, this being St. George's Day, what more neat and economical arrangement? Patron saint of England and patron writer sharing the festivities.

And why Southwark Cathedral?

It was of course in the diocese of Southwark, more specifically in the part delightfully named the Liberty of the Clink, that Shakespeare spent much of his working life, writing plays for the Globe Theatre on the south bank of the Thames.

Stratford has managed to preserve little oases of Elizabethan atmosphere in its old buildings and uncluttered riverbank, but Southwark isn't exactly a tourist's paradise.

You can go on a guided walking tour, down between the gasworks and the brewery, to see the plaque marking the spot where the Globe once stood. In the cathedral there is, as well as a modern monument to the dramatist, the grave of a younger brother "Edmund Shakespeare, a player."

But there's one little bit of sixteenth century atmosphere in Southwark. The old George Inn has an open courtyard, of the sort in which travelling actors used to perform, and a surrounding gallery for spectators. Here every summer a local company stages a couple of Shakespeare's plays, providing an unusual experience for theatregoers.

Two recent books offer new angles for the stay-at-home Shakespeare enthusiast. Both are far removed from the usual critical analyses and there is nothing the least bit pedantic about them.

The first, it is true, is the work of a scholar, one-time head of the department of English at the University of Saskatchewan and then professor at Aberdeen. And the book is based on an academic interest in a kind of character-sketch popular in the seventeenth century, a short piece known simply as a "character."

John Lothian prefaces his Shakespeare's Charactery with an essay describing some of the usual forms of "characters" and he claims that Shakespeare incorporated this type of thumb-nail sketch into his plays, often superfluously, well before the vogue of charactery started. He quotes from the main character-writers, Earle, Overbury and Hall, to show that their work often imitated Shakespeare's descriptions.

Professor Lothian's book is an anthology of over 400 brief character sketches from the plays, grouped under such headings as "Professions and Trades," "Villains" and "Social Types." While a scholar might question whether some of these selections bear any resemblance at all to the conventional "characters" and might quibble about counting any of them dramatically unnecessary, the general reader will find this a pleasant browsing book, placing familiar and not-so-familiar passages in a novel arrangement.

An actor's approach to Shakespeare is given in a book by William Redfield, the Guildenstern of the 1964 Gielgud-Burton Hamlet. (This was the production made notorious by the Burton-Taylor romance: "crowds of two thousand or more . . . gathered nightly outside the theatre . . . This was stargazing at its most intense . . .")

During the period from the casting of the play to rehearsals and previews in Toronto and Boston and then to the New York opening, Redfield wrote a series of letters to a friend describing the progress of the production. These, much expanded and edited, form Letters From An Actor.

The idea of this book is excellent. A record of an entire production, with its problems of interpretation and staging discussed by two of our greatest actors, and written by one who is himself a fine actor, could be a stupendous contribution to our understanding both of Shakespeare and the theatre.

But Redfield threw away an opportunity to create something of real worth; I can't help feeling that he used the notoriety of this production to sell a book he might just as well have written on any other occasion—a book of his own observations on the acting profession and of theatrical anecdotes, too often what he himself calls: "High camp among the pros."

Consequently this becomes another amusing book for browsing. Dip into it for entertaining and admittedly apocryphal anecdotes about Larry (Olivier), Rafe (Richardson) and "dear old John G." If one overlooks a lot of trivia and silly schoolboy comments (on Polonius' eavesdropping: "who picks up the eaves, Polonius drops?) one finds a few worthwhile passages on different acting methods and an occasional interesting remark about Hamlet.

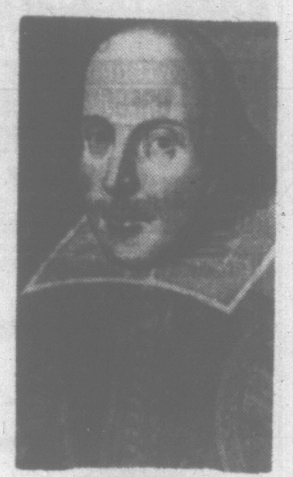
No Doctrine Plowing In Shakespeare Book

SHAKESPEARE AND SOCIETY, by Terence Eagleton; Clarke Irwin, 1967. $5.50

Reviewed by M. D. Faber



SHAKESPEARE . . . his day

Mr. Eagleton's brief and pleasantly written volume strives to explore in Shakespeare what a good many individuals today would regard as the fundamental human problem, namely, how does one reconcile his private self with his public self, his inner man with his outer man, the demands of society with the demands of the self-concept?

To be responsible, indeed to be whole, one must be social; but being social has its dangers, for it can and often does lead to the stifling of the "true" or "spontaneous" self.

One becomes a puppet, a tool, a Rosencrantz, an Osric.

Again, because the self is not "objective," "an object," because it is constantly changing in the face of its encounters with other selves, it is perepetually involved in working out a kind of modus vivendi with the relatively fixed values of the society in which it exists.

For example, Troilus regards society as hostile and repressive, threatening authentic fulfillment. Yet a man cannot totally escape from society; thus Troilus tries to act in society without ever seeing himself objectified in an action or social role.

His situation is inherently tragic. Mr. Eagleton examines the chief characters of Hamlet, Measure for Measure, Coriolanus, Antony and Cleopatra, Macbeth, The Winter's Tale, and The Tempest in similar terms.

One of the nice things about Mr. Eagleton's contribution is that it is remarkably free of pedantry. The reader is not asked to plow through dreary masses of Tudor "social doctrine" or to interpret timeless characters in the light of Elizabethan lore, the usual formulae for placing Shakespeare's creations on broad backgrounds.

Mr. Eagleton, who has somehow escaped the deadening influence of current Shakespearean scholarship, goes straight to the playwright for his "data". It is partly for this reason that his book is effective. By contrast, the conclusion of Mr. Eagleton's volume is something of a disappointment. Attempting to discuss the problem of spontaneous self versus society's demands as it applies to the individual living in the 20th century, the author relies almost exclusively upon the thought of Arnold, Mill, Browning, Carlyle, and other Victorians, instead of upon those of our contemporaries who have really brought home this problem to us: Sartre, Binswanger, Erikson, Marcel, May.

I wonder if Mr. Eagleton realizes the degree to which he is indebted to these authors (he uses the word "existential" again and again)? At any rate, Shakespeare and Society is worth the price and the time. I suspect it will inspire further existential-psychological examinations of Shakespeare, and that is good.

Sensible Look At 'Growing Up'

TIME TO GROW UP, by H. W. Tame, Macmillan of Canada. $2.25.

Reviewed by Judith Terry

A book for children explaining sex must be incredibly difficult to write, since the moral and psychological aspects of sex are impossible to encompass in the straightforward and simple style required.

In Time To Grow Up H. W. Tame takes what is perhaps the best way out. He concerns himself merely with the physical, and as regards these other issues contents himself with the unexceptionable remark that "although he (the adolescent boy) is capable of sexual intercourse, a restraint is imposed upon him by the society in which he lives."

Parents and teachers should then be able to promote the discussion and thought that the book will inevitably give rise to.

This is a sensible book.

It contains much informative material that is relevant but not central to the subject. This has the distinct advantage that the sexual act itself, by being set amongst details of a baby's growth in the womb, simple explanations of genes and chromosomes and other such, does not become disproportionately important.

The disadvantage of the book is that it is geared to the needs of English children. Tame makes reference to the "chemist's shop," the "primary school"; the illustrations (which are uniformly lifeless) show the boys playing football, the girls dressed in gym-slips, the teacher wearing a gown.

It is a pity that the book could not have been adapted slightly to make it more relevant to the needs, and closer to the experience, of the Canadian child of 10-12.

Anthology

What needs my Shakespeare for his honoured bones,
The labour of an age in piled stones,
Or that his hallowed relics should be hid
Under a star-y pointed Pyramid?
Dear son of memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?
Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long Monument.
For whilst to th' shame of slow-endeavouring art,
Thy easy numbers flow, and that each heart
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued Book,
Those Delphic lines with deep impression took,
Then thou our fancy of itself bereaving,
Dost make us marble with too much conceiving;
And so sepulchered in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

—John Milton, 1608-1674.

Solo Trip In Sailboat Recalled

TINKERBELLE, by Robert Manry; published by Fitzhenry and Waterside Ltd., Scarborough, Ont., 1966; price $7.50; 254 pages. Illustrated (photographs and sketches).

A former reporter, then working on the copy desk of The Cleveland Plain Dealer, recounts his adventure when, as solo pilot, he brought his 13½-foot, single-masted, 30-year-old sailboat across the Atalantic.

Alone and unaided, relying solely upon her canvas and with her only "auxiliary power" a pair of oars, he sailed Tinkerbelle from Falmouth, Mass., to Falmouth, Cornwall, in 78 days.

This bold adventurer tell his story in minute detail, from his family, employers, co-idea, to the triumphant arrival of Tinkerbelle at journey's end amid the wildly enthusiastic welcome from the Cornish populace.

He describes the considerable reconditioning and additions he made to the structure of his original $160 purchase; the loyal support of his family, employers, co-workers and friends; finally the incredibly daring, nightmarish but all too real adventure itself—alone on the vast ocean in this tiny, but seaworthy and self-bailing cockleshell.

The woman I am
is not what you see
I'm not just bones and crockery

the woman I am
knew love and hate hating the chains that parents make longing that love

might set men free
yet hold them fast
in loyalty

the woman I am
is not what you see move over love
make room for me

AGREEMENT VERY TENTATIVE

Not Buddy-Buddy Yet on Buttle Lake

The battle of Buttle Lake is far from over.

Lawyer Anthony Sarich indicated this today in the wake of an announcement Friday by Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston.

Mr. Williston said only the final wording of a settlement in the long-standing dispute between Western Mines and Greater Campbell River Water Board remains to be worked out.

His statement hinted that the question of mine tailing being dumped in the lake would be settled out of court.

But Mr. Sarich, who is representing the water board, said today: "It would be premature to say we've reached an agreement.

"Everything isn't as buddy-buddy as it appears on the surface.

"The government is trying to force terms neither party can afford to accept."

He said the present court action on behalf of the board, to prevent dumping of tailings, will not be dropped unless a better agreement can be reached.

Said Mr. Sarich: "I went over the tentative agreement with water board members after they returned from the talks in Victoria.

"After I pointed out some of the legal aspects, they were not quite so happy with it."

The tentative agreement calls for the issuing of temporary permits for Western Mines to operate; an independent study by Toronto consulting engineer Dr. George Langford; a public hearing by the Pollution Control Board, and a binding decision by the board.

Said Mr. Sarich: "I'm not sure they (the government) can effect it. It would be very difficult to follow the settlement and stay within the act (the Pollution Control Act).

"We will be working on it this weekend and should know by about Tuesday whether or not this settlement is going to work."

Married Man Convicted Of Assault

DUNCAN—Joseph Raymond Bienvenu, 28, of Chemainus, was remanded for two weeks on $2,000 bail Friday after being convicted of indecent assault.

Magistrate Lance Heard asked for a pre-sentence report on the married man who has a four-year-old daughter.

The 15-year-old girl in the case told the court she was accosted by the accused in downtown Duncan. He asked her to baby-sit for him because his wife was ill in hospital.

The girl said she first said "no" but changed her mind.

He drove her to a gravel pit. When she asked where his house was accused said he was single and needed love.

The girl said Bienvenu grabbed her when she tried to get out of his car, touched her body but when she got out he persuaded her to get back in and he drove her back to Duncan.

In a statement to RCMP, accused said the girl walked past his car several times. She accepted a ride. He asked for a kiss twice and put his arm around her.

When she backed away and got out of the car he told her to get back in and he would drive her into Duncan.

Magistrate Heard said while the girl did not suffer a great deal she did not agree to the advances by Bienvenu and was lured into his car.

Hydro Upsets Farm Work

Farmers in the Cowichan Valley will complain to B.C. Hydro about the trouble being caused by workmen laying power lines across their land.

The problem was brought up at a directors' meeting of Cowichan Agricultural Society.

Farmer John Van Eyk said 40 fence posts had been removed by workmen and he could no longer keep his dairy herd in the pastures.

In addition, debris has been left on the fields, local subcontractors take no notice of what he says, and no one at the B.C. Hydro office has taken notice of his complaints.

Directors agreed they had had similar experiences.

The Hydro authority is laying a line from Stratfords substation at Crofton to the Trans-Canada Highway.

Islanders' Mill Rate Goes Down

GANGES — The Gulf Islands mill rate was struck at 25.82 Friday — making it only the third area in B.C. where the rate is down from last year.

The 1967 rate is .1 mill lower than last year and 4.4 mills below the provincial average.

The district's gross budget is $474,441, of which local residents have to pay $423,798 and the provincial government $44,885.

Assessment of the district has increased to $16,410,790 from $14,955,436 in 1966.

Park Completed

Formal classification of 265 acres of sandy beach property south of Parksville as the class A Rathtrevor Beach Provincial Park was made by the cabinet Friday, completing the process under which the provincial parks branch assembled the land through purchases and trades over a lengthy period of time.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Bank Issues Hold Interest

By DOUGLAS ADAMSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Banks made substantial gains this week in Canadian stock markets, as investors anticipated the rich getting richer in the wake of new freedom allowed under a revised Bank Act coming into effect May 1.

Latest announcements included Bank of Nova Scotia's announcement that it will have a 4¼-per-cent new non-chequing account and Royal reporting a new 4½-per-cent "bonus savings savings account" with interest calculated and payable half-yearly but without chequing privileges.

After the markets closed, Toronto-Dominion confirmed it will be in the act with a premium savings account paying 4½-per-cent and the interest rate on present savings accounts will be increased from 3 to 3½ per cent.

These announcements follow generally similar plans reported earlier this year by the Mercantile Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal and the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Montreal rose 1¾ to 68¾, Nova Scotia and Toronto-Dominion ⅝ each to 76¾ and 71¼, Royal 1⅜ to 81¾ and Imperial-Commerce declined ¼ to 71½.

SUSTAIN RISE

Steels held to an upward road after spurting ahead early in the week.

Stelco advanced 1½ to 24½, Dominion Bridge 2⅛ to a 1967 high of 21, Dofasco 1⅞ to 23¾ and Algoma Steel 1¼ to 25¼.

Dosco, which reported a $1,923,333 loss for 1966, fell ½ to 8¼.

Oils moved up as they have done since February. Pacific Petroleum rose 1⅛ to a 1967 high of 14 following a 54-per-cent increase in first-quarter profits and the announcement that two oil well discoveries had been drilled during the winter in northwestern Alberta.

Texaco climbed 2⅝ to a 1967 high of 27⅞. The company reported an increase in first-quarter earnings for 1967 of 18.9 per cent over the same period in 1966.

Imperial Oil followed suit with a rise of ⅞ to 59, Hudson's Bay rose 1 to 35¾ and Husky remained unchanged at 14½.

LEAD METALS

Uranium issues continued to dominate base-metal activity with Denison up 2½ to 64¼, Rio Algom ⅝ to 29⅞, Roman Corp. 1 to 17½ and Preston 1½ to 17¾.

Speculative activity was light. On index, industrials rose 2.90 to 166.47, western oils .88 to 160.91, base metals 2.26 to 93.55 and golds declined .73 to 151.10. Volume was 14,701,914 compared with 12,585,323 traded last week.

At Montreal, industrials rose 3.08 to 164.75, utilities .86 to 147.16, banks 1.47 to 134.36 and papers 1.69 to 123.73. Volume was 3,673,036 compared with 4,053,161 last week.

B.C. Forest Earnings Show Gain

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. said in its first quarter report Wednesday that the most important problems facing the company are costs and obtaining adequate prices for its products.

Alex D. Hamilton, president, said 80 per cent of the company's products are sold outside Canada and that world conditions directly affect sales.

"With the evident slowdown in the economies of Canada and the U.S., and with the uncertainty that exists in the business environment in the U.K. and West Germany, it is unlikely that we can anticipate any major over-all upward move in our selling prices."

In his report, he said the company's pre-tax earnings for the first quarter ending March 31 were $3,401,000, up from $2,966,000 for the same period in 1966.

He said, however, that an increase to 21 per cent from two per cent in the effective tax cut per-share earnings which were 69 cents, up from 67 cents a year ago.

Sales increased to $26,594,000 from $23,964,000.

Mr. Hamilton announced that the company plans a $2,500,000 woodroom at its Crofton mill which will improve the pulp and paper mill's capacity to handle small logs.

LUCE WILL TAKE POST WITH CON EDISON SOON

NEW YORK (CP) — Charles F. Luce is to become chairman and chief executive officer of Consolidated Edison Co. of New York Inc. some time this summer after completing current assignment as federal interior undersecretary.

The board of the big New York City electric and gas utility approved his selection March 28. Charles E. Ebie, 66, who the 49-year-old Luce succeeds, will become chairman of the executive committee. John V. Cleary, 65, will remain as president of the utility, which has nearly 4,000,000 customers.

IN CANADA

Productivity Growth Slips

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's productivity growth has slipped behind that of other nations, Herbert Smith, president of General Electric Co. Ltd., told the company's annual meeting Friday.

He said that so far in 1967, 16 manufacturing plants in Ontario and three in Quebec have been shut down by strikes.

The problems of negotiations were "rooted in the belief of many of our employees that guidelines for wage settlements had been established by the federal government, and that they were entitled to wage increases whether or not these increases were justified by economic facts in our industry."

Mr. Smith said union representatives often agreed to settle but their members rejected these agreements.

"It is simply not possible to negotiate with mass members of a union."

CAN RECOVER

The Canadian economy can recover from current excessive wage settlements if the next round of government wage and salary settlements "is rational and fully explained so that the rationale can be applied by industry generally."

Mr. Smith told the meeting that for the fifth consecutive year General Electric achieved record sales in goods and services in Canada and abroad. In 1966 they totalled $415,879,054, an increase of 11 per cent over 1965.

He said the heavy water plant which is to be built at Port Hawkesbury on Cape Breton Island in Nova Scotia will begin production in mid-1969 to supply 5,000 tons of heavy water over a maximum delivery period of 12½ years at an average price of $18.50 a pound.

"Planning and design work on the plant has proceeded on schedule and work at the site has been started."

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Foreign steel companies are dumping their products at unfair prices in Canada, the chairman and president of Algoma Steel Corp. said Thursday.

David S. Holbrook called for sharper teeth in Canada's anti-dumping provisions and said enforcement of the present regulations is inadequate.

He said more than 1,250,000 tons of rolled steel products were imported into Canada last year.

The imported steel is selling "at prices substantially below prices prevailing for Canadian-produced steel and very often at prices substantially below the selling prices in the foreign country of origin," he said.

Scott Paper Earnings Set Record

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) —Scott Paper Co. Friday reported record sales and earnings for the first quarter of 1967.

President Arthur F. Armstrong told the annual meeting at the company's paper plant here that sales hit $7,956,246, an increase of more than 20 per cent over the same quarter in 1966.

He said part of the increase was due to higher prices on some products.

He did not announce earning figures but said they were at record levels.

Scott Paper reported earlier its 1966 profits were $1,300,000 or $1.70 a share.

Former Prudential Head Free on Bail

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Benoit Brien, 51, former president of the collapsed Prudential Finance Corp., was released from jail Friday when friends put up $25,000 property bail.

Brien was arrested Monday night on two charges of fraud and four of theft. The bail was set at a court appearance Tuesday when Brien's case was remanded to April 25.

HOW SAFE IS A MORTGAGE?

Whereas most investments risk a loss on the first dollar's depreciation of the value of the security, a mortgage can retain its full value IN SPITE OF A DEPRECIATION OF the property secured. Therefore the LOWER percentage mortgaged against a property, the lesser the projected risk.
But real estate is considered so basically sound by many lending institutions that 75%, 83% and as high as 87½% MORTGAGES are given. Their projected confidence in real estate is further manifested by their low monthly repayment requirements allowing 15, 20 and 25 years to repay.
We in Victoria Mortgage Corporation agree. Property values have increased steadily for 30 years, and will continue to do so for another 30 years, especially in this paradise, BRITISH COLUMBIA, where people are coming from all over the world. We, therefore, at times make higher percentage loans on the type of security WE PREFER.
NEVETHELESS, every $3,300 invested by Victoria Mortgage is secured by an average of $10,000 prime real estate security.
We feel fairly confident about it. Our investors seem to feel the same way.
5-year Debentures pay 7½%—One year 7%.
There is no acquisition cost.

Our "Atrium" house, built for people who demand PRIVACY. Entered through the "Atrium" or garden court and the foyer, the private living room will stun you with its beauty. The end wall has a fireplace that soars to the high, open ceiling—and the amber, stained glass panels effect a sunny, warm appearance even on wet, dull days. One wall of this room looks out onto the easily-kept court. The large, 13-foot dining room is elevated one half level above the living room and also looks into the atrium. The kitchen has dining space and a pantry. The three bedrooms (with an optional fourth) are a good size. It has a 4-piece bathroom, 2-piece bathroom and sunroom, basement and roughed-in rumpus room. On a large Gordon Head, cul-de-sac lot, this N.H.A.-financed house costs $22,500. On a 10-mile Point lot, an enlarged edition of the atrium house costs $26,750. We will also build on your lot. Built by Tech Designed Homes. Designed by Byron Price, Canadian Housing Design Council Award winner

We also have some fine contemporary and colonial N.H.A. homes to be built on good lots in Sidney, with low down payments and low monthly payments. Use the $500 B.C. Government grant as part of your down payment.

You must act now—lots are getting scarce and prices are climbing. Byron Price, 385-2458, 1314 Quadra Street.

WITNESSES MISSING

Stock Swindle Probe Erupts

NEW YORK (WP)—An investigation into a multi-million dollar stock market price-rigging swindle erupted into public Friday.

The American Stock Exchange, which has been probing into evidence of a Chicago-based rigging scheme that used at least six of its issues, announced it has hired an outside law firm to assist in the investigation.

In a letter sent to members, the exchange said "the pattern which is emerging from the investigation indicates that certain customers, acting in concert, were taking sizable positions in a small number of securities. Other members of the public were then urged to purchase the stocks on the strength of merger prospects, favorable earnings forecasts or technical considerations. As public interest was aroused and prices rose, the original group was in a position to sell at substantial profits," the letter said.

The exchange named thef irm of Paul, Weiss, Rifking, Wharton and Garrison to assist in the investigation.

UNDER WRAPS

The probe, which has been going on under wraps for several months—along with a concurrent investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, the U.S. attorney-general's office and a federal grand jury here—has so far uncovered evidence of price manipulation in shares of Alloys Unlimited, Rowland Products, Savoy Industries, Pentron Electronics, Hercules Galion Products and Leece-Neville Co. Investigators say the companies themselves—as well as the firm through which the swindle operated— were apparently unaware of the manipulations.

The scheme first came to light in May, 1966, when a Cleveland-based brokerage firm, members of the Midwest Stock Exchange, notified the MSE that some of its clients could not pay for their purchase of Rowland Products. A check of the firm's books showed that the same clients had been actively trading in other sotcks whose price movements were being investigated by the American Stock Exchange.

From there, arms of the probe have reached into some of Wall Street's biggest and most prestigious firms. It has also reached high into Chicago crime syndicates and investigators suspect that at least one witness being sought by the grand jury may have been murdered to prevent him from testifying. Two other witnesses are understood to be missing.

Industrial Disputes Took Toll

Final figures have confirmed what everyone thought—last year was the worst since the Second World War for strikes and lockouts.

In 1966, there were more industrial disputes, more people involved and more working time lost than in any year since 1945.

Only one previous year exceeded 1966 in the time lost as a percentage of total time worked.

National figures from the federal labor department shows there were 624 strikes or lockouts involving 411,482 workers and lost time of 5,071,170 working days.

This represented 0.33 per cent of total time worked, a figure exceeded only in 1946 when it was 0.54 per cent.

The previous high for industrial disputes was in 1965 when there were 501. For workers involved it was 192,063 in 1950, and for lost time it was 4,515,030 days in 1946.

The figures cover strikes and lockouts amounting to 10 or more working days and the number of workers includes all those reported on strike or locked out, whether or not they belonged to the union directly involved in the disputes leading to the work stoppages.

Workers indirectly affected, such as those laid off as a result of work stoppages, are not included.

JAPANESE FINANCIERS GRAB CONTROL

TOKYO (WP) — Moving with complete surprise and lightning speed, the Japanese financiers of the Tokyo Hilton Friday seized control of the hotel, declared the contract with Hilton void, and renamed the Tokyo landmark the Hotel Japan-Tokyu.

Noboru Goto, a director of the Tokyu hotel chain, walked into the hotel while Anthony Clegg, the Hilton manager, was at a meeting, and installed a Japanese manager in Clegg's office. When Clegg returned, he was barred from his office and forced to retire to his suite, where he says he will stay until ejected. Clegg was told that if he left the hotel he would not be allowed to return.

Ford Expects Sales Drop

CHICAGO (AP) — President Arjay Miller of the ord Motor Co. told reporters Friday sales for the first quarter will be lower than those of the opening quarter of 1966.

He also expressed the opinion that both sales and earnings for the full year 1967 will not be up to 1966 levels. He did not elaborate on the decreases.

Miller told a press conference, however, that retail orders have shown a spring upturn.

He attributed the expected first-quarter decline to uncertainties over Vietnam, tight money and other economic factors.

Profits Increase By Granby Mining

VANCOUVER (CP)—Net profit of Granby Mining Co. Ltd. increased $141,000 in the first quarter of 1967, company president L. T. Postle told the annual meeting.

Earnings were $438,000 (92 cents a share) compared with $297,000 (63 cents) for January-March, 1966.

HAACK NEW PRESIDENT OF STOCK EXCHANGE?

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert W. Haack, president of the National Association of Security Dealers, will succeed G. Keith Funston as president of the New York Stock Exchange, it was reported Friday.

Dow-Jones news service said the exchange board of governors selected Haack Thursday and that the appointment will be announced Monday.

The exchange has been searching for a president since last fall when Funston announced he would retire when his contract expires Sept. 10.

Reuther Renews AFL-CIO Blast

DETROIT (AP) — Charging that the AFL-CIO has developed an "acute case of hardening of the arteries," Pesident Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers today asked for authority to withdraw the UAW from te parent labor organization.

Reuther said the vision of the AFL-CIO "has become blurred" under the leadership of its 73-year-old president, George Meany.

Repeated cheers indicated some 3,000 delegates to a special UAW convention will give Reuther what he asks.

Reuther did not propose immediate withdrawal but authority to pull out of the federation, if and when the UAW's 26-member executive board decides it should.

The subject of AFL-CIO withdrawal came in the wake of approval of a wide range of new contract goals in which many see the forebodings of strike in the auto industry.

Reuther estimated fewer than 10 delegates stood in opposition to the goals, which an auto industry spokesman estimated would "run into astronomical figures."

Reuhter, 59, renewed his charge that the AFL-CIO has been permitted to "stagnate and vegetate" under Meany.

"Major blame resides inside the American labor movement," for the U.S. Congress failure to repeal section 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act," Reuther said.

That section permits states to enact laws against compulsory union membership.

STILL SOME DOUBT

Whether withdrawal authority will be exercised remains to be seen.

Reuther, pleading that delegates "not tie our hands," got the flexibility he sought in goals. The convention avoided mentioning dollars or cents an hour anywhere.

The goals include a substantial wage increase, a guaranteed annual income, parity pay for Canadian auto plant workers, higher pensions, earlier retirement and continuation of a cost-of-living wage escalator and a so-called annual improvement factor, among other things.

The current straight-time average hourly wage in the U.S. automotive industry is figured at $3.36 by the bureau of labor statistics.

Okanagan Directors Not Happy

PENTICTON (CP) — President Glenn McPherson of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. said Friday directors are not satisfied with the $119,000 net profit in 1966. This compared with $386,000 in 1965, he told the annual meeting.

"Our problems of increased costs and reduced profit are problems facing industry across Canada. We believe we have taken steps that will enable us to show an improved financial position at the end of 1967."

Mr. McPherson said he hopes the Air Transport Board will soon announce an air policy for the helicopter industry.

"We are what is known as a controlled industry, and, being a controlled industry, are subject to the regulations of the board. It has been our contention that if we are going to be controlled and regulated we should . . . be afforded some protection similar to the protection granted to the fixed-wing operators."

Mill Strike Ends

SURREY (CP) — A seven-week strike at Griffith Rubber Mills Ltd. in Surrey has ended. The company agreed to provide wages that are higher than for similar work in the U.S. It also agreed on a clause giving workers the right to refuse to work overtime.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Move Towards Gas Price Hike

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Despite increased profits by the major oil companies in 1966, a move toward higher gasoline prices is in the offing.

One of the smaller company presidents gave the tip-off in his report for the first quarter of 1967.

KENT

Kelly H. Gibscn, of Pacific Petroleum Ltd., reported a record-setting $3 million profit since Jan. 1.

But, he added, it is time the producers got more money for a gallon of gas, which has not increased in price in 10 years. Only the tax has gone up, he wailed.

Charles Hay, president of BA Oil, says first-quarter earnings for his company show "satisfactory improvement over the first quarter of last year and are generally in line with expectations."

He also said it is a dangerous line of reasoning for the Carter commission on taxation to conclude there is no need to encourage exploration because current output of crude oil is more than 50 per cent below capacity.

Mr. Hay joins the mining interests and other oil men in vigorous opposition to Carter recommendations to eliminate depletion allowances and tax forgiveness.

Low-cost crude oil is the only way in which Canada can compete in world oil markets, Mr. Hay said. New, cheap reserves must continue to be found through risk capital encouragement, he said.

At any rate, the package concept of Carter recommendations must be kept in mind, he said.

If the government is going to tamper with depletion allowance it must also incorporate the recommendation for integrating personal and corporate income taxes, or the consequences for shareholders in the extractive industries "would be very serious indeed," he said.

A brother president, Frank M. Dawson of Texaco Canada Ltd., joined the criticism.

He told his annual shareholder's meeting that for the government to cut out these allowances would seriously reduce investment incentives necessary for development of future petroleum reserves.

Since 1947, he said, the depletion incentive had led to $9 billion in petroleum production in Canada.

This county will need new oil discoveries at the rate of some billion barrels a year for the next 20 years, he said.

Whether Athabaska tar sands will be fully competitive with conventional crude oil remains to be seen, he added.

Many people take the view that Canadian resources like petroleum and minerals could not have been exploited to the degree they are today had it not been for tax incentives and depletion allowances.

It is also argued that many smaller mining companies would never have been launched without the aid of allowances and tax forgiveness.

Perhaps there has been premature development in many cases, at the expense of the tax paying citizens of Canada.

After all, in a completely competitive economy, what is produced must pay its way or not be produced, and artificial means of supporting out put is false economy.

What the Carter commission is saying is: depletable resource industries have had their start. The free ride is over. Start paying like most others must pay.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

If there are horseplayers anywhere with more zeal, zest and devotion to duty than Victorians I don't know of them.

Hardly had word gone out that there might not be racing at Sandown this year when bettors awoke from winter slumber and snapped, "they can't do that to me. Where's the action today?"

Nothing unusual about that. Find a man with money burning a hole in his pocket and the odds are 6-5 you'll find him at a racetrack. Distance won't stop him.

There are two facilities you could build on the Arctic cap or in the middle of the Sahara and still draw packed houses. Liquor stores and racetracks.

The strain runs so deep that last week when the floating Exhibition Park casino opened guess who politely elbowed two elderly ladies aside to get to the windows?

Jimmy Audain, the author-breeder, thinks nothing of having breakfast in Victoria and afternoon tea on the terrace at Santa Anita.

But Derek Todd, the peanut-butter mogul, takes the pot of posies. He went to Aintree, near Liverpool, to watch a race. There are advantages of travelling that far to improve the breed. You get ample time to handicap the horses you shouldn't bet.

Nothing Else Like Grand National

The Grand National is more than a horse race. It is to the horseplayer as the Louvre is to the art afficionado. There is nothing quite like it. Todd's impressions, via Ian Ross, tell you why . . .

"My first impression of Aintree is the immensity of the course—2¼ miles around and nearly 30 yards across.

"The Grand National is the third race, a steeplechase for six-year-olds and older at four miles and 856 yards. The winner's share is £15,879 10s plus a gold trophy valued at £1,000. There are 44 starters, weighted from 168 pounds on What a Myth down to Foinavon 140.

"There are 30 fences, 4½ to five feet tall, and three to six feet wide, spaced at 100-yard intervals.

"There is little chance for a longshot to win as the course is so long and the jumps so high an average horse won't keep up. All the best horses would have to fall or refuse a jump before a horse like Foinavon could win.

"Previous to race day, bookmakers were giving odds at 500-1 that Foinavon would not win and 100-1 it wouldn't finish in the first four.

"I bet on nine different horses to win, five shillings on each.

Pyjamas, etc., and Still Shivering

"I have picked out a grassy slope to watch the race. I am miserably cold even though I have my pyjamas on underneath my regular clothes, a sweater, jacket overcoat and plastic raincoat on top of everything.

"Finally the horses are called to the roll-call area, the green flag goes up and the announcer says 'The horses are under starter's orders.'

"The barrier goes up and the horses are running towards the first jump, 44 of them spread out the entire width of the track. This is a most beautiful picture.

"At the first fence the second favorite Bassnet (9-1) falls, as do two other horses. At the third jump Vulcano goes up poorly and its hind legs become embedded in the entwinded gorse and twigs. The jockey is hanging around the horse's neck and another horse leaps right into it. There is a thud of colliding flesh. Both jockeys go flying.

"St. John Ambulance men rush to the fallen jockeys. A van drives up and a vet jumps over to examine one of the fallen horses. He calls for a screen, steps behind it. After a minute there is a single shot. This is a sickening thing to experience.

Riderless Horses, Collided and Fell

"The field has completed the first circuit and the announcer is saying how remarkable it is that so many horses are still in the race.

"As they go past the grandstand two tiring horses are pulled up. One is Anglo, last year's winner. There are still 25 to 30 horses running, close together, including two riderless horses. They can't get out because the course is closed in.

"Behind the bunched field are 4 or 5 stragglers, still with jockeys on them. One of these is Foinavon, a notable plodder. The jockey, John Buckingham, has never ridden the horse and it would be no disgrace if he were to pull up and conceded as he is 50-75 yards behind the leaders.

"The main field clears the 22nd fence and heads for the 23rd. The riderless horses decide they have jumped enough for the day and turn and run along the hedge fence, collide head-on and fall.

"The field comes up to them; some trip and others shy in all directions. All you can see coming over the jump are jockeys.

"There are so many horses lying on the approach side of the fence that half of it falls on them, making the jump twice or three times its normal width. Not one of the front runners clears the barirer.

Day of Delight for the Bookmakers

"Foinavon has just cleared the 22nd barrier and John Buckingham is able to see the tangled mess. Other jockeys pass him in the opposite direction. Some horses back up in fright. Riderless horses are all over.

"Buckingham closes his eyes and jumps Foinavon and makes it.

"The nearest horses are 200 yards behind and Foinavon has only six fences to go. He clears the next four but three horses are closing in, their riders urging them hard.

"Foinavon goes over the last jump, but there is still 200 yards to go, Honey End is coming fast and gaining with every stride. Foinavon crosses the finish line with Honey End just 15 yards back.

"There is a hushed silence in the grandstand. The bookmakers are in ecstasy. Out of £43,000 of pre-race day bets made with Hill's Bookmaking House only £27 had been placed on Foinavon.

"This was a race few race fans will forget. I know I'll always remember the Grand National that almost came to a stop, the day Fantastic Foinavon won."

RACING ALMOST ASSURED . . . . . . AT SIDNEY TRACK THIS YEAR

Bright Sandown Future Predicted

A bright future for horse racing on Vancouver Island was predicted today by Ken McConnell, commissioner-secretary of the B.C. Racing Commission, as the return of racing to Sandown Park this season was all but assured.

Unless unexpected differences between the North Saanich council and the B.C. Jockey Club arises before Tuesday, racing will be back at Sandown in September for its usual 17-day meeting.

"There is every possibility of racing problems at Sandown Park being resolved," McConnell told The Daily Times from Vancouver.

"Articles of agreement between North Saanich Council and the B.C. Jockey Club will probably be signed Tuesday of next week. This will provide for 17 days of racing at Sandown in 1967."

McConnell expressed satisfaction over apparent settlement of differences which had threatened to leave the Island without racing.

"We feel the people over there deserve horse racing," he said. "I think it is going to be terrific some time in the future because of the way the population is increasing. It will probably depend on improvement of the facilities."

Speculation about cessation of racing at Sandown started soon after Oct. 16, when a fire destroyed the main stables and 13 thoroughbreds, causing losses estimated at $135,000. Following investigations, a man was eventually convicted of arson in connection with the blaze.

However, in December, the Jockey Club applied for and received racing dates at Sandown for the 1967 season.

Then, on Feb. 13, following a meeting with the North Saanich council, Jack Diamond, representing the Jockey Club, announced he was applying to the Racing Commission to have the dates transferred to Vancouver's Exhibition Park.

Diamond's action came after North Saanich announced it was planning to levy a licence fee of $150 per day, would not permit trailers on the Sandown grounds and would insist on a sprinkling system being installed when new barns were constructed.

After negotiations had appeared to bog down, the racing commission met with members of the council and this was followed by more meetings between the council and the Jockey Club.

"They (council members) were very co-operative," said McConnell. "It was pointed out that no race track in America has a sprinkler system installed in barns and that the use of trailers was vital to the operation at Sandown. The matter of a daily licence fee was never a major problem."

"When we were asked to transfer the Sandown dates to Vancouver, we did our best to keep negotiations open, feeling the gap was not too great and believing horse racing could operate successfully and profitably in the municipality.

"This is what we hoped for."

Moving Habit Steers Ken on Trophy Trail

KEN BARKER
. . . moving along

Ken Barker has been something of a traveller in recent years. Moving around hasn't given him too many opportunities to play tournament golf, but by the same token, it didn't seem to hurt his game.

TIMES OPEN GOLF DRAW

Starting times of quarter-final matches in annual Times Vancouver Island Open championships, scheduled to be played Sunday at Uplands Golf Club:

HANDICAP DIVISION

9:30 a.m.—Reg Hoadley (GV) vs. Wes Green (GV).
9:35—Geoff Hill (GV) vs. Lyle Wilson (U).
9:40—Wayne McDonald (GV) vs. Bill Wightman (GV).
9:45—Art Binks (CH) vs. Lex Sutcliffe (GV).

CHAMPIONSHIP

9:50—Doug Munro (V) vs. Ken Barker (Cow).
9:55—Vaughan Trapp (V) vs. Laurie Kerr (RC).
10:00—Al MacLeod (GV) vs. Brian Stott (Cow).
10:05—Vince Clarkson (GV) vs. Bob Hunt (U).

If anything, he seems to be at his best on new courses. That may be one of the reasons that Barker, a new face on the Island golf scene, finds himself in Sunday's quarterfinal matches of the Times Open championships.

The 30-year-old Barker, now playing out of Cowichan Golf Club, faces Victoria Club's Doug Munro in one of the four quarterfinal battles at Uplands Golf Club Sunday. Winners advance to the semifinals at Oak Bay on April 30.

AWAY GAMES BEST

An engineer who learned to play golf in England, Barker hasn't had many chances to play in tournaments since arriving in Canada in 1955. His tourney appearances were rekindled after he moved to Crofton in 1965.

He entered the Island Open with a six handicap, but professes "to play better away from home."

Cowichan professional Norm Boden won't argue on that score. It was Boden, the Times titleholder in 1961, who toppled as Barker's victim, 2 and 1, in last Sunday's round at Gorge Vale.

Barker was approximately one over par for the 17 holes he needed to beat Boden.

Barker is one of two Cowichan players still in the running for Vancouver Island's major match-play championship. The other is junior Brian Stott, who draws Gorge Vale's Al MacLeod in another Sunday match.

GLAMOR MATCH

But the match that shapes up as the glamor battle seems to be the one pitting Vaughan Trapp, the only remaining pro in the field, against Laurie Kerr, the former B.C. and Island champion from Colwood.

Kerr holds the competitive course record at Colwood and Trapp, assistant pro at Oak Bay, warmed up for the meeting by shooting a one-over-par 71 in a practice round Thursday.

Uplands' Bob Hunt and veteran Vince Clarkson of Gorge Vale play off in the fourth championship match of the day. Championship contenders start moving off the first tee at 9:50 a.m.

First off, starting at 9:30, will be the eight survivors in the handicap scramble for the Hugh Francis Trophy. In the running are six Gorge Vale players—Reg Hoadley, Wes Green, Geoff Hill, Wayne McDonald, Bill Wightman and Lex Sutcliffe—along with Art Binks of Cedar Hill and Uplands' Lyle Wilson.

There's Always A First Time . . .

(By Associated Press)

It was almost as if the heavens opened in mercy over Chavez Ravine.

Buried in ninth place with five losses in their first seven games, the National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers could be excused if they approach their four game series with red hot St. Louis somewhat less than enthusiastically.

After all, the first place Cardinals had won six of their first seven games.

About the only thing Los Angeles could hope for was a miracle . . . like maybe rain in California.

Now any native will tell you that rain in California is about as rare as snow in Florida. The Dodgers hadn't lost an inning to the elements in nine years since moving from that nasty Brooklyn climate. They'd played 737 consecutive games at home including exhibitions and World Series.

MIRACLE HAPPENS

But Friday night, it rained in Los Angeles, and the Dodgers didn't have to play the Cardinals.

Not only did the weather keep the Dodgers idle, but it moved up the California coast and wiped out San Francisco Giants' game against Atlanta Braves.

Three National League games were played Friday. Vada Pinson's 10th inning triple drove in two runs as Cincinnati Reds trimmed Houston Astros 3-1. New York Mets broke Jim Bunning's hex against them, downing Philadelphia Phillies 6-3, and Bob Veale's two-hitter gave Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-1 victory over Chicago Cubs.

In the American League, Boston Red Sox beat New York Yankees 6-1, California Angels edged Cleveland Indians 6-5, Washington Senators nudged Chicago White Sox 4-3, Kansas City Athletics took Baltimore Orioles 3-1 and Detroit Tigers thumped Minnesota Twins 12-4.

CONTINUES HERO ROLE

Pinson was the Reds' hero for the second straight night as Cincinnati played its third consecutive extra-inning game.

His triple drove in Art Shamsky and Tommy Harper. It was Pinson, who stroked a single in the 13th inning Thursday night to beat the Dodgers.

Bunning brought a 13-2 lifetime record into the game against the Mets.

NOTHING CONCRETE YET . . . . . . LOS ANGELES SUGGESTED

RED KELLY

MONTREAL (CP) — Red Kelly says he will "seriously consider" any offers he might get to coach a team in next season's expanded National Hockey League.

"But I haven't signed anything yet and, in fact, I haven't really had a good offer," the veteran Toronto Maple Leafs forward said Friday.

"Actually, I wouldn't even think about it until the season is over anyway."

Kelly, a 20-year NHL man with the Leafs and Detroit Red Wings, has been reported considering an executive position with the Los Angeles team that will join the NHL next year.

The former all-star defenceman, who was converted to a forward after going to Toronto eight seasons ago, explained that he has always wanted to go into coaching when he retired as a player.

He has appeared in more NHL playoff games than any other performer. When he took to the ice today for the second game of the Stanley Cup final against Montreal Canadiens, the redhead extended his playoff games' total to 160—10 more than Gordie Howe of Detroit.

The Stanley Cup series, incidentally, will continue in Toronto Tuesday night.

He hinted Friday that his playing days may be rapidly approaching the end.

"Several people have asked me what would happen if the Leafs leave me unprotected in the draft next summer and I'm picked up by another team.

"I simply tell them not to waste the money."

Kelly would not say whether he would consider another year with Toronto as a player if he is protected in the draft.

Kelly's attitude hints, however, that he would prefer to step down as an active player.

"I've always played because I enjoyed playing. I enjoyed it so much that I never argued over contracts at the beginning of the season even after I'd had great years.

"But I'm not sorry about that. I'd do all the same things over again. At my age (he'll be 40 in July) you have to start thinking about the future.

"I've had lots of offers. I've had offers to coach junior teams. I have a business to fall back on if I decide to get right out of hockey.'

Kelly would prefer to move into the top leagues as a coach.

"I've been out of junior hockey 20 years and I've been among the big boys all that time."

Canucks Again Squander Lead, Lose to Totems

VANCOUVER—Unable to stand prosperity in the first two games of the Western Hockey League final, Vancouver Canucks were in trouble today as they headed for Seattle to complete the best-of-seven series.

Canucks are burdened with a two-game deficit after dropping a 4-3 decision to the Totems Friday night, when they failed to hold an early lead for the second successive time.

Third and fourth games of the playoff are scheduled in Seattle tonight and Sunday. Remaining games, if necessary, will also be played in Seattle since the Vancouver Forum is unavailable for additional hockey this season.

A capacity crowd of 5,080 fans at Vancouver Friday saw the Canucks build up a 3-1 lead after 30 minutes and then allow the Totems to bounce back for three straight goals.

PICARD SCORES

Defenceman Noel Picard, a standout for the Totems in playoff action, got two goals including the winner, a long shot from the blueline at 9:27 of the final 20 minutes.

Chuck Holmes and Larry Hale got the other Totem markers. Vancouver veteran Phil Maloney set up goals for Barry Watson and defenceman Larry Cahan. Rookie Ron Boehm added the other Canuck tally.

There was bumping and shoving from the opening whistle, and players on both sides became involved in a first-period donnybrook.

MAIN EVENT

Vancouver's Bob Cook and Larry Hale were featured in the main event with Cook having his jersey torn off in the battle.

There was more scuffling in the third period, this time between the Canucks' Bryan Hextall and Larry Lund. Hextall caught Lund for three stitches over the nose but had to serve a major for drawing blood. Lund was given a minor penalty for high sticking.

Vancouver's regular netminder, Don Simmons, remained sidelined with an injury received in the previous series. Victoria goalie Al Smith was in the Vancouver nets. He turned aside 18 drives while Jim Armstrong was kept busy kicking out 22.

Vancouver Puts Two on All-Stars

Two defensive stalwarts from Vancouver, who played prominent roles in leading Canucks to a third-place finish, topped all vote-collectors in the annual Western Hockey League all-star poll.

Defenceman Larry Cahan topped the balloting by collecting 479 out of a possible 510 points.

Vancouver goalie Don Simmons followed by drawing 402 points as Canucks came through as the only club to place more than one player on the dream team.

Also named to the first team were defenceman Connie Madigan of Portland, centre Guyle Fielder of Seattle, right wing Dick Meissner of Los Angeles and left winger Fred Hilts of San Diego, the league's top goal-getter.

ERICKSON FAVORED

Victoria Maple Leafs managed to place one player on the second team, with defenceman Aut Erickson nailing down one of the defensive spots.

San Diego goalie Les Binkley, Oakland defenceman Jerry Odrowski, Portland centre Art Jones and Seattle wingers Howie Hughes and Bill Dineen were also picked for the second team.

Victoria's Sandy Hucul was fifth in the voting for defencemen and Milan Marcetta finished just behind Jones in the centre selections.

Players named to the first team will receive $300 and the runners-up draw $150.

GOAL: Don Simmons, Vancouver (402); Les Binkley, San Diego (252); Jim McLeod, Seattle (200); Don Head, Portland (172).

DEFENCE: Larry Cahan, Vancouver (497); Connie Madigan, Portland (415); Jerry Odrowski, Oakland (266); Aut Erickson, Victoria (172); Sandy Hucul, Victoria (158); Jack Evans, Oakland (95); Larry Hale, Seattle (86); Jean Gauthier, Seattle (82).

CENTRE: Guyle Fielder, Seattle (313); Art Jones, Portland (291); Milan Marcetta, Victoria (182); Gordon Vejprava, Vancouver (153); Norm Johnson, Los Angeles (77).

LEFT WING: Fred Hilts, San Diego (309); Bill Dineen, Seattle (277); Bill Saunders, Portland (232); Len Lunde, Portland (75).

PREUSS TRIUMPHS

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Superlative chipping and putting made the difference as Phyllis Tish Preuss scored a 1-up victory over Connie Day Friday and won her second North and South Amateur golf tournament in four years.

Saskatoon Extends Series to Sixth Game

SASKATOON (CP)—Saskatoon Macs built up a four-goal lead, then held on for a 6-5 victory over New Westminster Royals in the fifth game Friday of their best-of-seven Western Canadian Memorial Cup semi-final series.

Despite the win, the Macs still trail in the series 3-2.

The Macs led 3-1 after one period and 4-2 after two. They scored two more goals early in the third period before Wayne Goss of the Royals scored three times in nine minutes to narrow the margin. Goss wound up with four goals.

The game ended in a wild melee when referee Bill Bucyk of Edmonton disallowed a Royals' goal scored just after the final buzzer sounded.

The goal would have tied the game, and New Westminster players protested the ruling so violently, police were needed to clear the ice of players.

The series now moves to New Westminster where the sixth game will be played Sunday.

KNUDSON'S world of GOLF

I'm sure you're all familiar with my good friend, Mr. Magoo.

You know the one—the little short-sighted character with squinty eyes in movie and television cartoons.

As unlikely as it might seem, Magoo is one of my favorite golf partners.

I'm speaking, of course, about Jim Backus, the man who does Magoo's voice. Jim has been my partner on many occasions, including three years in Bing Crosby's annual pro-amateur tournament in California.

Jim is a funny guy, especially after the game in the clubhouse, or when he hooks up with actor Peter Falk in a routine at the first tee.

But, of course, he takes his golf seriously, shooting to a 14 handicap at the tough Riviera course in Los Angeles.

A pro golfer gets a chance to meet quite a few celebrities from show business. I guess Jim Backus is the best of the ones I've played with—Donald O'Connor, Vic Damone, Hoagy Carmichael, Ray Bolger—but O'Connor has the greatest potential.

Donald is full of rhythm, the way he is when he dances. If he was ever in really peak condition, he'd probably be a scratch golfer.

Anyway, Backus and I were in a tournament this one day, standing on the tee at a par-three hole.

It was about 230 yards and he was addressing his ball. Suddenly, he backed away and started laughing.

"Hey, Jim," I said, "what's the matter?"

"George, I don't know whether to cut it in there or hook it in," he laughed.

"Just go ahead and hit it," I told him.

Can you imagine—here was a green ahead of us, trapped everywhere but at the back and there was a boundary back there. And Jim was going to try to fade or draw the ball to it.

Heck, Ben Hogan, the best man who ever played this game, would have hit the ball straight and hoped to land on the green in this situation. And Backus is no Ben Hogan.

That's the trouble with a lot of golfers. When they stand up to the ball, they have no idea what they're going to do with it.

Forget the fancy shots. I haven't seen a golf course yet where a straight ball won't do the job.

I still question my ability to fade or draw a ball gracefully and with control. It isn't often you find it necessary.

That's what I told Magoo that day.

He hit it straight and put it on the green.

Come to think of it, I'm always giving that guy tips. He owes me something.

I wonder if he would teach me some of his wacky voices?

GEORGE'S TIP

BALANCE

If your balance is proper in your swing, 95 per cent of your weight will wind up evenly balanced on your left foot. Most golfers wind up with their weight on their left heel, falling away from the shot. This, of couse, makes for inaccuracy. I know only three golfers in the world with perfect balance. Ben Hogan is the greatest.

There's no tomorrow for pin-spillers who were making last-ditch efforts to earn places in the fourth annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

In fact, even today is too late for those who have been unable to capture weekly awards in the Bowler-of-the-Year contest sponsored by The Daily Times.

Final week of the 27-week competition on southern Vancouver Island lanes ended Friday night. All that remains is to determine the names of the last week winners and announce the list of bowlers eligible to shoot for trophies and cash in the rolloffs on Sunday, April 30.

Since last September, bowlers who posted the highest three-game, scratch scores during regular league play in each of four divisions — men's and women's fivepins, and men's and women's tenpins — have received Bowler-of-the-Week certificates.

BONUS PRIZE OF $100

Each weekly winner qualified to compete in the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs, making 108 alley-addicts eligible to join the scramble for trophies.

Rolloff titles will be decided in three games of scratch bowling and each of the four division winners will receive a Times trophy. Any rollof champion who is also a daily subscriber to the Times will receive a bonus prize of $100.

Fivepinners, both men and women, will fire their rolloff shots at Gibson's Recreations, starting at 1:30 p.m.

Tenpinners will start one hour later, the ladies rolling at Aurora Lanes and the men blasting pins at Mayfair Lanes.

AWARD WINNER

Joining the list of rolloff candidates today is William Bird, who completed the list of winners in the 26th week by capturing the men's fivepin award with a series of 882.

Bird topped his division as he bombed the pins for games of 244, 337 and 301 in the Dockyard League at Town and Country Lanes and the same kind of effort on April 30 might be enough to earn a cool $100.

DISTAFF DIVOTING

Third Straight Win In Greensome Event

A successful defence in any annual handicap event is considered a notable achievement in golf. It's doubly difficult if it happens to be in competition involving pairs.

That's why Jean Whittingham and Irene Horne's victory in the Wenger Basket event at Gorge Vale is considered noteworthy. They won the ladies' greensome event, with a net 75½, for the third consecutive year this week.

Pat Mitchell and Vi Sinclair were runners-up with a net 76½.

An upsurge in junior girls' interest prevails around the Gorge. Juniors are holding weekly matches and medal rounds, and first into the winner's circle was Vicki Parsons. She topped a nine-hole medal round this week.

Shirley Naysmith scored a gross 81, three over par, to top the District Ladies' 15 and under medal round at Gorge Vale. Gorge clubmate Elsie Saunders won low net with 91-13—78 while Glen Meadows' Edna Hay was runner-up with 94-14—80.

OTHERWISE: A 10-member Glen Meadows team defeated Mount Brenton in their inter-club meeting this week . . . Meadows member Marg Robertson came back to the club to win an "irons-only" competition . . . Divisional winners of an Uplands' par competition were Mrs. E. Hicks and Mrs. K. Liddell, who tied for "A" honors, Mrs. P. Blay and Mrs. M. White . . .

Mary Norris (net 75) edged Marg Todd by two strokes to claim "A" laurels in Oak Bay ladies' medal round . . . One-two in the "B" division were Mary Hunt (net 80) and Hammy Gulston (net 82) . . . Lillian Gornall's net 66 was the medal-winning score at Cedar Hill . . . Mary Gidden and Peggy Matthews recorded their sixth straight victory in Cedar Hill button play be defeating Anne McBean and Joan Mitchell . . . All interest next week focuses on the district two-ball foursomes, which start with the 18-hole qualifying round at Victoria Golf Club on Tuesday . . . A ladies' open field day will be held at Cowichan May 7 . . . April competition winners at Cowichan were Molly Trail ("A") and Shirley Gard ("B").

Alouettes Sign Heralded Rookie

MONTREAL (CP) — Dave Lewis, described as one of the most versatile football players in United States college ranks in recent years, has signed a one-year contract with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Lewis, who played quarterback, halfback and flanker while at California's Stanford University, is 22. He weighs 200 pounds and stands 6-foot-2.

O. K. Dalton, Alouettes' freshman head coach, has been after Lewis for some time. Dalton said the Stanford grad, who was fifth draft choice of New York Giants of the National Football League this year, will be used to back up George Bork in the quarterback slot.

Flu Bug Nips at Palmer

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The second round of the $100,000 Greater Dallas Open Golf Tournament was postponed because of rain Friday and will be played Saturday. The tournament will be extended a day, finishing Monday.

Postponement came when heavy rains accompanied by lightning held the start of play through 9:15 a.m.

At the same time the postponement was announced, Arnold Palmer, golf's greatest money winner who slumped to a six-over-par 76 in the opening round Thursday, asked permission to withdraw because he was ill. Permission was granted.

Gay Brewer, the Masters champion from Dallas, took the lead in the first round with a six-under-par 64.

Palmer was on hand to start the second round Friday, despite the fact that he was suffering from a cold and had expressed weariness through having played in eight of the last nine tournaments.

ON CENTRE COURT . . . . . . FOR FIRST TIME

Pros Move in on Wimbledon

LONDON (AP)—The All-England Tennis Club announced unprecedented plans Friday for eight of the world's top professionals to play in a tournament on the Wimbledon centre court.

The event is scheduled for Aug. 25, 26 and 28 — seven weeks after the Wimbledon tournament itself.

It was a big move by British tennis authorities in their campaign for open tournaments, in which professionals would compete alongside the cream of the world's amateurs.

Professionals never before have been allowed to play on Wimbledon's centre court. It was there that stars such as Don Budge, Jack Kramer, Lew Hoad and Rod Laver won their Wimbledon titles before turning pro.

CONTINUED EFFORT

For years the British have tried unsuccessfully to persuade the International Lawn Tennis Federation to sanction open tournaments.

They suggested throwing the Wimbledon tournament—the unofficial world championships—open to pros for a trial period. But the plans were always voted down.

EXPO ROOMS

MONTREAL — While a premium now exists on lodging space in Greater Montreal for tourists visiting Expo 67, there still is considerable room available for travellers in the picturesque Laurentian Mountains resort area, just north of the world's fair city.

Two weeks before the opening of the year's top international tourist attraction, President John B. Parker of the Laurentian Resorts Association reported there is still space for up to 2,500 guests in the association's 18 member hotels—from 40 to 80 miles north of the Expo site.

HABITAT 67 housing complex will display to Expo visitors in Montreal a new idea in community living with each apartment having an outdoor terrace and private garden automatically watered and fertilized by pipes.

Stroll Along Sky Street An All-Weather Pleasure

Surging triumphantly to life on the Expo 67 site in Montreal is a totally new adventure in residential architecture. Habitat 67 is a 12-storey housing complex with aerial streets, rooftop playgrounds and private gardens serving 114 naturally terraced homes.

During the past year, Habitat has proved the merits of mass production building techniques.

Pre-cast concrete modular construction units, each 38½ feet long, 17½ feet wide and 10 feet high, were poured in the factory on the site. The "boxes" were finished at ground level using assembly line procedures to install windows, doors, plumbing, electrical wiring, the flooring an the bathroom. Then, the whole "box," weighing up to 90 tons, was hoisted skywards by a giant, stiff-leg derrick crane and positioned in the spot assigned to it along the 950-foot length of the complex.

'SKY STREET'

Whisked non-stop to the 10th floor, guests will find themselves on a long, 15-foot wide pedestrian street laid out like an elegant promenade. As with all city thoroughfares, the street will have sewers but electrical and other services will be concealed beneath it.

Even in bad weather, a walk along 'Sky Street' will be a pleasant experience. Strollers will be sheltered from any breeze by means of overhanging shields of plastic.

Petunias, honeysuckle, dogwood and hydrangeas will adorn the street approaches and everything possible will be done to give a natural touch to the environment.

Off the centre of the street are entrances to the one-, two-, three- and four-bedroom homes. Interspersed amongst them are open-air toddler's playgrounds, a part of the nearly 40,000 swuare feet in the complex devoted to playground area. Stairways from the streets go up and down to other 'hillside' homes.

CONCEALED LIGHTS

Bright living rooms, measuring up to 500 square feet, have either sliding glass doors leading to spacious terraces on large picture windows.

In the ceilings are concealed lighting strips with adjustable beams that focus into any part of the room. Further, outlets at six foot intervals around the walls permit flexibility in the placement of decorative table lamps. Year-round air conditioning is accomplished through wall-length floor vents.

Bedrooms are related to the size of the Habitat homes and they vary from large master bedrooms to smaller rooms suitable for children or for use as a den. The average size is about 17' by 12'.

Unique fibreglass bathrooms with walls, shelves, bathtub and almost everything moulded in one piece are innovations developed especially for Habitat. These rooms of non-slip, resilient and reinforced plastic were moulded off the Expo site and then installed, on the ground, in the "boxes" to which they were assigned. Thus, hundreds of construction man hours were saved and the need for costly tiling and painting was eliminated.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q. Is it too soon to put out geranium plants in my planters? Mrs. T. J., Victoria.

A. In the area indicated by your address, you will probably not have frost after this date to damage geranium plants which have been gradually acclimatized to outdoor low night temperatures.

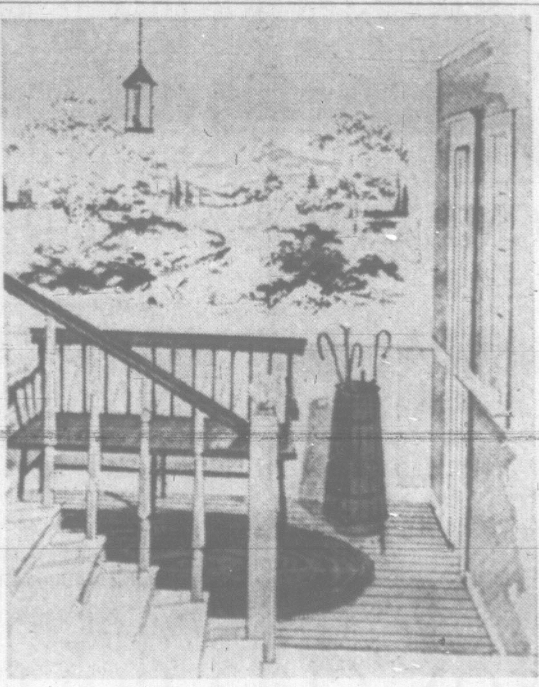
Neither will you get the warm day temperatures by salt water to make them grow, so advise you to hold off planting until about mid May.

Q. Why would all my petunia seedlings die suddenly in the seed box in an unheated sunporch? J. S., Colwood.

A. Perhaps they were too crowded, too wet, or did not have enough air circulating around them. All these conditions contribute to the sudden collapse (damping-off) of seedlings. If they are pricked out as soon as two true leaves appear (four tiny leaves in all) much of this late damping-off is prevented. The soil should not be too wet, especially if the night temperatures in the porch go down to about 40 deg. F. Plentiful air circulation in the growing area is important also.

Q. Are figs very late showing leaves here? Or will my tree have died in the winter? M. T., Gordon Head.

A. Figs are fortunately quite late to start growth, or many would succumb to late spring frosts in May. There should however be green tips to all the branches now.



ENTRANCE HALL is often the perfect spot to hang a restful scenic wallpaper mural. The countryside scenic, with its fresh spring waterfall and mountain vista, provides interest and depth to an otherwise bland wall area.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENS

Wealth of Health Available In the Lowly Cabbage Patch

By JACK BEASTALL

Brassicas, crucifers, cabbage. Call them what you like, they still farm an important part of a balanced diet.

Summer cabbage and cauliflower contain vitamin A in small quantities, are a good source of vitamins B1 and B2, and are rich in vitamin C.

Jack

Broccoli, also known as calabrese and sprouting broccoli, is an excellent source of vitamins A and C, and contains a good supply of B1 and B2.

Brussels sprouts are rated as good for B1, B2 and C, and contain a low percentage of vitamin A.

Although one or more of the brassica group are to be found in most vegetable gardens, we rarely stop to consider their amazing range of forms, in fact, the term "cabbage patch" is commonly used in a disparaging way.

It is doubtful if any genus, or group, in the vegetable kingdom produces so many distinct forms of vegetation for the use of man.

Cabbage produces a ball of leaves, the entire ball being cut before the leaves unfold. From sprouting broccoli we cut the clusters of flower buds that form at the end of each shoot.

Cauliflower makes one large head of flower buds which is removed for food before the flowers open. Brussels sprouts are not grown for either leaves or flower buds, but for the growth buds which form in the axil of the leaves.

TOP QUALITY

All the brassicas grow well in this climate, in fact Vancouver Island is recognized for producing top-quality seed of these crops. But, in spite of our standing in the seed trade, we cannot say that all home gardeners on the Island experience unqualified success.

Since the last half of April is the time to set out these plants in the garden, a few pointers on their cultivation should be timely. It is worth noting here that we now set out the plants; the seed was sown six weeks ago.

Our mental attitude towards the cabbage patch leads us to believe that brassicas enjoy a poor soil, a soil unsuited for growing other vegetables.

WRONG IDEA

This is wrong thinking, for in the market garden they are given pride of place as far as soil is concerned, and plenty of plant food to keep them plump and happy.

The ideal piece of ground is an area that was heavily manured last summer or fall for another crop. Since an area of this type is unlikely to be present in the home garden, the next best is a spot prepared this spring by incorporating plenty of the well-rotted manure that is now available.

This well-rotted manure supplies the humus from which the stalks, roots, buds and leaves are made, and it also holds the moisture around the roots which is so essential to success with the brassicas.

Sweetness and fine texture, the criteria by which the consumer judges brassicas, results from steady and fast growth from the time the plants are set out until the day they are cut for use.

RESERVES NEEDED

To attain these attributes the plants must have plenty of food reserves in the soil on which to draw as needed. The four members of this group we are considering today benefit greatly from a complete garden fertilizer well mixed into the top four to six inches of soil, applied at the rate of 10 pounds to 100 feet of row. A row for cabbage is a strip two feet wide.

At 50 plants to the row, this means one pound of complete food to five plants, which is considerably higher than used for other vegetables.

Plants of the small-head summer cabbage, the much milder and sweeter red cabbate, sprouting broccoli and summer cauliflower are set out this weekend. These take care of our summer and early fall requirements.

LONG SEASON

Plants of brussels sprouts are also set out because they require a long growing season to produce the tight leaf buds we enjoy so much through fall until Christmas.

Tight heads on the cabbage, and tight heavy sprouts, are the result of firming the soil well around the roots when planting, and tramping over the area as much as possible to keep the soil closely packed. Weeds are cut off with a hoe at the surface so as not to loosen the soil.

When the gardener has grown, or purchased, good seedlings, and carefully prepared his soil, he still has one more problem to overcome: the cabbage fly or cabbage root maggot.

This annoying little fly has been with us since we first tried to grow cabbages, and gardening papers, especially those of the last century, contain many amusing and unlikely "remedies" practised by those generations of gardeners.

CABBAGE MAT

From these, one has stood the test of time, the tarpaper collar, or cabbage mat.

Although these mats were once available at a most reasonable price, they are seldom seen in stores today. Many old-time gardeners have always made their own and continue to do so.

The mat is simply a square cut from scraps of tarpaper, about three to four inches square.

The centre is marked on each square and a cut made from the middle of one side to the centre and then one-half inch beyond. A cross cut is made at the centre extending one-half inch each side of the first cut.

After the plants are set into the soil and the soil stamped tightly around the roots, the mat is slipped over the stem, laid on the surface of the soil, and pressed closely to the stem.

The cabbage fly lays its egg on the soil at the base of the plant stem and the maggots tunnel into the roots. The mat prevents this, providing the soil beneath it is levelled so that the fly cannot crawl underneath, and the centre pressed down to cover the soil around the plant stem.

THE WEEK'S WORK

By next week, the yellow forsythia and the crimson native currant shrubs will likely be near the end of blooming. Both will benefit from having the flowering shoots cut back part way. Also remove very old growths at ground level.

Continue planting of herbaceous perennials and thin out crowded shoots of phlox, delphiniums and asters (Michaelmas daisies).

At the end of month, dahlia tubers may be planted in areas free of late spring frosts.

Chrysanthemum cuttings which are well rooted and have been hardened-off outdoors may be planted by end of month if soil is warm then. Otherwise keep them growing in four-inch pots or plant bands in a frame until May. Many chrysanthemum troubles are due to cold soils.

Plant main crop potatoes in light soil.

By end of month sow beet seed if soil is warm, and a few bush and runner beans if late spring frosts are not common in your area.

Under same conditions sow squash seed outdoors. But in gardens which get late frosts, plan to put out started plants late in May.

Violet Competition

Centennial Celebration with Violets is the theme of a flower show May 6 in Vancouver, which Victoria violet growers are invited to enter.

The show, sponsored by the Vancouver African Violet Club, will be at Oakridge auditorium, 41st and Cambie, from 1:30 to 9 p.m.

Draws Push United Into Favored Spot

LONDON (CP) — Manchester United threw everything into defence today and moved nearer the English League soccer title with a scoreless tie at Sunderland.

Manchester's closest rival, Nottingham Forest, also gained one point with a 1-1 tie at Arsenal.

That left Manchester with 55 points and Nottingham with 52 in the First Division. Both teams have three games to play.

Sunderland, with a crowd of 43,000 cheering fans, gave Manchester some anxious moments. In the last 10 minutes Sunderland had strong claims for a penalty turned down, and Colin Suggett hit the Manchester crossbar.

But Bobby Charlton and Denis Law both missed good chances to grab a victory for Manchester.

Manchester now is a strong favorite to go into next season's European Cup of Champions.

Meanwhile, Nottingham Forest saw the chance of pulling off the coveted English League and cup double—a feat achieved only once this century, slowly fading.

Arsenal gave Nottingham a shock when fullback Peter Storey scored two minutes before half-time.

Left-winger Ian Storey-Moore levelled the score in the 49th minute with a fine goal, but from then on Nottingham was on the defensive.

Tottenham Hotspur—the team Nottingham is to play in the English Cup semi-finals next week—grabbed a 1-0 victory at Southampton with a headed goal by centre-forward Alan Gilzean in the 38th minute.

The game brought an exciting duel between Southampton centre-forward Ron Davies—one of the ace scorers of English soccer—and Tottenham's big centre-half, Mike England. The Spurs man came out on top. Tottenham now is third, only three points behind Nottingham and with a game in hand.

Southampton's defeat increased the threat of a drop into the Second Division. It has 30 points with three games to plays. Aston Villa and Newcastle have 29, Aston Villa has three games to come and Newcastle has four.

Knockdowns Help Billy To Unanimous Decision

Heavyweight Bill Taylor knocked Eddie Ostavitch to the canvas twice to pound out a unanimous decision in the feature bout of the London Boxing Club card at the Club Tango Friday night.

The card drew a standing-room-only crowd of over 600 fans.

There were no knockouts on the 12-bout card although London battlers Harold Handlen and Les Vegas also counted knockdowns along with Taylor.

Vegas decisioned Colin Colridge of Vancouver Firefighters in the bout that was adjudged the best fight of the night.

London boxers won seven of 11 bouts with out-of-town rivals.

But a surprise reversal was the setback Victoria's Gary Van Buskirk suffered in a 127-pound scrap with South Burnaby's Brian Gray.

Individual awards went to Van Buskirk (best prospect), Taylor (best footwork), Len Glanfield (best left), Mike Miller (most aggressive), Bob Allen (sportsmanship) and Tony James (hard-luck loser).

PLANTING A NEW LAWN?

Like all plant life, healthy lawns spring from healthy stock. Yet one of the most common mistakes in lawn planting is to use inferior seed. Often the home-owner will spend weeks in soil preparation, adding lime, fertilizer and peat moss, then for the sake of saving a few pennies will use an inferior seed mix which condemns his lawn to lifetime poor performance.

The mix should be adapted to climate and soil conditions. For example, Buckerfield's Uplands Green lawn seed blends the color and fine texture of fescues and bents with the vigor and drought-resistance of Kentucky bluegrass. This combination has proven highly successful in British Columbia, producing deep green, close-textured lawns which stay green all summer.

Be sure. Start your lawn with Uplands Green Lawn Seed backed with Uplands Special Fertilizer, the plant food formulated specially for B.C. soils. At all good garden stores.

which heat — oil or electricity is more economical?

Electric heating costs up to 100% more than oil heat —this is an irrefutable fact that can be checked with any qualified heating contractor. In fact, people living in electrically heated homes—without very expensive insulation—are paying as much as 100% more for electric heat than they would for oil heat in the same home with minimum insulation.

Actual comparison tests show an oil-heated home spending $148 a year on fuel would pay about $332 a year if it were heated with electricity. Even with elaborate and expensive extra insulation (three times normal), electricity will still cost far more than oil.

OIL HEAT IS THE BEST HEAT

It is more economical and provides a healthier home environment than electricity

What a difference a good, organic fertilizer makes! Turns thin, scraggly lawns into carpets of brilliant green . . . grows thick, luxuriant turf that chokes out weeds. A good, organic fertilizer will stay active in the soil long after many ordinary kinds have leached away.

Buckerfield's Uplands Special gives your lawn over 40% organic plant foods, and extra quantities of vital, life-giving nitrogen for quick, responsive growth.

Uplands Special is specially formulated for B.C. soils. Use it for all your garden needs — lawns, flowers, rockeries, shrubs, trees.

Czechs Lure Western Travellers

Eastern Europe is preparing for the largest invasion of tourists from the West in its history this year.

Air Canada now has reciprocal arrangements with Russia's Aeroflot on the Montreal-Moscow run, and British European Airways, the world's largest airline outside of the U.S., is adding Hungary's capital of Budapest to its list of East European destinations out of London (the others are Prague, Moscow, Warsaw and, during the summer only, Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia).

Of the countries making up the East European bloc, the most westernized of them, Czechoslovakia, is making the greatest effort to attract the Western traveller—and meeting with the most success.

In 1964, the year Czechoslovakia began to make serious overtures to travelling Canadians, the total number from this country visiting the small central European nation was approximately 2,000.

In 1965 the number rose to more than 3,500, and final figures for 1966 are expected to show a total in excess of 5,000.

If the numbers of native-born Czechoslovaks going home on visits are excluded (about 1,200 in 1964 and a little better than 1,000 in 1966), the number of tourists is 800 in 1964 and 4,000 in 1966.

Part of the reason for the growing Czechoslovak success in luring Western tourists is the country itself—old Europe with many medieval towns, castles galore, scenery that ranges from the Danube through the Moravian plains to the mountains of Bohemia and Slovakia, and a capital city, Prague, that will spark the interest of the most blase camera-toting tourist.

A second reason for the influx is that the Czechoslovaks, under the guidance of the government committee for tourism, are making it increasingly easier for Western tourists to enter the country.

True, a visa is still required, but today these can be issued within minutes at points of entry for a bona fide tourist in possession of a valid passport.

Despite this tendency to what are sometimes called "instant visas," however, it is generally a good idea to get a visa in advance. This can be done by making application to the Czechoslovak Consulate General in Montreal, or through a travel agent.

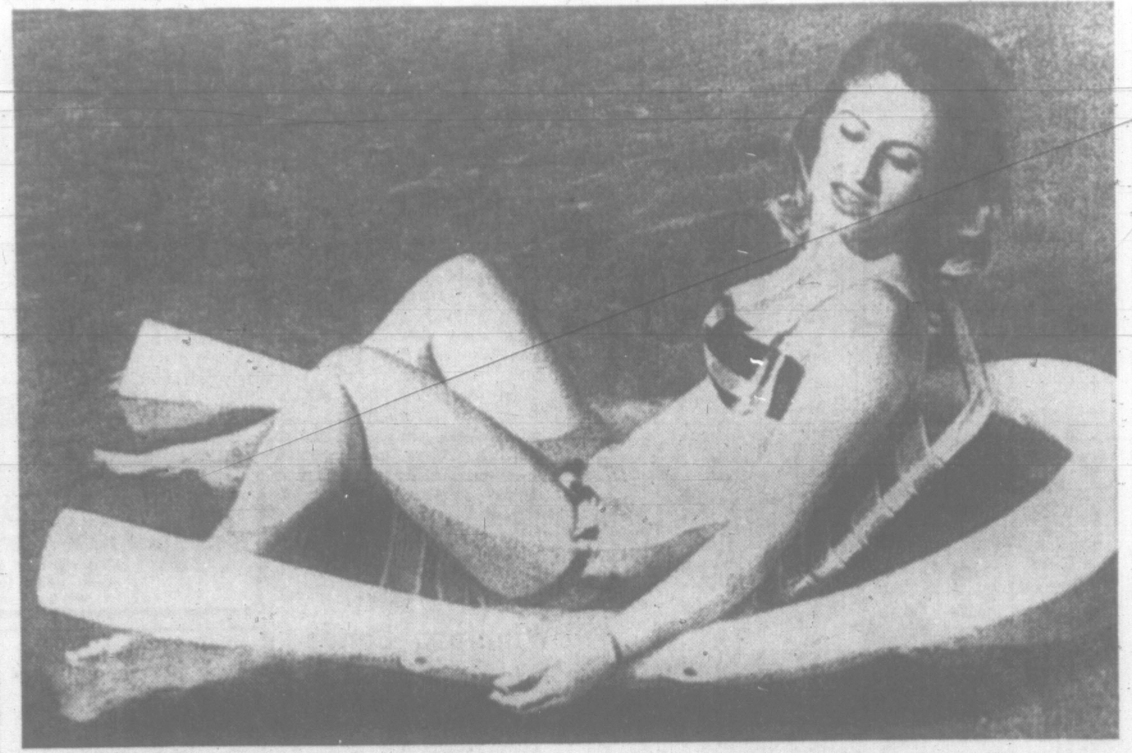
Thousands Of Britons Go to 'Camp'

Nearly two million people will be spending their vacations in holiday camps in Britain this summer. Of these, there will be a bigger proportion than ever before from overseas. Many of these visitors are so intrigued and delighted with British holiday camps that they will be spending their second, third, fourth, or even fifth successive vacation there.

Possibly the word camp is something of a misnomer. British holiday camps are essentially self-contained holiday townships, offering within their vast perimeters recreational facilities which could only be found normally by visiting at least a dozen separate resorts.

Visitors live in self-contained, comfortably heated chalets, most of which have their own private bathroom suite.

These campers are served with traditional British foods, cooked by accomplished chefs. Without stepping outside the camp, holidaymakers can enjoy sports of every kind, live theatre shows, beauty parades, dancing and a host of other attractions—all free within the inclusive cost of the holiday.



ON THE RIVIERA the latest gaget getting test run from bikini-clad beauties is the aquatic chair which offers solid comfort for those who like to sunbathe on water. The device is also proving handy for water rescues. (AP Wirephoto.)

MATE CRIES FOR HAPPINESS . . .

And Suddenly . . . a Great Peace

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times' reporter John Manning and his wife Pat are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in This is the 23rd in a series on their adventures. England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor.

It came out of the sea like a green jewel; it shimmered on the horizon like a teardrop; it grew steadily in size, dancing a minuet with the tip of the bowsprit.

It was our first tropical island. We had been at sea 25 days.

The fabled West Indies . . . Barbados! For the first time on the voyage the mate cried because she was happy: "How do you thank God for such a safe passage?" We feasted our eyes on the island's silhouette, then bucketed each other down with fresh water, gave the saloon a tidying up and polished the brass bell.

An hour later the sun set.

We hauled in, making for the lee of the island, sailing within pistol shot of Cobbler's Reef and felt the air change and grow languorous, redolent with spice scent.

Safer at Sea

Off Carlisle Bay we hove to, took down the sails, brought up a bright light to read by and drifted, too excited to sleep, until daybreak. Neither of us wished to chance entering the yacht anchorage at night; not after such a passage. We felt safer at sea.

With the arrival of dawn we started up Powindah's one-cylinder diesel and thumped into Carlisle Bay, a former roadstead for Admiral Nelson's fleet. The anchor clattered free of the hawse pipe. The ship was suddenly still, at rest, and a great peace descended on her.

The mate and I went over the side into water so clear you could see the rust on the anchor flukes three fathoms below. That initial swim more than made up for whatever discomforts we had experienced on the way across; so also did the sight of a white, white beach, and palm trees cutting green patterns against the blue sky. We were still in the water when the custom's launch came out to see us.

"Where have you come from?" they asked, among other questions.

"Canary Islands."

"How many days?"

"Twenty-five."

"Good show. Enjoy your stay."

'Q' Flag Down

We were now free to haul down our yellow quarantine flag, the so-called "Q" flag that all ships must fly when entering a foreign port from abroad.

By international law it is the formal signal requesting permission to enter a country and usually results in having a medical officer as well as customs and immigration officials giving you clearance.

Once they had departed we lowered our dinghy and rowed over to speak with other boats who had also come across from the Canary Islands. At the time there were 12 in the anchorage.

Near-Tragedy

Astern of Powindah was the English ketch Suzanne, a 53-foot boat built in 1900. She had made an excellent passage of 22 days but her captain, John Lewis, had experienced near tragedy en route.

"We were almost halfway across," he said, "when the wind dropped and we all decided to have a swim. With six of us on board it was a simple job to rig up a trailing rope, jump over the side, swim around a bit and then get hauled back. Everything went well until it was my turn. I was in the water, swimming back to the boat, when I felt a searing pain across my chest. It was like a whip lash. I'd been stung by a poisonous jellyfish. I screamed at the boys to haul me out. When they got me aboard I went unconscious.

"They radioed for medical advice but there was no one around to hear. For a while they thought I was going to cash in my chips, which would have been unfortunate because I was the only one who could navigate. However, after three days I was able to take sights again."

Then came the story of Akka, a 36-foot cutter-rigged sloop bound from Holland to San Francisco. As the captain, Peter Passano, put it: "We were bowling along, minding our own business there in the middle of the ocean when all of a sudden an enormous tanker loomed over the horizon, on a reciprocal course to ours. She stopped and we went alongside. It was the Universe Admiral taking oil from Curacao to Las Palmas. Her skipper asked us if there was anything we needed. When we said no he actually asked us to come aboard for lunch. But it was too risky bringing the boat alongside, so we had to decline his invitation."

Our sister-ship Santana, which took 26 days to cross, said they had been hove to in the same gale we had experienced after leaving the Canary Islands. "We left all the bottles we were throwing away screwed up tight, so you'd know someone was out there with you."

Mutiny on Ketch

Not all the boats enjoyed harmonious crossings. One large ketch had a mutiny on board. Fortunately for her skipper, reputed to be a harder man than Bligh himself, the dissension did not become violent until he dropped anchor in Barbados. Swarms of police suddenly arrived in a patrol boat, the crew of two girls and two men were put ashore, while Bligh did his best to get them locked up. He failed in this and the crew scattered like mice from a cat.

Perhaps the most unusual voyageur to cross was a young German ice-cream salesman from Bremen. Gunter's boat was barely 19 feet long and built of figerglas. His only crew was a raven-haired French female who never wore clothing, either at sea or in port. Someone told this to a Barbados newspaper man. When he drew alongside for a story, up on deck flounced Cherie—a barking poodle.

Industry Shift

Only a few years ago, agriculture, fishing, and silk production were Japan's main industries. Today, the major industries are heavy machinery, chemicals and heavy electrical and electronic equipment. Japan ranks second in the rayon, synthetic fibre, ball bearing, polyethylene and television manufacturing industries.

Hundreds of Bars

Japan's Ginza strip provides an excellent opportunity for photographs. The lights and nightclubs are so spectacular, color film seems the logical choice for most pictures. Tokyo has hundreds of cafes, bars, and nightclubs on the Ginza.

Nightmare for Engineers Sight-Seers' Dream Scene

Southern California is the only place in the United States where mountains rise right up from a palm-fringed shoreline. This causes some trouble for highway and railroad builders but it makes for spectacular scenery.

Mountains are so close to the ocean at Santa Monica Bay that their "toes" literally have been eaten away by the centuries of waves. The result is the Palisades sea cliffs rising some 160 feet above the bathing beach and yacht harbor.

This is where millions of inlanders have had their first thrilling look at the Pacific Ocean. It's also where famed Wilshire Boulevard, curving out from downtown Los Angeles, meets the ocean — an abrupt end at Palisades Park.

PALM TREES

Santa Monica has landscaped the cliff top with palm trees and winter-blooming flowers. There are comfortable seats where visitors can watch the sails dotting the great arc of the bay and enjoy the magnificent ocean sunsets.

A few miles up the coast, the canyons of the Santa Monica Mountains open out on the ocean at Malibu Beach, favorite of Hollywood celebrities and surf riders. The Pacific Coast Highway skirts the ocean snugly to round the end of the range and heads on up past Oxnard, site of the navy's biggest Sea-Bee base, and Ventura, known as the poinsettia city, because of its thousands of the blooms.

CARS SPRAYED

Along the stretch called the Rincon coast, the highway and railroad are crowded so close beneath the mountains that on a windy day with a high tide, the ocean spray can coat the windshields. At the same time the crack Daylight streamliner of the Southern Pacific may be thundering by a few feet further inland.

On a surfing day, hundreds of bronzed athletes will be riding their boards, as many as a dozen at a time on each wave. Surf fishermen cast their lines from the roadside.

What looks like a giant creature from Mars on stilts offshore is a sea-going oil well tapping a petroleum pool beneath the ocean. One man-made oil island is landscaped with palm trees like a tropical atoll.

Nearing Santa Barbara, the canyons widen out a fit for thousands of lemon trees which like this mild coastal climate. Many are square trees, trimmed that way for better fruit growth. A flat-topped grove looks as though one could walk on it. No matter what month, the lemon harvest will be under way. Lemon trees blossom and bear fruit continuously. In a year a good tree may produce 3,000 lemons.

SOCIAL CENTRE

The old Spanish California Dons made Santa Barbara their social centre. Much of its charm comes from its mountains rising from the sea. The city spreads fanwise back from the palm-fringed beach and yacht marina, then up onto low mesas, into wooded cayons and out on the slopes of the Santa Ynez Mountains.

The rise is quick. It's less than two miles from ocean surf to national forest and less than four miles to the 4,213-foot height of Montecito Peak.

Up this mountain wall the Santa Barbarans have erected their pretty Spanish and ranch villas along such streets as Padre, Camino Alto (High Road), Sierra Vista (Mountain View), rising finally to Camino Cielo Avenue of the Sky).

The view from these balcony streets is magnificent. Red tile roofs dot the town. Beyond, the smooth waters of the yacht barbor are dotted with sails. Out beyond, is the protecting bulk of Santa Cruz Island, often gathering up a long billow of cloud.

VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

This Way, That Way At 'Directions 67'

By TONY EMERY

The Vancouver Art Gallery has an interesting show running until the end of the month.

Under a banner labelled "Directions 67", a trio of young artists offers a variety of mind — and sense — stretching experiences.

Emery

Two of them, Bodo Pfeifer and Audrey Capel Doray, have been seen in Victoria; their names and work will be familiar to visitors to Pandora's Box in its original location, and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria during the "Young B.C. Painters" show.

Miss Doray, a McGill graduate, class of '52, is an alumnus of Hayter's famous Atelier 17 in Paris and has taught at the Vancouver School of Art. She is an accomplished printmaker who uses commercial techniques to lay out hard-edge typographical designs of a rather striking kind.

To prevent the words from losing their surface importance she prints them backwards so that the eye can see them but the mind finds it difficult to abstract the sense from the signs. Her Hexagon — six polarized light boxes — carry her familiar configurations a stage further by adding references and allusions to objects in nature, famous works of art, and other material hitherto absent from her work.

I have always found her a most interesting artist even in her austerest productions, and am intrigued to observe that she is now indulging a mildly ironic kind of romanticism in her nature. I would hazard a guess that a strong influence may have been the Dante's Inferno drawings of Rauschenberg, and I shall watch for further developments along this line.

Bodo Pfeifer paints on a large scale. His hard-edge forms, usually stripes in brilliant, eye-battering acrylic hues, overlaid with a more lyrically decorative motif which counterpoints the linear substructure, have the ability to make color move in a most exciting way.

Pfeifer's canvases need to be seen from a good way off if they are to be given the opportunity to achieve their full effect.

I can remember looking at one that was hanging in the little gallery in the Centennial Wing of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria when I was standing 80 feet away in the old Spencer mansion.

The movement forward of a red diamond in the bottom half of the painting was magnified at that distance until it became an alarming lunge at the viewer, and the pull of a balancing blue diamond in the top half exercised a magnetic attraction into the depths of the painting. Up closer one found that the push-pull worked far more subtly, producing a gently oscillating motion of a deliciously reminiscent kind: Hammock, boat-at-anchor, rocking-chair, or whatever other pleasant connotation the movement may hold for you.

There is "more going on," as the op painters say, in the Pfeifers at present on view in Vancouver than in his previous work, and all of it is controlled by the painter in a most impressive way. In my book he and Brian Fisher are the two most impressive young exponents of color space painting at present at work in this country. Their combined age is 58.

Much younger is Michael Hayden, 24-year-old graduate of the Ontario College of Art and principal designer of the psychedelic festival "Perception 67" at the University of Toronto last February.

He offers "light sculptures" in a darkened room, accompanied by taped electronic music and "white noise" of various kinds. Computers control but do not regiment the happenings, so that the effect is of a random pattern of visual and aural experiences, the aim presumably being to "bombard the senses" in the manner advocated by Artaud.

Those who are old enough to remember real bombardments about the time Hayden was first seeing the light will find it a fairly mild workout for the senses, but given the budget of several embattled nations to work with I imagine he could do a fair job in the way of a happening. Hayden's bombardments do not terrify — but neither do they do much of anything else.

Dancing Major Scot Export

FREDERICTON (CP)—One Scottish export that seems to have taken a firm hold in many parts of the world is Scottish country dancing.

Fredericton has an active chapter but Mrs. L. S. Edwards, a member of the group and a certified teacher of the dance, didn't learn the art in Scotland at all.

"Despite its name and origins, Scottish country dancing is absolutely international in character," she says. "I first took it up when I was a little girl in Malta."

Mrs. Edwards says the Royal Society of Scottish Contry Dancing standardizes and co-ordinates chapters in various parts of the world, including Tokyo.

"The New York chapter likes to boast that it's 95 per cent Jewish."

The society sends a representative to Canada once a year to conduct dance examinations and certify teachers.

The Fredericton chapter was organized seven years ago and has 35 members, mostly from the faculty of the University of New Brunswick where weekly sessions are held.

EIGHT YEARS

One man hasn't missed a three-hour session in eight years although he is 68. And two other men refused to miss the sessions all last summer despite the fact both were in neck-to-waist casts with broken backs.

Mrs. Edwards says the music is similar to that used for square dancing but usually is rhythmically more interesting and dignified. Footwork relies on the five basic positions of ballet.

ENTERTAINMENT CALENDAR

Thursday, April 27, 8 p.m., McPherson Playhouse: Greater Victoria Centennial Society presents "Townscape Rediscovered," Victoria's own film, plus "The Railrodders" and "Expo 67—a Preview."

Redgraves: Sharing Triumphs And Mourning the Disasters

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — For Vanessa and Lynn Redgrave, the Golden Girls of the British theatre, the world of stage and screen is suddenly their oyster — and it is crammed with girls.

The fame of the Redgrave girls, already well launched in Britain, has taken off like a rocket since they landed at opposite ends of the United States to spread their talents on a wider stage — Vanessa turning singer in Hollywood's version of Camelot and Lynn knocking Broadway flat with her portrait of a zany debutante in Black Comedy.

NO RIVALRY

Products of a theatrical dynasty going back more than a century, Sir Michael Redgrave's daughters appear to enjoy a remarkable lack of rivalry, although Lynn, who always regarded herself as the ugly duckling, has in fact climbed to fame on parts discarded by her glamorous elder sister.

"They're so different there is no feeling of competition between them," says Lady Redgrave, actress Rachel Kempson.

"We have no jealousy in our family. We share each other's triumphs and mourn each other's disasters."

Lynn puts it differently: "We're a mutual admiration society."

It's an impressive family by any standards, brilliantly talented, good-looking and remarkably tall for actors. Sir Michael, at 58 one of the world's finest Shakespearean actors, and son Corin, 27, are both well over six feet; blonde, blue-eyed Vanessa and auburn-haired, grey-eyed Lynn both top five-foot-ten.

MISSED DAD IN HAMLET

The Redgrave children were raised in a theatrical atmosphere although it was by no means certain Lynn and Corin would follow family tradition.

As a teen-ager Lynn suffered agonies because of her size, felt over-shadowed by Vanessa and was so bored by the theatre she stayed home to hear a radio program rather than watch her father play Hamlet.

An expert equestrienne, she plunged into show-jumping in an attempt to score at something the others couldn't do, collecting an array of trophies.

Vanessa, on the other hand, was clearly destined for the footlights with her romantic temperament and rich imagination.

Her father says she is "divinely mad, divinely inspired."

"She has her own particular kind of radiance that makes everyone adore her."

Lady Redgrave says Vanessa has a humility about her that ensures she will "never become bigheaded."

Vanessa herself, once a fervent ban-the-bomb campaigner, says she is "fantastically concentrated" and "fanatical" when working. She excludes everything from her mind except her two little girls Joely Kim and Natasha, children of her broken marriage to movie director Tony Richardson.

She made her debut at 21 with her father in A Touch of the Sun and four years later was firmly established as Britain's leading young actress after a flashing, inspired performance as Rosalind in a Royal Shakespeare Company production of As You Like It.

Meanwhile Lynn decided the stage might be more rewarding than the saddle, and while Vanessa was being acclaimed as actress of the year for Rosalind, she made a hit in a small part Vanessa had turned down in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Sir Laurence Olivier offered her a place in the National Theatre Company and another Redgrave had taken off.

Lynn's first film role was one of the shortest speaking parts on record. As a freckled country wench in Tom Jones, all she did was shout, "Rape."

But her playing of an Irish city colleen in The Girl with Green Eyes brought out a fine comic talent which flowered richly, touching slapstick and pathos, in Georgy Girl, the tale of a plain, pudgy girl trying desperately to keep up with her glamorous friend.

Music School Plans Concerts

A series of five Victoria School of Music concerts will be held in May, three by the faculty and two by students.

Wednesday concerts by the faculty, May 3, 10 and 17, will be held at the School and will consist of chamber concerts for various conbinations of instruments.

Sunday concerts at McPherson Playhouse, May 21 and 28, will be given by the students.

Members and students of the School of Music are eligible for free tickets to all concerts. Non-members may purchase tickets for the entire series at $3, or attend individual concerts at $1 each.

As audiences attending the Wednesday night concerts are limited to 80, it will be necessary for members to phone the secretary, 384-1717 for tickets which will be mailed out in order of request.

Pianist Due At Playhouse

Placing emphasis on the compositions of Franz Liszt, pianist Richard Norris, who appears in recital at McPherson Playhouse Wednesday, has devoted a whole section of his program to the 19th century composer-arranger-pianist.

In the group, Norris explores both the lesser-known lyrical Liszt—in Sonetto 104 del Petrarca—and the spectacular Liszt — the Concert Etude in D flat.

Bach, Beethoven and Chopin also have prominence on the program, however. Revealing other facets of the pianist's musicianship will be three Bach arias and choral preludes arranged by Bauer, Petri and Busoni, and the Beethoven Moonlight Sonata.

Concluding will be the Chopin Nocturne in C Minor and Scherzo in B-Flat Minor.

Although a native Californian, Mr. Norris has spent considerable time in Hawaii when not concertizing abroad and in the United States.

On his last stay in Honolulu he commenced a study of the Hawaiian language.

Mr. Norris likes fine tropical apparel, dogs—two valuable blue English cockers are his constant companions—antique stores and gardens.

CITY CHURCHES

Everyone Welcome As Saint Honored

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Saint George of England has been called the most neglected saint in Christendom.

But he will be well honored Sunday by some 300 Scouts and Wolf Cubs who will parade to the Salvation Army Citadel on Pandora Avenue in a service at 2 p.m.

Saint George will also be honored by the Anglican church which bears his name—Saint George the Martyr, Cadboro Bay.

While the parish celebrates the 26th anniversary of its founding, it was not until Saint George's Day, 1951, that Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace of British Columbia turned the sod for the erection of Saint George's Church.

Rev. William Hills was rector until 1963, when the present rector, Rev. Dr. N. S. Noel, formerly dean of Calgary, was instituted.

Says Dr. Noel:

"We extend a most cordial welcome to all newcomers, visitors and friends as the church honors the saint whose name it bears."

Mrs. I. Glenday and Mrs. R. Bissenden will sing I Waited for the Lord (Mendelssohn) with the choir at Oak Bay United Church Sunday at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Mrs. Glenday will sing Green Pastures.

Rev. Alexander Calder will speak on One God or Many?

Dr. Kenneth Prior, former agricultural missionary in Angola, will continue the series The Cries of the World in Metropolotian United Church Sunday at 11 a.m.

"For the next four Sundays our services will be devoted to the cries, concerns and needs of the people of our city," says Rev. Albert King, minister at Metropolitan.

"We shall also consider the needs of our province, our country and reaches beyond—and the challenge they present to the church to answer these cries and to meet their needs."

The Sanctuary Choir, conducted by Frank Tupman, will sing Worship and Unto Thee, O Lord, with Eric Boothroyd at the organ.

Mr. Boothroyd's organ preludes will be Fantasy on a Yoruba Folk Tune and Larghetto and Gavotte.

At the evening worship, there will be a dialogue between Mr. King and A. Davidson of Victoria city welfare on The Cries of the Poor—the gap between the individual and the agency.

The CGIT and Hi-C Choir, conducted by Barbara Henderson, will sing When My World is Confusing.

Annual general meeting of the Unitarian Church of Victoria will be held in the Servetus Hall, 106 Superior Street, Sunday at 10 a.m.

There will be no church school and no services.

DR. PRIOR
. . . at Metropolitan

A chemistry professor at the University of Victoria will preach at the family communion service in Christ Church Cathedral Sunday.

He is Rev. Dr. Kenneth Moss, and he was recently awarded a grant from the National Research Council for research work in organic chemistry.

Last year he was ordained a deacon. Dr. Moss and his family are members of the parish of St. Barnabas Anglican Church, Victoria.

"We are grateful to him for accepting my invitation to come to us for four Sundays," says Dean Brian Whitlow.

The primary department of the Sunday school at St. Aidan's United Church will be special guests at the 11 a.m. service.

Rev. A. G. MacLeod's sermon topic will be Just Suppose and the soloist will be Keith Sturgeon. The choir will sing the anthem Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled.

At the evening worship Mr. MacLeod's subject will be When Learners Teach.

Rev. Father George, a missionary in New Guinea, will be guest preacher in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Metchosin, Sunday at 11 a.m.

Rev. Cyril Venables, the rector, will conduct the service.

Rev. Donald Hills, pastor of Collingwood Regular Baptist Church, Vancouver, will be guest speaker at both services in Central Baptist Church on Sunday.

His topic at the 11 a.m. hour will be Unashamed of the Gospel and in the evening Christ's Pathetic Question, dealing with the question asked by the Lord to the disciple Peter, "Simon Peter, lovest thou Me?"

Rev. Harold A. James, executive secretary of the Africa Evangelical Fellowship will speak at a mid-week prayer meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Concluding a series of studies on Religious Dimensions, Rev. Bruce Molloy will speak on Our God Is a God Who Moves, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

The evening worship will be conducted by Very Rev. J. Lewis McLean. Rev. Dr. Leonard Schell, formerly secretary of the Canadian Bible Society in northern Saskatchewan, will be guest preacher.

Music will include a solo by John Bray, The 23rd Psalm; the anthem As the Sun Doth Daily Rise; Fierce Rages the Tempest O'er the Deep, and O Come to My Heart, with William Kremer as soloist.

Dr. McLean will continue his adult Bible Study group Wednesday at 2 p.m.

At Emmanuel Baptist Church and Stevenson Memorial Church the pastor, Rev. Norman K. Archer, will give the third sermon on The Problem of Pain.

Mr. Archer says: "This week I shall be dealing with the origin of pain, and seeking to discover from the Bible narrative why it is that God has produced a world where pain and suffering is so much an integral part.

"We are not meant to be entirely mystified by the presence of pain—not that any simple answers can ever be given but there are enough clues in the Bible to provide us with a healthy and positive attitude towards human suffering."

Four new servers will be admitted to the servers' guild at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday at 11 a.m. They are Arthur Burgess, David Burgess, Carl Fossum and Alan Glenwright.

W. Robert Hunter will share in the conduct of the 11 a.m. service in First United Church Sunday.

Rev. Robert Morris will speak on The Vows of Confirmation at 9:30and 11 a.m., and the guest organist will be William McNeill.

The choirs, directed by William Gregory, will sing Blessed Are the Pure in Heart and For the Beauty of the Earth. Paul Wharf will be heard in the solo Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me.

At the 7:30 p.m. service in the chapel, Mr. Morris will speak on the subject on Being Indispensable.

Let Us Look at Ourselves will be the sermon Sunday by Rev. H. R. Whitmore in both Garden City and Wilkinson Road United Churches.

Catherine Hayhurst will be the soloist at the 10 a.m. service in Garden City and, at 11:15 in Wilkinson Road, the anthem will be All in an April Evening.

Bible Group Seeking Contacts

Rev. Dr. Leonard Schnell, for 27 years secretary of the North Saskatchewan district of the Canadian Bible Society, arrives in Victoria today for meetings here.

He will make personal contact with as many ministers of the churches as possible in order to have them appoint a Bible Society representative from each parish," says Rev. Cyril Venables, rector of St. Mary's, Metchosin.

Dr. Schnell will have three engagements on Sunday.

He will preach at Centennial United Church at 11 a.m. He will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Victoria branch, Canadian Bible Society at Belmont United Church Hall, Belmont and Begbie, at 2:30 p.m.

He will preach at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m.

"Dr. Schnell is a United Church minister and has rendered outstanding service to the Canadian Bible Society throughout Canada," says Mr. Venables.

Presbyterians Elect Slate At Meeting

Sunday, May 14, has been set as Industrial Thanksgiving Sunday for Victoria for 1967.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will hold the special service at 7:30 p.m. All churches are asked to include this note in their worship. Fuller details will be announced early in May.

New officers elected at the annual meeting recently were: president, Rev. Marvin G. Fowler; vice-president, Alan Baylis; secretary-treasurer, Rev. Harold T. Allen; program chairman, Larry Ryan.

Program studies have included the Use of Injunctions in Labor Disputes; Housing Needs in Canada and the Rose-Blanshard development project, with Geoffrey Greenhalgh; and the many new types of service opening up through the Canada manpower program under the guidance of Richard Sutcliffe of the Victoria Manpower Centre.

The Role of the Church in Society is being studied, and will engage the members' scrutiny in coming meetings.

CONSTRUCTED 14 years ago, Saint Barnabas Anglican Church will honor its patron saint Sunday, June 11. "Saint Barnabas was one of the world's first missionaries and a companion of Saint Paul," says Canon Brian Page, rector of Saint Barnabas Church since 1962.

ANGLICAN TAG GOES IN FRIENDLY MOVE

The Anglican church of St. David-by-the-Sea, Cordova Bay, no longer uses the word Anglican.

"This doesn't mean we have left the Anglican communion," said the vicar, Rev. Gordon Walker. "But in these ecumenical times, I don't feel we should emphasize our Anglicanism."

Mr. Walker said his church enjoys the most friendly relations with the neighboring United Church of Cordova Bay.

"We meet together for Bible study and find we have so much in common that it would be absurd to suggest there is any real distinction between an Anglican and a United Churchman."

Season of Freedom Marked by Jewish

By KAREL DE ROO
Temple Emanuel, Victoria

Victoria's Jewish community will celebrate Passover starting with a Community Seder at Temple Emanuel, Blanshard Street, Monday evening.

The Passover festival commemorates the season of freedom.

Pesach, the Hebrew name for Passover, comes from the verb which means "to skip over or pass over" and refers to the passing over by the destroying angel of the houses of the Israelites when the Lord smote the first-born of Egypt.

Passover has other names which are deeply significant. It is called "Zeman Herutenu" the season of our freedom and marks the emancipation of the children of Israel from their bondage of Egypt, but the actual birth of the children of Israel as a people.

CLEANSED

Several days before the first evening of Passover, or Seder night, the house is cleansed and prepared for the glad festival. All food used during the year is removed. It is the custom of the Jewish people, shortly before the actual Seder is started, to place a few crumbs of bread on window sills or other places easily accessible.

Following is an interesting ceremony, "Bedikat Hametz" searching for leaven—in which the father, usually followed by the little children, walks about the house to seek leaven.

He holds a candle in one hand and a feather in the other. He sweeps the leavened bread into a cloth to be burned, together with the contents on the following morning, so as to fulfil symbolically the Biblical command that all leaven must be removed from the dwelling.

No leavened bread, or any food prepared with leaven, may be eaten during the entire week of Passover. It is the custom in observant Jews to have separate dishes from those used during the rest of the year.

FAMILY HOLIDAY

The word Seder means order, for the order of procedure is definitely set in a ritual called the "Haggadah," a narration. The Seder has become the great family holiday of the Jewish home. Relatives and friends gather around a table resplendent with white and silver.

The table becomes a stage upon which the story of Israel's emancipation from the slavery of Egypt is enacted.

Special Passover wines are prepared and poured into the four cups that are drunk during the ceremony, each with a prayer of gratitude to God.

The Matzah or unleavened bread—the bread of affliction—symbolizes by its thinness the humiliation and the poverty of the people of Israel during several hundred years of slavery.

There are varied symbols of Passover upon the Seder table. At the head of the table in a beautifully decorated cloth or three layered silver tray, there are three Matzot unleavened bread said to represent symbolically the "Kohen, the Levi and the Israel, the three divisions of the Jewish people.

Then there is parsley—karpas—which is dipped in salt water, a simple reminder that as the ancient royal festivals began with a salad course, the Seder thus begins, for on this evening of Passover, every Israelite, being free, is a king.

There is a symbol of the —Haroset—or clay mixture, reminiscent of the brick material used in Egypt. In modern times this mixture is made of apples, nuts and wine to resemble the clay in appearance only. There is the bitter herb—maror—to remind the Jew of the bitterness of life of his ancestors under slavery.

There is the baked egg, symbol of the Passover sacrifice offered in ancient times in the Temple, and the shankbone—z'roa—which symbolizes the Paschal Lamb itself.

WINE DRUNK

Four cups of wine—Arba Kosot—are drunk by every member of the family during the Seder service.

An extra cup of wine is usually set on the table and is called the "cup of Elijah" in the Jewish tradition, is the harbiner of the redemption and the patron of the down-trodden and the persecuted.

It is the youngest child who asks four questions which begin the telling of the freedom story. The meal must be completed before midnight. A piece of "Matzah" called the Afikomen—desert—is the last morsel eaten before the final grace is said.

'SONG OF SONGS'

It is the custom to sing the "Song of Songs on the Sabbath of Passover. While it is considered one of the most beautiful collections of songs of love and of spring ever written, many sages of Israel saw in it an allegory of the love of God for Israel.

When they sang the verse "Hark! my beloved! behold, He commeth leaping from the mountains."

Passover helps to make the family, through its shared table ritual, into a warm and glowing community.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. is prepared to approve the sale of various drugs to Communist China to combat reported epidemics of cholera, meningitis and infectious hepatitis, officials said Friday.

DEAN WHITLOW
. . . prayer for synod

Communion To Launch Synod

The synod of the Anglican Church of British Columbia will meet in Christ Church Memorial Hall Thursday.

It opens with a Holy Communion service in the cathedral at 8 a.m.

"The synod is the Anglican church of this diocese sitting in council," says Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral.

"The archbishop delivers a charge. Reports are received from the various board and committees which the church has set up to do its work.

"Financial statements are considered and, hopefully, plans are made for the future. Pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit at the meetings next week," he said.

Kindergartens To Be Discussed

Bridging the gap between kindergarten and Grade 1 will be the topic of a panel discussion at Stevenson Memorial Baptist Church Hall at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

The discussion will highlight the annual meeting of the Vancouver Island Co-operative Playgroup Association. Meeting is open to all interested persons.

Starting the discussion will be panel members Mrs. H. P. Mickelson, primary supervisor of Saanich school district; Laura Stuart, kindergarten teacher at Frank Hobbs and Monterey School, and Mrs. Mildred Batstone, playgroup teacher at Lansdowne.

Women Ministers? Yes . . . When Needed

Should the Anglican Church of Canada have woman ministers?

"In our view, there is nothing wrong with it theologically," says Mrs. C. S. MacRae, national chairman of education, the Anglican Church Women, Toronto.

"But, at the moment, none of our members seem interested in having women clergy or deacons.

"At the same time, women are participating more fully in the life of the church. And we co-operate with male Anglicans in all church activities."

Mrs. MacRae addressed a meeting of the Anglican Church Women at the church of Saint David by the Sea, Cordova Bay, Friday.

"We operate on a budget of $500,000 for the whole of Canada," she said. "We work for all kinds of charities, at home and overseas.

"As long as the Anglican church can attract enough male clergymen, I don't think we shall worry about women ministers."

Dog Pack Rips Zoo Animals

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Dora the deer, Mary the lamb and Pete and Repete the Nubian goats—pets for all of Baltimore's children—were among 45 animals killed Friday by a pack of dogs.

The seven dogs, described as big and stocky, broke into the children's zoo by burrowing under an eight-foot chain-link fence. They attacked, killed or crippled the helpless animals, then fled.

"The dogs just killed for the sake of killing," said Ruth Chumley, zoo superintendent.

"It was pure slaughter."

The animals included 34 rabbits, three lambs, two guinea pigs, two small nubian goats, one hybrid deer, two white-tail deer and one duck.

A sheep and lamb were found with broken legs. Officials said they may have to be destroyed.

Arthur Watson, director of the Baltimore Zoo, said the dogs ate only one animal, a rabbit. The children's zoo is part of the Baltimore Zoo.

"The dollars and cents loss is nominal," said Watson.

"The big loss is the love of the children who come back every week. A lot of them do. They get to know them by name."

UNDERGROUND HOSPITAL FOUND BY 'TUNNEL RAT'

LAI THIEU, South Vietnam (AP)—Within sight of Saigon's night lights, the Viet Cong carved out an elaborate underground hospital the length of four football fields. American soldiers found it by chance.

"We had bulldozed over it for a week to make farmland for the friendlies," said one officer. "We had no idea the place was here—and so close to Saigon and our base camp."

A professional "tunnel rat," Sgt. William Wilson of Rochester, N.Y., found it while wandering in the debris churned up by the bulldozers.

He lowered himself into a well and began gouging in the dirt wall with his long switchlade stilleto. Suddenly the earth gave way.

Wilson had found a tunnel—a small one, about 20 inches square at the entrance.

Wilson crawled, squeezed, pulled and pushed his body through the darkness, zigging left, then right until he fell head-first into a room with clean linen.

He checked out another tiny tunnelway. It led him into another room, another passage, more zigs and zags, then into a catacomb-like hospital ward.

Beds were carved out of the marble-hard laterite soil.

At the end of another shaft, Wilson found an immaculate operating room.

'Keep the Faith, Baby' Keeps the Credit Too

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Presbyterian minister says he has found "fascinating parallels" between some passages in sermons in Adam Clayton Powell's soon-to-be-published book, "Keep the Faith, Baby!" and passages in books by two noted theologians.

In an article in the current Saturday Review, the Rev. David Poling pointed out similarities in Powell's sermons to quotations from the Rev. George A. Buttrick's "Interpreter's Bible" and the Rev. Halford Luccock's "Marching Off the Map." Poling lists 19 Powell quotations which parallel quotations from the two books.

"One of Pastor Powell's difficulties is giving credit to original sources," Poling wrote.

Powell's book will be published by Trident Press May 5. The collection of sermons are printed without footnotes except for direct Bible references. It is not unusual, however, for preachers to use material from the Buttrick book—long used as a sermon aid—without giving the Buttrick credit.

Poling gives an example of a passage by Buttrick, former pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, which is paralleled in one of Powell's sermons.

. . . coincidences

Buttrick: "Jesus would not centre his mission in an economic crusade. He would not live merely for time, or forsake a cross for a bakeshop. Man does live by bread . . . but man does not live by bread alone."

Powell: "Jesus did not centre his mission on a economic crusade. He did not forsake the cross for a bakeshop. Man does live by bread, but not by bread alone."

Poling gives this example of a passage from Luccock, a former professor at the Yale Divinity School, which has a "curious duplication" in Powell's book.

Luccock: "If we are to be the right size for our day and its demands, we must be tall enough to bump the sky."

Powell: "If we are to be the right size for our day, we must be tall enough to bump the sky."

"Now we must consider Powell as a politician, playboy and preacher," Poling said. "Like some of his colleagues, he has discovered that it is one thing to preach and quite another to publish. Dean Listo Pope of Yale once said to his students before an examination: 'I trust no one will glance at another's paper, for lo, if he does, some Saturday night he will take another man's sermon'."

Poling is a nephew of the prominent clergyman, the Rev. Daniel A. Poling. The younger Poling is an editor of the Christian Herald.

ARMY OFFICERS

New Policy On Training

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons this week he soon will announce a new policy on officer training of university students.

He said the defence department has been discussing changes in existing programs with representatives of the Canadian Association of Universities and Colleges.

At present university students may enter either the reserve or regular forces. In the first case they join regular units for three summers and are not bound to any further service.

The second group receives tuition and monthly allowances at college, in return for a commitment of summer service and a minimum number of years as regular officers in the forces after graduation.

Mr. Hellyer was replying to Gordon Churchill, a former Conservative defence minister, who asked whether it was the government's intention to drop the Canadian Officer Training Corps, the permanent force plan.

Mr. Churchill said the forces would be well advised to continue drawing on the universities for officers in view of the minister's "purge" of senior military advisers.

King, Spock Hinted to Run Against LBJ

By ANDREW J. GLASS

WASHINGTON (WP) — A nationwide voter registration effort by the peace movement will be announced Sunday by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The major effort to organize fresh support against the Vietnam war will be launched at a press conference in Cambridge, Mass., by Dr. King, pediatrician Dr. Benjamin Spock of Cleveland, and Robert Scheer, managing editor of Ramparts Magazine.

The weekend meeting near the Harvard common comes amid increasing indications that key elements within the peace movement will seek to run King as a "peace candidate" for president in 1968.

THIRD PARTY

According to one plan, King, a Nobel prize winner and head of the southern Christian leadership conference, would be joined on the third-party ticket by Spock, who is also co-chairman of S.A.N.E., a pacifist group.

King will announce creation of a Vietnam Summer Committee in the Cambridge area, King's group will be aided by an organization called New Politics for Peace in Vietnam. It includes a number of Howard University faculty members.

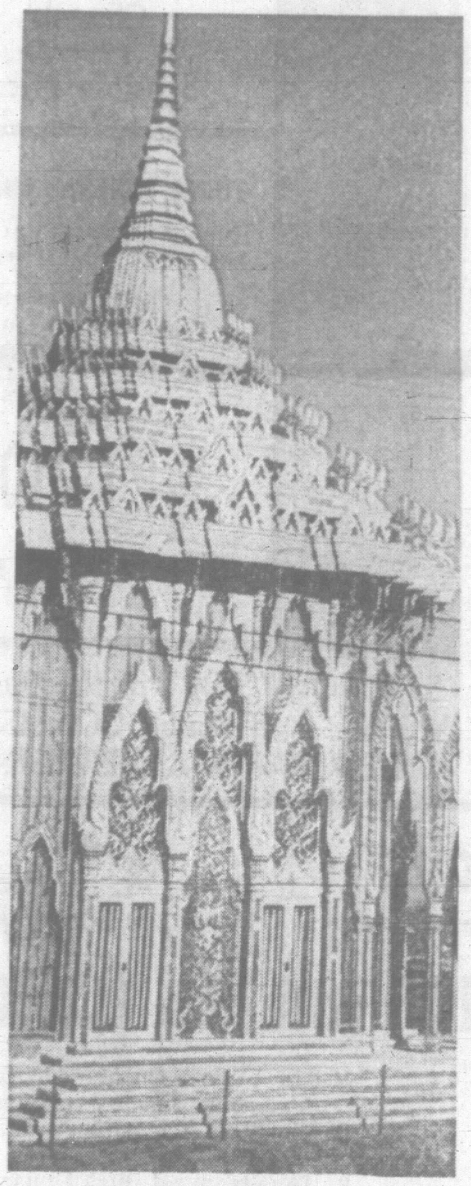
Expo 67 Pavilions All Shapes, Sizes



Oriental touch from Thailand

A wonderland of curves, loops, peaks and points awaits visitors attending the opening of Expo 67 in Montreal April 28.

All major pavilions are completed.

Expected to be crowd favorites are the spherical United States pavilion above and the Soviet entry below.

The tent-like German pavilion made of plastic and steel (at right) is expected to be another popular feature.

About 10,000 workers are busy putting the finishing touches on Canada's world fair.

There is no panic on the grounds and no one is working overtime.

Much of the calm is based on the general feeling that only the main features of the fair need be ready by the end of April.

Most countries will continue last-minute work on their displays right up to an unofficial final deadline of May 15.

The crowds are expected to grow daily from that point.

Visitors can reach the Expo site by subway from downtown Montreal. Once on the site a free 3½-mile train ride around the displays gives tourists a chance to orient themselves and plan their excursions.

'Law and Prophets' Religious Story Of Wonders, Marvels

To give a graphic idea of the task of condensation, emphasis and focusing which confronted the makers of "The Law and the Prophets," a story of wonders and marvels drawn from the Old Testament and told through masterpieces of religious art, the following script statistic may be illuminating: There are 592,493 words in the King James version of the Old Testament. The script of "The Law and the Prophets totals 5,541.

A "Project 20" production, the program will be colorcast on the NBC television network Sunday at 10 on Channel 5.

The script has been woven together almost completely from the King James text itself, the writer's main function having been to find, and to combine in one cohesive narrative flow, the words of the Old Testament which most closely fit the pictures on the screen as they unfold in the telling of the story. Not only are major passages of narration taken, whenever possible, from the Bible itself, but transition, comment and elaboration are also couched in the original language of the Old Testament.

"The sheer narrative power of the King James Version is unsurpassed, as is proved by the unfailing grip it has exerted on English-speaking peoples throughout the centuries, despite all attempts at revision and modernization," Mr. Hanser says. "The directness and simplicity of the Biblical language lend themselves ideally to spoken delivery, and are superbly suited to the off-screen voice technique of the documentary form, especially when used by such a master as our narrator, Alexander Scourby."

War Film

French film-maker Pierre Schoendoerffer—a top war correspondent and former prisoner of war in Vietnam—lived six weeks with a U.S. platoon to film an authentic record of the lives of troops fighting in Vietnam.

The result, a one-hour color documentary entitled The Anderson Platoon, will have its North American premiere Sunday night at 10 on Channels 2, 6.

The program shows the men of a platoon of the 1st U.S. Cavalry Regiment—under the command of Lieut. Joseph Anderson, a 24-year-old Negro—in action and at rest. The film features scenes of the platoon capturing a Viet Cong guerilla, wolfing down canned rations in a drenching rain, on monotonous jungle patrols, preparing for a major offensive action, and relaxing on furlough in Saigon. Time magazine reported that top U.S. television officials who have seen The Anderson Platoon consider it the best documentary of the Vietnam war to date.

Passover Special

A drama in observance of Passover, "How Far Away, How Long Ago," will be colorcast as an "Eternal Light" special on the NBC television network Sunday at 5 on Channel 5.

The program, written by Joseph Mindel, is based on "To the Bridal Canopy," a story by S. Y. Agnon, a 1966 Nobel Prize-winner in literature.

This is a story of a widow and a widower who find release from loneliness through celebration of the Passover Seder. The setting is a poor village in Eastern Europe about 75 years ago.

Telephone Hour

The final Bell Telephone Hour of the season will present noted Spanish musicians appearing in the Prado Museum in Madrid in a colorcast titled "El Prado: Masterpieces and Music" Sunday on Channel 5 at 6:30.

Guitarist Andres Segovia, soprano Victoria de Los Angeles, pianist Alicia de Larrocha and flamenco singer Roque Montoya will be joined by the Coros y Danzas de Espana in musical performances given in front of the world-renowned masterpieces of painting.

The Prado Museum of Spain has long been known for one of the world's greatest collections of paintings. The cameras of the Bell Telephone Hour are the first that have been allowed in to film these works for television. Great works of Velazquez, Goya and El Greco will be seen. Though the museum contains great art from many countries, the producers concentrated on Spanish art as a backdrop for the Spanish music.

Meet the Press

Former governor of Alabama George C. Wallace will be the guest on "Meet the Press" Sunday at 1 on Channel 5, originating live from Washington, D.C.

Mr. Wallace is now the top assistant to his wife, Governor Lurleen Wallace, and also a possible presidential candidate in the 1968 elections.

Interviewing Mr. Wallace will be: David Broder, of the Washington Post; James J. Kilpatrick, of the Richmond News Leader; Charles Quinn, NBC News correspondent, and Lawrence E. Spivak, permanent panel member and producer of "Meet the Press."

SUSAN FLANNERY
. . . lovely psychiatrist

TV Actress Has Many Interests

HOLLYWOOD—Susan Flannery wanted to take a pre-med course but the college counsellor advised her to go into acting.

Otherwise she might have been a doctor or psychiatrist. Now she just acts like one.

Susan plays the role of the psychiatrist, Dr. Laura Spencer, in "Days of Our Lives" on the NBC television network.

"Six months before got this role I was up for the role of a psychiatrist in a movie," Susan said laughing. "They thought I looked too young to be a psychiatrist."

Susan is in her early 20s. Her blue eyes, honey-blonde hair and lithe 118-lb., five-foot-seven figure would be reason enough for making an appointment with Dr. Laura Spencer.

"I like to paint, refinish and upholster furniture when I have free time," said Susan. "I also love oil painting. My favorite subjects are flowers, especially daisies."

The house is loaded with her paintings.

"My mother gives guided tours to anyone who comes," said Susan. "She shows them my progress, from bad to not so bad."

Susan comes from an artistic family. Her mother was a noted interior decorator in Florida and her late father, an automobile industry executive, wrote poetry.

Susan enjoys writing and reading.

"I've written some poetry and several one-act plays," she said.

"I also like to write five-line character sketches of people. I do a great deal of reading. I've been plodding through Will Durant's nine-volume 'History of Civilization'. He has one more volume to write.

"I think he'll finish before I will."

SCHOLARSHIP

Susan was born in New York City where she attended Cathedral High School. She received a scholarship to Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and enrolled subsequently at Stevens College, Mo., where she produced and directed TV and film documentaries, in addition to taking a heavy study load.

She declined a graduate school scholarship to Yale and joined a repertory group. Then she went to the Phoenix Little Theatre winning the best actress award for her performance in "Country Girl." She theatre arts afrom Arizona received a master's degree in State University.

Her TV appearances include Time Tunnel, Felony Squad, Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, Burke's Law, Hazel, Ben Casey, and Slattery's People, among others.

Expo Opening on Thursday

Glamor, Excitement Of World's Fair Ceremonies Carded

During the six-month run of Expo 67, Canada will be host to the world and the city of Montreal will be an international showcase attracting an estimated 25 to 30 million visitors.

CBC television will bring Canadians live, color coverage of the dignity, glamour and excitement of the official inauguration of the universal and international exhibition on Thursday at 11:30 a.m. on Channels 2, 6 and 8, with a repeat of the highlights from 1 to 2 p.m. on Sunday, April 30. Expo won't be open to the public until April 28 but 7,000 guests will attend the official ceremonies on April 27.

To start the special telecast, Montreal singer-actress Andree Champagne will invite the world—in English and French—to help Canada celebrate the centennial of confederation. Expo is the first world exhibition of the first category to be held in the western hemisphere and some 70 participating nations will help illustrate the fair's central theme—Man and His World.

Film Tribute

The telecast will feature a film tribute to Antoine de Saint-Exupery, author of Terre des Hommes, which gave Expo its theme. The film salute will also show how the many federal, provincial, foreign, industrial and "theme" pavilions and exhibits combine to vividly tell the story of Man and His World—his past accomplishments and his future.

The live portion of the program will begin with the arrival of Expo Commissioner-General Pierre Dupuy and invited dignitaries at the Place des Nations on the Expo site—scene of the official inauguration ceremonies. Those who will speak from the Tribune of Honor, in addition to Mr. Dupuy, include Governor-General Roland Michener, Prime Minister Lester Pearson, Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec, Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal, and Jan-Albert Goris, president of the College of Commissioners General of International Exhibitions.

Other guests at the Place des Nations will include federal and provincial ministers, MPs, senators, members of the diplomatic corps, university presidents, church leaders, trade union officials, presidents of participating companies and representatives of participating nations.

Highlight of the ceremonies will be the arrival of torch bearers from Ottawa carrying the Centennial Flame, the lighting of the Centennial Flame at Expo by Prime Minister Pearson, and the declaration by Governor-General Michener that Expo is officially open.

Tijuana Brass

In the fall of 1965, six musicians and their unknown leader dragged their instruments into a major Hollywood rehearsal hall for a run-through of the Danny Kaye Show.

They were the scheduled guests on the show that week and the general feeling was that the producer was doing some poor group a kindly favor. After all, who'd ever heard of something called Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass?

From the first note of Alpert's trumpet and drummer Nick Ceroli's compelling, distinctive beat, something happened and has kept on happening through seven hit albums and the likes of which the music business hasn't seen since the initial breakthrough of Elvis Presley.

On Monday night at 9 on Channels 2, 6 and 7, CBC television will present Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, an hour-long color special in which the band will perform its unique rich-toned arrangements and reprise record hits at a variety of locations in southern California and Mexico.

In the short time Alpert introduced his jazz inflected mariachi music he has become one of the leading musical attractions in the world with record sales in the multi-millions, television appearances by the score and a series of standing-room-only concerts around the world.

Alpert, a native of Los Angeles, was so imspired by the sound of mariachi music played at Tijuana bullfights that he and a friend, Jerry Moss, decided to adapt and record a tune written by a friend.

The Pop Scene

"Inside Pop — the Rock Revolution," a CBS news special exploring the composition, beat and meaning of the pop-music scene, will be broadcast in color Tuesday night at 10 on Channel 7.

Investigating the mystique of this often strange, often compelling scene and its sound, the broadcast goes to both poles of the musical world. David Oppenheim wrote and produced the broadcast.

FAMED musical favorites, the Tijuana Brass, will star in an hour-long special on the CBC-TV network Monday night at 9. The program will be on Channels 2, 6 and 7.

Leonard Bernstein, music director of the New York Philharmonic; contemporary pop stars including Herman's Hermits, Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys, the Hollies and Janis Ian, and spokesmen for some of the new music world's leading groups are among the participants.

Bernstein, famed for his conducting of classical works and composing music for Broadway and ballet, takes a hard look at pop—the music, lyrics and sound—and describes what he thinks is and is not valuable in it. He invites the viewer along to study pop music and pop musicians because "perhaps by learing about them we can learn something about our own future."

Herman and his Hermits and the Hollies are followed on a wild, whirlwind tour; Janis Ian, 15-year-old folk-rock singer, sings her own composition, "Society's Child," and Brian Wilson, leader of the Beach Boys, performs his new song, "Surf's Up." Tim Buckley, a folk-rock singer and composer, also performs.

Jim McGuinn, leader of the Byrds: Frank Zappa, leader of the Mothers, and rock musicians on "the L.A. scene" talk about their participation in pop.

Festival

Montreal playwright M. Charles Cohen's new teleplay for CBC-TV's Festival series, The True Bleeding Heart of Martin B., stars Paul Soles as a little man searching for himself through a maze of guilts and fears.

Martin B. will be telecast on Channel's 2, 6 Wednesday night at 9:30. The production by George Bloomfield also stars Len Birman as Wolfie, Martin B's psychiatrist.

This comedy of the subconscious is offbeat in its approach and its shooting technique. The production was taped by a camera mobile unit in and around the city of Toronto—on the Scarborough bluffs, on top of buildings; on the Gardiner Expressway, and in a used car lot, to pinpoint a few of the locations.

The settings are real, yet the play itself is almost pure fantasy. The adventures of Martin B. are all in his mind, and his disjointed journey to understanding of himself is filled with images that shift and change. "The imagined images are suggested by very real guilts and fears," says Bloomfield. "While that called for fantasy, the play has a deeper kind of reality than even naturalistic form."

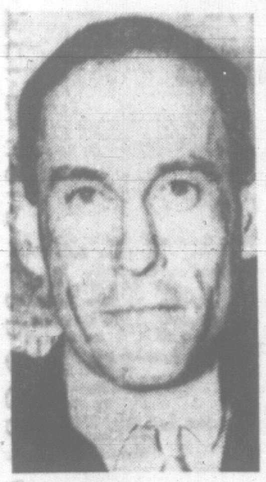
U.K. Liberal Leader Joins Parade to Expo

LONDON (CP) — Jeremy Thorpe, the articulate young radical who has led the British Liberal party for three months, leaves Sunday for a six-day visit to Canada—the first of three British party leaders to visit Ottawa and Expo 67.



THORPE
. . . arrives Sunday

"It is a great pleasure to be making my first official overseas visitor as Liberal leader to a country that has a Liberal government," Thorpe said Friday in announcing his itinerary.

Thorpe was elected leader of the party in January by his nine party colleagues in Parliament after the resignation of Jo Grimmon.

He is scheduled to arrive in Ottawa Sunday night and meet members of the Canadian Young Liberal Federation the following morning. Among other engagements, Thorpe will call on Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday and attend the inauguration of Expo 67 in Montreal Thursday.

He leaves for home next Saturday—his 38th birthday.

Thorpe has established a reputation as a dynamic speaker, an alert organizer and an outspoken radical since he was elected to Parliament as member for North Devon in 1959. As party treasurer since 1964, he doubled the struggling party's annual income in two years.

Thorpe, an elegant bachelor barrister with an Eton and Oxford background and a father and grandfather who were Tory MPs, has taken a stance on the left wing of his party.

His public proposal at a party conference last fall that RAF planes should bomb Rhodesian railways to enforce sanctions gained him the nickname Bomber Thorpe among political opponents.

A speaker with an adept turn of phrase — he described the British House of Lords as proof that there is life after death—Thorpe has also gained a reputation as a mimic. His imitations of prominent politicians are notorious in the lobbies of Westminster.

TONGUE WAR

Bulldogs Snarl At 'Muzzle'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Bulldog party said Friday night its president, Colin John Ross, has been given notice by the federal government in an effort to muzzle, the party, which opposes bilingualism.

J. Walter Miller, co-founder with Mr. Ross of the Bulldog party, issued what he described as a photocopy of a letter to Mr. Ross from J. C. Best, director of personnel for the comptroller of the treasury.

The document says Mr. Ross has been quoted as "publicly criticizing government policy and the prime minister who is the head of the government."

"As you are aware your employment as a casual clerk in the agriculture division treasury office is scheduled to terminate on or about April 28, 1967.

"The purpose of this letter is to inform you that if, in the remaining period of your employment, you make any further public statements criticizing government policy or members of the government your services will be immediately terminated."

Mr. Miller said Mr. Ross had never been informed his job as a temporary financial clerk was to finish at any particular date.

BE KIND TO CATS, RUSSIANS URGED

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet publication has called for a law to protect dogs and cats against torture and wanton killing.

The weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta — Literary Gazette — cited extermination programs in various areas where little care was taken to distinguish between pets and strays.

The newspaper noted many other countries have a law and proclaimed "it is high time" for the Soviet Union to follow suit.

School Tax Shift Sought

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Mayor L. H. Lewry announced Friday he is asking the mayors of all Saskatchewan cities to meet to discuss immediate need for taxation reform in an effort to remove education costs from property.

The meeting also would consider the idea of a Saskatchewan association of mayors, possibly affiliated with the Saskatchewan urban municipalities association.

Mayor Lewry said he believed such services as education, health and welfare have a direct bearing on property assessment and added the Saskatchewan Urban Municipalities Association recently passed a resolution calling for senior governments to help remove the costs of education from property.

Laplanders Starve

OSLO, Norway (AP — A Norwegian relief official said Wednesday at least 1,700 nomadic Laplanders in northern Norway face starvation and urged the Oslo government to help them "before it is too late."

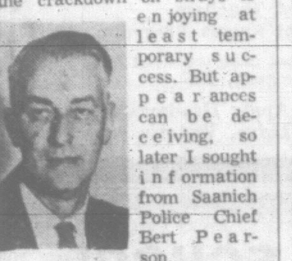
Arthur Mayse

For quite a while now, I have been haunted by the realization that something familiar has vanished from the Saanich daylight scene. But what it was didn't dawn on me until yesterday, when a canine acquaintance trotted down our drive.

Here, amiably unrepentant, was the first pooch-on-the-loose spotted in many a day.

This seemed to indicate that the crackdown on strays is enjoying at least temporary success. But appearances can be deceiving, so later I sought information from Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson.



Mr. Pearson confirmed my observation—up to a point. During the daylight hours, Saanich's roving-dog headache has eased considerably.

However, in the early morning and late evening, the situation deteriorates. Then, "great quantities" of dogs are turned loose to frolic at large, and maybe mess up neighbors' gardens.

With the light coming earlier and lasting longer, and with surveillance increasing, this practice is becoming pretty risky, and could bring the dog-owner pound fees and a court fine if warnings fail to take.

Meanwhile, great quantities of law-abiding householders are honestly attempting to keep Bonzo on the right side of the property line, though not always successfully.

Before the present push, they may not have worried too much if the family dog strolled out to the street or across the road to play with a friend. Today such casual excursions can rouse something very like panic.

Witness the frazzled housewife, upon whom the brunt of the problem so often falls.

There she stands, something about to boil over on the stove, peering anxiously from her porch. She toots on a whistle. Indoors, the phone begins to ring.

Since few dogs in residential areas are well trained—or trained at all, for that matter—Bonzo scampers on regardless.

A worried hour, then he comes wagging home, to be clipped on the chain or rope which the head of the house has decreed for him in the back yard.

He fusses, frets and barks. Our housewife goes out to untangle him, and gets a rope-burn across the back of her ankles when he dashes behind her.

For her, as for Bonzo, life has taken on new complications.

The above is a picture after the fact as reported to me at this observation post. It is being repeated often enough each day in Saanich to deserve consideration.

I am speaking here of and to those who honestly want to keep a dog as a family friend. Anyone whose feelings on this matter are lukewarm shouldn't own a dog, and if saddled with one, should turn it in to the SPCA.

The wanted dog, if he and you are to live happily in suburbia, should be trained, not haphazardly, but under expert instruction.

If he happens to be old and set in his ways, this can be difficult, though not impossible.

Dave Beeching, SPCA Animal Shelter director, strongly recommends an obedience school course as the training agent. He suggests further that if there's a boy or girl of 12 years or over in the family, he or she may well enroll the dog and see him through weekly classes and "homework".

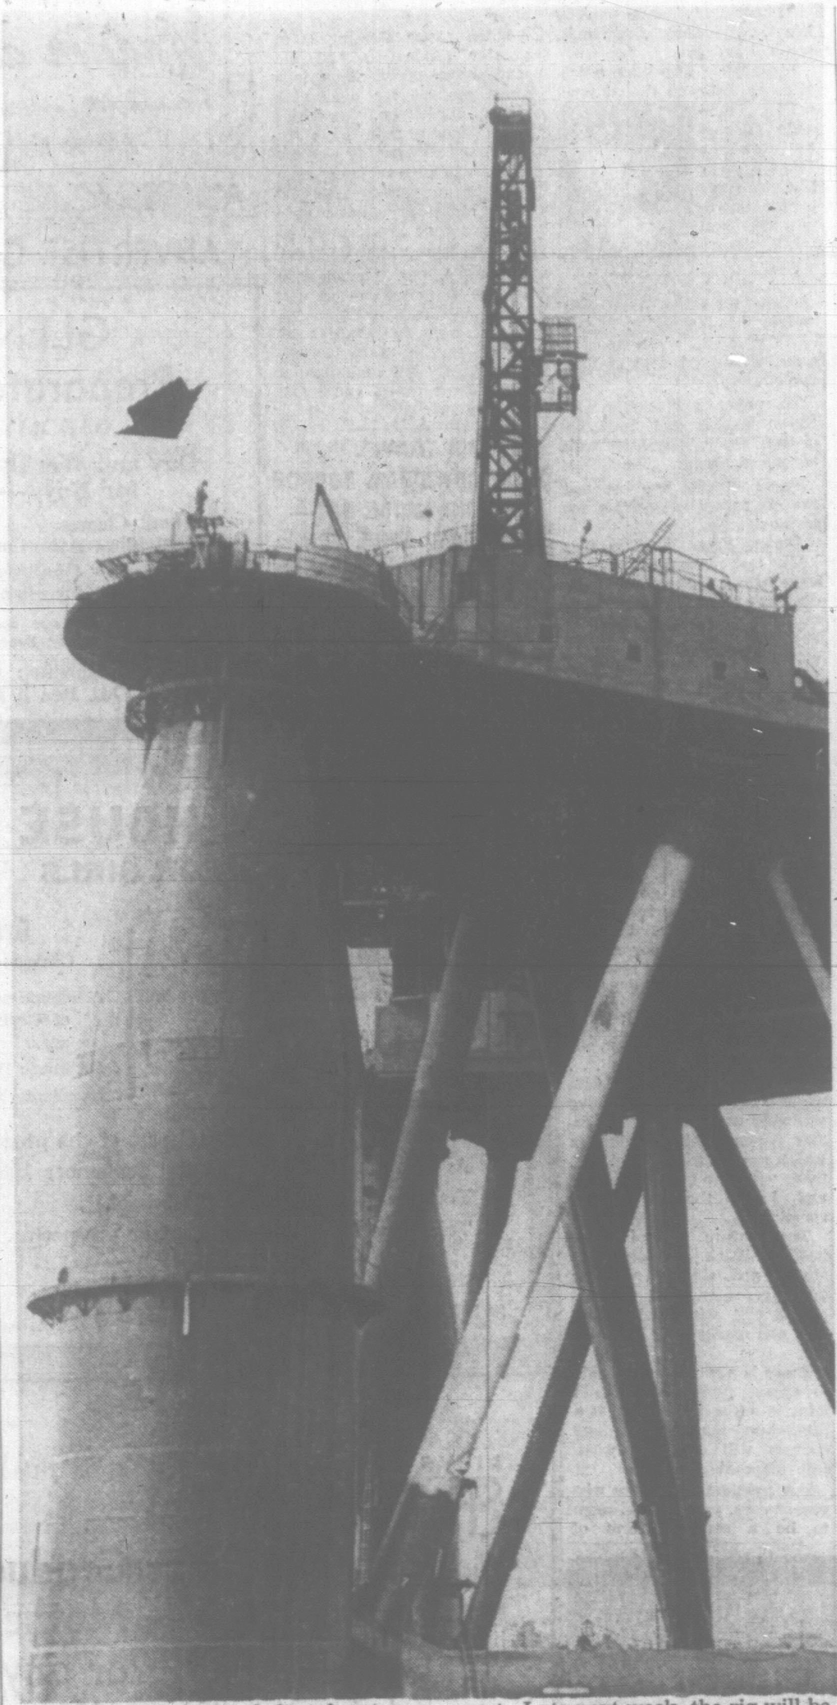
The fee at any of our four dog obedience schools (one of them in Sidney) is modest, and the results remarkable.

Training and exercising a dog demands contributions of family time. But the day is coming up fast when only the trained dog will be tolerated by the community.

However, one further point should be clearly understood.

An ounce or two of tolerance by non-dog owners—and a minimum of heavy-handedness by the municipality—is essential to the success of any dog control attempt.

This business of mild trespass by Bonzo has no place in the courts.



QUIET LIFE in the sheltered waters of Victoria's Inner Harbor is all but over for the world's largest oil drilling rig. Due for completion in five days' time, the rig had its drilling tower erected Friday. Towering 160-feet above the main deck, the derrick dwarfs a workman (arrow). Weighing 72 tons, the derrick took an hour to erect. Late next week, the rig will be towed to sea for a week of trials. Later it will begin work off the west coast boring through the ocean floor. It has been built by Victoria Machinery Depot at a cost of $9 million. Total height is 336 feet. Work was finished a month ahead of schedule. (Irving Strickland photo.)

MAIN UNPLUGGED

Flood Missed Water Chief

A torrent of water sped down the eastern side of Mount Tolmie late Friday, flooding three basements.

Saanich waterworks superintendent Harry Greenwood blamed children for disturbing the blocking that held the plug in a 14-inch main.

The pipe, which splits off the one through the park, is to be connected to the new reservoir on the top of Mount Tolmie.

The flood was reported about 5:30 p.m. and the water was turned off within 40 minutes. Saanich crews continued mopping up until past 10 p.m.

Mr. Greenwood said three basements were flooded to a depth of about one foot.

One of the first to report the flood, but escaping the water, was Ron Upward, commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water District, who lives at 3532 Plymouth.

CANDIDATE for leadership of Canada's Progressive Conservative Party, Hon. Davie Fulton of Kamloops will speak on Priorities in Government at a meeting of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria in the Empress Hotel Wednesday, May 3 at 12:15.

'Beat Government, Act Now on Tax'

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Haddock warned Friday a proposed hotel tax would fall to the provincial government unless Victoria imposes it first.

"If we don't put this tax in ourselves, it will be a provincial tax," he told a meeting of chamber directors.

The proposed tax—suggested by Mayor Hugh Stephen after a visit to Palm Springs where a similar levy raises money—would be for tourist promotion and to help finance a convention centre.

Mr. Haddock said in fairness to the hotel and motel operators who would collect it, the city should allow them a fraction of the tax.

There has been no formal effort made to introduce the tax.

Tourist trade chairman Sam Lane said his group will call a meeting of those in the industry to deal with the suggestion of a tax.

He felt some form of tax would be recommended, whether it will be a room tax or some other form of business levy.

He noted that those in the hotel trade are third in line for "a crack at the tourist dollar".

Referring to dominion bureau of statistics figures, Mr. Lane said the food and beverage industries come first and retail purchases are next.

Indians' Trip of a Lifetime All 'Wrong Impression'

By DON DINGWALL

It was to have been the trip of a lifetime.

A visit to Expo 67 with all expenses paid.

For many of the youngsters in Kuper Island Indian residential school band it would have been their first — and probably last — chance to see the world.

But a simple mix-up has robbed them of that chance.

Said school principal, Father Collins, today: "I just don't know how to tell them.

"They've talked about nothing else for the last two months."

The Big Mistake began in March when school teacher Brother Dufour received a letter saying the Montreal trip would be sponsored by the Indian Arts and Welfare Society of Victoria.

Writer of the letter was Mrs. Hattie Ferguson, a director of the Indian Cultural Society and Indian Centre in Vancouver.

She said today: "I was given a wrong impression by the Victoria society."

Said Mrs. Donald Esselmont, corresponding secretary of the Victoria organization: "We never ever were going to sponsor the band to Expo.

"We never stated or implied that we would and Mrs. Ferguson never was told by us the band would be sent to Montreal."

She said the first she knew of the proposed trip by the colorful fife and drum band was from a story in the Times.

Of her organization's part in the matter she said: "We're not that kind of society nor do we have the funds."

Further misunderstanding arose when Mrs. Esselmont wrote to Brother Dufour congratulating him on the band's forthcoming visit to Expo.

Mrs. Esselmont said she wrote the letter after reading the press report and believing the Cultural Society of Vancouver was acting as sponsor.

She said in issuing a statement about her organization sponsoring the trip, Brother Dufour was misinterpreting her letter.

"I have told him that as far as we are concerned the subject is closed."

Abel Joe, chairman of Cowichan Indian Band's centennial committee, has been trying all week to find ways to raise the money.

But he admitted today: "We haven't been able to get anywhere.

"I don't know how the society was going to raise the $10,000 required but the children should not have been told they were going."

Mrs. Ferguson said Expo officials asked for the bands of the three Indian residential schools in B.C. (Kuper, Alberni and Williams Lake).

But they have to pay their own expenses.

Because one teacher, George Clutesi, is a native Indian, Alberni school is able to claim Indian affairs department grants to assist the band's passage east.

Mrs. Ferguson has written to Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing and Attorney-General Robert Bonner asking help for Kuper and Williams Lake bands.

She said: "I haven't given up hope yet that the children may go to Expo."

But she is more optimistic that Father Collins.

He said Friday: "The sad thing will be telling the children, but I suppose it was just one of those unfortunate things that happen."

Union Opposed By Councillor

C. Saanich, N. Saanich Better Mates

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A Brentwood councillor said today North Saanich should amalgamate with Central Saanich instead of Sidney.

Coun. Philip Benn said his municipality should explore without delay union with the northern area.

Sidney and North Saanich are conducting an amalgamation study.

SIMILAR PROBLEMS

"I feel it would be more to the advantage of North Saanich to join with Central Saanich," he said. "We are both rural and residential and face similar problems."

Once amalgamated, he said, Brentwood could be planned and developed as the major commercial and cultural centre for residents of the northern peninsula.

Installation of a sewage system at Brentwood would permit expansion of public services, he pointed out.

LOOK TO BRENTWOOD

He said in the past three years more and more North Saanich residents have been looking to Brentwood as their commercial centre.

"The only obstacle is the library service which is presently located in Sidney," he said. "But there is no reason why we can't establish a library at Brentwood."

He was disappointed when North Saanich was not given a chance to vote on amalgamation before it became an incorporated district two years ago.

ECONOMIC

The move to incorporate North Saanich and Sidney is prompted by economic reasons.

North Saanich has no commercial and industrial zone and must either develop one for taxation purposes or join its urban neighbor.

Sidney at first reacted slowly to the amalgamation proposal initiated by North Saanich, but lately has shown increased interest.

Ask The Times

Q. In Ask The Times April 14 a veterinarian said that only four women are accepted (in Canadian colleges) each year. He was wrong. My son graduated in May, 1966, and seven women graduated with him. How about that? W.H.

A. No doubt. But only four women are accepted each year. The others, says the veterinarian, could have joined the course in the second or third year from other courses or might have been repeaters.

Q. How much money do Canadians contribute to the upkeep of the Royal Family? O.K.

A. Nothing. The Canadian government does not budget money for that purpose. The Royal Family income comes from British government appropriations and private income.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Borrow Bunting For Centennial

Greater Victoria Centennial Society is offering decorations to all organizations holding Centennial events, co-ordinator Jerry Gosley said today.

Nylon flags, table decorations and banners can be borrowed from the society at 14 Centennial Square.

BANK FIRE DESTROYS RECORDS

A fire in a bank storeroom at the Burnside Plaza early today destroyed some bank records.

Saanich firemen rushed to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 3480 Tillicum, at about 5:30 a.m. when a neighbor turned in the alarm.

A malfunction in a furnace is considered the most likely cause of the blaze. Shelves, walls and ceiling were damaged in the storeroom and light water damage was reported in the adjacent Bedrock Children's Shoes.

No dollar estimate of loss was available.

BY LABOUR BOARD

Order Enforced Against Firm

The Labor Relations Board has filed a directive against a Victoria taxi company with the registrar of the Supreme Court.

The action reported today by the board, was taken after C & C Taxi Service Ltd. failed to comply with a board order last February.

Under the Labor Relations Act, where anyone fails to comply with a board order the board files its order with the registrar of the Supreme Court "and thereupon the order is enforceable as a judgment or order of the court."

The board's action followed representation by Local 234 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, which represents the taxi drivers.

Last February the Labor Relations Board ordered C & C to reinstate John Drury and to pay him $629.43 "being wages lost by reason of his improper discharge."

Impaired Driver Fined $350

A youth whose car was wrecked when it went out of control on Admirals Road Friday night was fined $350 for impaired driving today.

Craig Allistair Campbell, of HMCS Saskatchewan, pleaded guilty to the charge when he appeared in central court.

Police said the car skidded almost 300 feet before crashing into a ditch near Craigflower shortly before midnight.

A passenger, Glen Borkowsky, also of HMCS Saskatchewan, was treated for arm injuries.

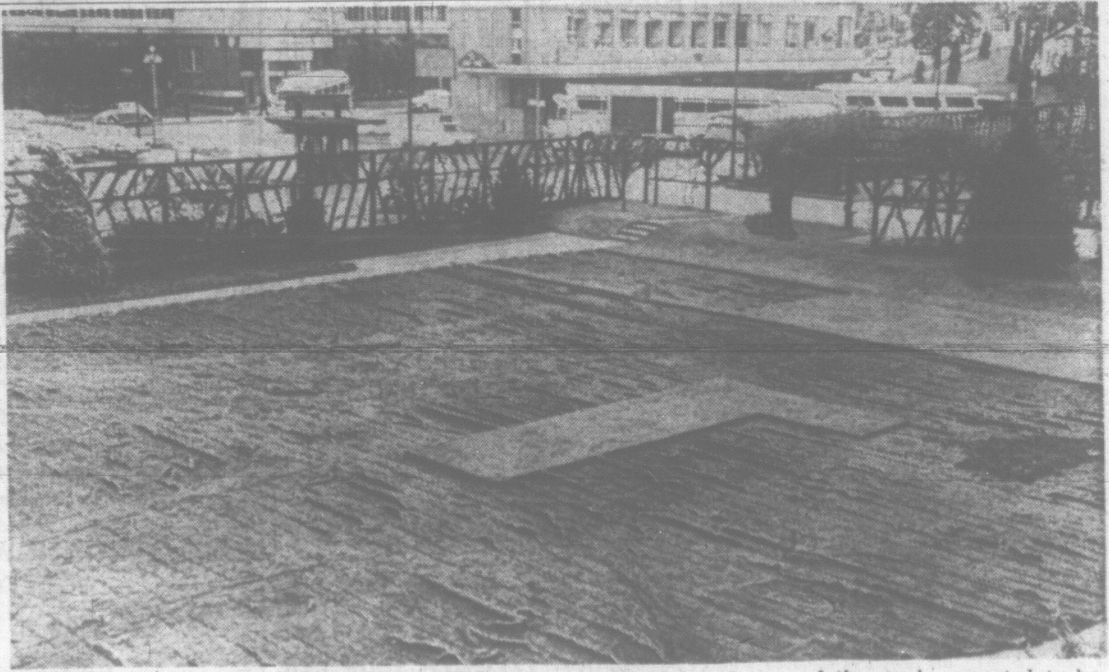
NO WORD ON SELF-SERVE LIQUOR STORE

The B.C. Liquor Control Board Friday declined to deny rumors that its liquor store at Fort and Foul Bay soon will become the province's fourth "self-serve" operation.

The Safeway store soon will move into new quarters nearby and there has been an indication that the LCB would re-locate its store in the present Safeway building.

Asked if the rumors were true or untrue, an official said "the board has no statement to make."

The first self-serve liquor store was opened in the Brentwood Shopping Centre on the lower mainland in 1962 and proved an instant success. Others have been opened at shopping plazas in North Vancouver and Port Moody areas since then.



GREEN IS GONE from one of the lawns of Empress Hotel as workmen begin to expand adjacent parking lot on Douglas Street. Sod was sliced from surface and sold in advance of the work, expected to be completed by mid-May. Additional parking will double lot's capacity from 200 to 400 cars.

Doing The Town

Matching sweaters and skirts at M and E . . .

If you're an aficionada of smart, well-made sweaters and skirts . . , preferably at reasonable prices . . , do make a bee-line for the Madam and Eve Shop and see their new arrivals . . . There are very nice shetland pullovers and cardigans . . . V-neck pullovers so terrific for active sports . . . a new shipment of the popular turtleneck sweaters in brand new colors . . . all, in our opinion, looking far more expensive than their price tags indicate . . . Then there are two styles of lambswool sweaters for which you may have matching tweed skirts in a subdued check pattern . . . One is a dressier style with little collar and attractive braided gold buttons . . . the other a classic round-neck cardigan fastened with irregular-shaped mother of pearl buttons . . . Colors are pink, blue, rose and green, and they come in complete size range . . . The 100% wool tweed shirts are light-smooth, easy fit . . . And just between ourselves, the lambswool sweaters look enough like cashmere to fool anyone (wear better, weight, slightly A-line, and sans waistband . . . which makes for a too!) . . . While you're in M & E, look at their sweater dresses which open half-way down the front . . . have ¾-length sleeves and collared V-neck . . . Eminently wearable whether your age is 16 or 60! . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 382-7177.

Designers are all mad about nuts, bolts, buckles and industrial zippers as trimming.

Fashions for the very young . . .

We've really been neglecting to report on the Junior Department at Wilson's recently . . . and for this we apologize . . . because Wilson's have some of the smartest new things for tots and toddlers . . . as well as older youngsters . . . we've seen in a long time . . . and just looking at these adorable little dresses and suits and undies makes us wish we had young ones of dress-up in them! . . . Knits figure prominently in many of these clothes . . . the kind of knits you can machine wash and dry which is always such a boon to busy mothers . . . From West Germany there's a new line of little 2-piece suits for boys and girls . . . all navy, or navy and white . . . ages 2 - 4 . . . and dresses for girls from 1 to 4 . . . Or your youngster can do a "brother and sister" act in the matching suits from Holland . . . little pleated skirts for the girls . . . navy, with blue and white stripes on the jackets, sparkled with a touch or red . . . Also from the Netherlands, wee knitted dresses for infants in white or pink . . . For the fashion-minded girl-child there are little matching shifts and dusters in white, blue or pink cotton . . . and to wear underneath it all, the cutest cotton knit vest and pantie sets . . . white, edged with dainty pink and white cotton eyelet embroidery . . . Whether you're a practical mother, fond aunt or adoring grandma . . . you'll dote on the kiddies' clothes at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Mary Quant, high-priestess of England's fashion swingers, is bringing out her own line of cosmetics whose frank aim is to "decorate" the face.

Stunning togs pour le sport . . .

Lunching at Island Hall just recently, we spotted a gal wearing a flowered pants and jacket outfit we recognized as having come from Miss Frith's . . . and was it ever smart! . . . Set us thinking about how one could asemble a whole weekend wardrobe from among the vast array of Miss Frith's co-ordinated sportswear . . . Skirts and jacket to travel in . . . slims and tops for daytime around the hotel . . . Bermudas for golf, and short shorts for sunning . . . All of these matching or harmonizing in endless combinations to clothe one smartly from dawn to dusk . . . and pack in practically no space at all . . . There are floral printed linens as wild or subdued as you could wish . . . Arnel sharkskins in white and blue . . . jackets, slims, shorts, straight or pleated skirts . . . Fortrels, in orange, pink, green, turquoise and white . . . Drip-dry materials so easy to keep fresh and crisp . . . Color is the big news for co-ordinates, and Miss Frith's have styles to suit every age and taste . . . New swimsuits are terrific! . . . There's a big selection in one-piece or bikinis . . . in every material known to man! . . . If you'd like to be the "golden girl" on the beach this summer . . . see the gold metallic nylon bikini with its coverup of clear transparent plastic banded with the shiny gold nylon . . . A real conversation piece! Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

This First-Aid Kit Heals Scarred Pots

By Penny Saver

When it comes to kitchen utensils, over the past few years chemically-coated cookware has become another household word. By using the special wooden or plastic spoons and spatulas that come with these pieces, the non-stick finish lasts and lasts without a scratch. However this cookware, like anything else, has no magic guard of protection against "junior cooks" who invade the kitchen. My neighbor's young daughter began experimenting with hamburger concoctions the other day. She reached for the first item she could find to turn her creation in the pan. Unfortunately for my neighbor, that item happened to be made of metal.

You can imagine the ugly scratch that was left on the bottom of the pan. My neighbor was so furious that she almost placed a blockade outside the kitchen door. Her household harmony was restored with a "first aid kit" for all chemical-coated cookware. This kit heals all scratches and scars in a matter of minutes.

Simply brush this liquid remedy on the scratch and the non-stick finish of the pan is saved and restored. Heat the pot in the oven for a few moments and it's ready to use. Price of this liquid is $1.29 the bottle.

There is enough liquid in each to repair 100 scratches, at a cost of a fraction more than a cent per scar. If you use this type of cookware, you need this kit.

Another item that I found in this store is made to ease ironing chores. It's a cleaner for scorched irons, priced at 95 cents the bottle. You just squeeze this fluid onto the base of the cool or slightly warm iron and wipe the scorch marks away.

The feature that I like is that it makes the iron glide over the clothes, with no iron drag. It almost seems that the iron has wings.

If you're seldom bothered by a scorched iron, there is one wax in this store that makes the iron fly over that stack of clothing. Wipe your iron over this wax plate, which sells for 59 cents. You need only to stroke your iron lightly over this plate.

These household aids are made for you. Give me a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where to find them.

Busy Days for Delegates

Delegates from all over British Columbia and from the Yukon, prairie provinces and the United States, are in Victoria this week to attend the three-day housekeepers institute in the Empress Hotel.

Sponsored by the Vancouver Island Chapter of the National Housekeepers' Association, the conference began Thursday with speakers, discussion groups and field trips.

Delegates were also kept busy with a crowded calendar of social events. Thursday evening, they gathered in the McPherson Playhouse for a cocktail party, hosted by John McNair, John Marshall, Kenneth King and Mrs. Maude Laurent. During the event, Jerry Gosley provided entertainment. Among those attending were president of the B.C. Chapter, Mrs. Gyula Mayer, Vancouver, and host branch president George Stencel.

On Friday, the delegates gathered in the Empress for a reception, given in honor of the United States national chairman Mrs. O. Jaehning, New York.

This evening, a social hour will precede a banquet in the hotel's ballroom. Victor Fuller and Mrs. P. S. Schwerdfeger, Nanaimo, are the hosts.

IN STEP WITH STYLE By Nona Damaske

Style's New Darling Is Wild, Fun Paper!

"Paper Dolls" have come to life . . . carefree, brilliant, splashy and gay.

Little girls who once painstakingly followed dotted lines with blunt-edge scissors to create "Paper Ladies" have grown up to become real live Paper Dolls.

Nona

Paper clothes are making headlines and creating a good deal of light controversy.

To enjoy and understand paper fashion you must approach the whole idea with tongue in cheek.

Paper clothes are fun and are not meant to be taken too seriously.

During Press Week in New York last January we saw high-fashion disposable designs in everything from wedding gowns to bikinis. In February in Montreal, I watched Miss Lallemand of Jerry Yates design her first paper hat . . . a wildly striped, floppy brim creation, which I wanted to steal right out of her hands.

We now have a full wardrobe of exciting paper fashions in Victoria . . . patio pyjamas . . . tent dresses . . . slender shifts and floor-sweeping at-home gowns.

These garments go hand in hand with the current color explosion. If you have always had the urge to wear a wild crazy print . . . do it now . . . it's paper . . . you won't have to wear it forever.

There is a good deal more strength to these garments than you might imagine . . . this paper is created with wearability in mind. You have probably used the new disposable paper towels and dusters which are on the market . . . these will take quite a beating and last through several washings.

The texture of the paper fashion items is somewhat similar and, although washing is not recommended, the garments will withstand dampness and marks may be wiped off.

There is a more serious side to paper garments which I think is interesting. There is a prediction that nurses and doctors will one day wear only disposable uniforms.

For painters and those who grease cars, paper would seem to be a sensible form of apparel.

When paper clothing is in greater production and the price comes down there is a great market for disposable shirts for men. Statistics prove that a man buys his shirt back 30 times in laundry costs. If a travelling man could have a week's supply of paper shirts at a reasonable cost a lot of his away-from-home worries would be gone.

However, our thoughts are for the fun fashions so put tongue in cheek and sing the old song that everybody seems to be paraphrasing these days, "If I could have a paper dress that I could call my own . . ."

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

If those who crowd the Luxton Hall for the annual fair that's become a 'must' on summer calendars feel there's a friendly ghost peeking over their shoulders, they're probably right.

I've no doubt that the happy haunter would be Mrs. Mary Cooper, the woman who spearheaded the building of the community hall during the First World War. Nobody would have more right to reign over the festivities.

During the war, Mrs. Cooper had worked as hard as any soldier, enthusing her community with a zeal worthy of a field general. She started weekly dances in the school house in order to raise funds for the Red Cross.

The school authorities thought such festivities unseemly so Mrs. Cooper persuaded a Mr. Reid to donate the land, and Baker's Mill to cut the lumber. Volunteers went into the forest and felled trees and the whole community turned out to help build the gathering place.

Mrs. Cooper was the second child of Mr. and Mrs. James Porter who came to Vancouver Island in 1853. She was born in a one-room log cabin at Skinner's cove two months after their arrival.

She's left a description of her first home.

"A little log cabin of one room with a bed in each corner. There was no other furniture except a table. The only heat came from a stone fireplace that had been built just outside the door, close enough to let some of its warmth inside. On this stove was done the cooking, and there was only one pot."

A year later Mrs. Porter died while giving birth to another daughter. Luxton Hall's founder describes the funeral procession:

Funeral Cortege Walked Into Victoria

"The Castletons, the Flewins, the Williams and the Francises, shipmates of my father, carried the coffin all the way into Victoria on their shoulders. There was no vehicles of any kind to be had. There was no church then, and Mrs. Crittle, who took us in charge at the time, couldn't buy any real mourning for us. Only enough black cloth there was to make us two wee baby girls some small black hoods.

"I think we must have looked pathetic and I remember women crying over us."

Mr. Porter realized that a widower with three babies faced an impossible task. He eventually decided to marry again. This time, he chose the sister of a shipmate named Birkins. She was an upper housemaid in the home of Lord Cheston and her suitor's glowing descriptions ill prepared her for the sight that met her eyes on arrival in Victoria.

Mr. Porter stood on the deck, waving his arms and shouting, "At last, at last, the land of milk and honey."

His tiny new bride looked out to see painted Indians and a trail flooded with the pouring rain, a poor substitute for even the flimsiest of sidewalks.

Her answer was, "Milk and honey, it looks more like mud and misery."

While Mr. Porter was building a new house near Millstream for his bride and family, they were given a small cottage at the foot of the paddock on the Langford farm. Mary and her sister's favorite game was to 'play the lady' by dressing up in the fine muslin dresses that Mrs. Francis, who lived in a nearby cottage, laundered for the Langford daughters.

Like most little girls, they also appreciated games of a more lusty fibre. Mrs. Cooper tells of the time they turned a dance at the Big House into pandemonium.

The Rat Was an Uninvited Guest

"There was a man by the name of Bond, who was a steward at the place. He was a mischief. He used to lock my sister and me in the chicken house.

"Once he caught a big rat, and that night there was a big ball at the house. He told my sister and me to tip-toe after him, into the house and along to the room where they were dancing.

"He opened the door a little way, and let the rat run in. Such a shrieking and screaming, and knocking over of furniture! We ran away as fast as we could, Bond choking with glee."

The Porter family moved into their new home in April and Mary Cooper recalls the lilies that covered the ground like a white sheet, dramatically accented by the blackened logs. The house was of planed logs, built upright, lined with canvas and paper and built by a man called Naylor.

Their neighbors were the Simpsons, the Tylers of Yew Tree Farm, the Pikes, and the Peatts, who later sold their land to the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Widowed twice, Mrs Cooper's first husband was a Thomas Craigie, who came out on the ship before her father's.

In her words, "I married very young, far too young. My first husband was old enough to be my father but I was anxious to get away from home, see some life and be independent." Her second husband was an American. She bore six children. Three died.

Life may have been laced with trials for Mrs. Cooper but she never lost her zest for fun. As a widow of 75, she'd regale pioneers at many a Metchosin party with selections of old-fashioned songs, putting on a performance worthy of a vaudeville professional.

Her little cottage and garden shone with cleanliness and callers looked forward to the home-made nectar which she made of wild blackberries, raspberries and currants.

I'm sure, if it were possible, the shade of this vibrant pioneer would be glad to have you sample her wine the next time you enjoy a party at the hall which owes its origin to her.

Two Speakers Give Program

A husband-and-wife team will provide the program, Monday, when the Women's Canadian Club meets at the Empress Hotel at 2:30 p.m.

Rev. Geoffrey Smith, minister of Gordon United Church, Langford, and Mrs. Smith have chosen "Life Amid the Tensions of Southern Africa, 1953-1966" as their topic.

Rev. and Mrs. Smith served as missionaries of the United Church of Canada in West China from 1941 to 1948 and in Zambia (formerly Northern Rhodesia) from 1953 to 1966.

Rev. Smith graduated from the University of British Columbia with an arts degree and graduated in theology from Emmanual College in Toronto. His wife studied at Victoria College and the University of British Columbia.

CLUB CALENDAR

Dainty Lace Accents

A dainty gown of lace over taffeta, fashioned on empire lines, was worn by Carole Winnifred Southron when she became the bride of Roger Joseph Cormier, recently.

The bodice of the floor-length gown was fashioned with a scoop neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Her cathedral veil of silk illusion net misted from a floral headpiece.

Following the ceremony, the bride presented her bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis to her grandmother, Mrs. G. A. Rudd, who was celebrating her 85th birthday.

Arrangements of lilies, daffodils and red roses were at the altar of St. Joseph's Church when Msgr. M. T. O'Connell heard vows uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Southron, 3217 Alder Street, and the son of Mrs. B. Cormier, Toronto, and the late A. Cormier. Mr. Southron gave his daughter in marriage and Miss E. Gubbles was organist.

Rose brocade formed the gowns worn by maid of honor Miss Jose de Boucier, bridesmatron Mrs. R. Christensen, bridesmaid Miss Gloria Southron, and the little flower girl, Carol Hand. Their headpieces were en tone and they carried pink carnations in their bouquets. Jewelry accents were the bride's gifts of silver crosses.

Best man was John Christensen and ushering guests were Robert Duncan and Jacques Cormier.

Malcolm MacDonald proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in Chez Marcel. Daffodils and carnations flanked the tiered wedding cake which centred the head table.

For travelling on honeymoon to Oregon, the new Mrs. Cormier donned a blue three-piece suit which she accented with accessories en tone and a pink corsage.

The couple is now making their home at 1044 Hillside Avenue.

Concert and Meet

Members of the Victoria Musical Arts Society will gather in the McPherson Playhouse Sunday, for the group's annual meeting, beginning at 8 p.m. Mrs. S. G. Watts will preside at the business session, which will be followed by a concert by the Clairmont Chorus, conducted by Don Kyle. Refreshments will be served after the performance.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Michal Munro Married

A wedding of wide interest to many in Victoria took place in Christ Church Cathedral, Calgary, on Friday when Michal Munro became the bride of Mr. Harvey James King. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Munro, 1178 Beach Drive, who flew to Calgary for the service conducted by Rev. D. D. G. Tatchell. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. David King, Kitimat. A reception followed in the social suite of the Palliser Hotel in the prairie city. The newlyweds are now making their home in Calgary.

The new Mrs. King, a graduate of Oak Bay Senior Secondary School in Victoria, attended University of Victoria, and took her laboratory technician training in Burlington General Hospital, Vermont.

To Montreal

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Krasney travelled from Victoria recently to attend the wedding of Miss Rosalyn Hockenstein and their son, Mr. David Joel Krasney in Montreal. Also from out-of-town were Miss Donna Krasney, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. R. Nozick and Stanley, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Levi of Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. I. Naftolin and Eddie, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Naftolin, all of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Iscoe of Ottawa.

Wedding Guests

Travelling from out-of-town to attend the recent wedding of Miss Carole Southron and Mr. Roger Cormier were Mr. Jay Jordon, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. W. Haines, Mr. and Mrs. J. Christensen, Mrs. Y. Berkson of Vancouver; Mr. M. Morrison and Mr. M. Eerenbeemt of Kelowna; Mr. and Mrs. Rush and Susan, and Mr. Ed Robinson of Nanoose Bay; Mr. Ted Toffey, Nanaimo; Mr. K. Weatherdon, Port Alberni; Mr. W. Deacon, Mayne Island; Mrs. O. Hand and Carole of Watsonville, Calif.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Don't Be Called Beautiful and Dumb

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a beautiful widow, 53 years of age, but I look much younger. I lost my husband a few years ago and to be perfectly honest with you, I want a man.

I have been going with a married man who is much younger than I. I really don't care very much for him, but I make him believe I do, because I feel it is better to have him than no man at all.

I am financially very well off so I don't have to work, but I am almost ready to get a job somewhere so I can meet some men. Can you solve my problem?

BEAUTIFUL BUT UNWANTED

DEAR BEAUTIFUL: Drop the married man unless you want to be known as both beautiful and dumb! Beyond that — a job, yes. But soft-pedal your bank account or you'll end up with the kind of man that will make you wish you were single, solvent and celibate.

DEAR ABBY: I was sitting with my son, my daughter-in-law and my husband when I made the remark that I thought I had been a good mother.

This was followed by a dead silence. Don't you think someone could have spoken up and said something?

HURT

DEAR HURT: In that crowd, you're lucky you didn't get an argument.

DEAR ABBY: I know you won't believe me, but God be my judge, I am telling you the gospel truth, so here goes:

My mother is a widow with seven living children. We are three girls and four boys. All of us married. Mom stays all night with us girls quite often. The problem is Mom hardly ever takes a bath. You can smell her from one room to the next. She hasn't washed her hair in a year, and it looks it. When she gets into a car, the whole car stinks. (Excuse me, Miss Abby, but I must speak plain.) When she gets up in the morning, she never washes her hands, but goes straight into the kitchen to help with breakfast. I don't think she owns a tooth brush anymore.

We are all at the end of our rope. We are good Christian folks and wouldn't hurt our mother's feeling for the world. What can we do? We hate to be disrespectful, but she's getting worse with age.

SISTERS IN W. VA.

DEAR SISTERS: In a subtle, organized campaign remind your mother that she must bathe, shampoo her hair regularly and wear fresh clothing. Her advancing age probably has something to do with her carelessness, but she should be "reminded"—not ignored. When you sisters needed help, your mother helped you. Now it's your turn.

DEAR ABBY: After your advice to "HUNGRY FOR LOVE," I am sure you are a man. That picture you run with your column doesn't fool me a bit.

NOT FOOLED

DEAR NOT: Did you watch "Go Show" on ABC at 7 p.m. Sunday, April 17? The gal who played "ABBY" is the same one who writes this column.

Wed in Montreal Service

A wedding of wide interest to many in Victoria took place in Montreal, recently, when Rosalyn Hockenstein became the bride of David Joel Krasney, formerly of Victoria.

Rabbi David Roth, Cantor Rosenzweig and Rev. Greenberg officiated at the service in Congregation Chevra Kadisha-B'Nai Jacob Synagogue which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Hockenstein of Montreal and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Krasney, 2500 Cadboro Bay Road, Victoria.

An exquisite gown of white satin, complete with train, was worn by the bride. The bodice and sleeves of the gown were fashioned of delicate lace. Her veil misted softly to her shoulders from a floral headpiece and she carried a white Bible, topped with white orchids. The wedding ring which Mr. Krasney presented to his bride originally belonged to his maternal grandmother.

Miss Barbara Hockenstein was maid of honor for her sister in a floor-length gown of soft blue. Bridesmaids, the Misses Helen Cooper and Shirley Belfer were in similar outfits.

Best man was the groom's cousin, Stanley Nozick, Winnipeg. Ushering guests were Alex Spira, Morris Atlas, Robert Silverstone, and cousins of the principals, Howard Kobernick, Michael and Melvin Hockenstein.

The blue and white theme of the wedding was continued in the decorations at the reception which followed in the synagogue social hall.

The newlyweds are now making their home in Cote Ste. Luc, P.Q., following a honeymoon trip south to New York and Miami, Fla

Oil Proteins To End World Food Shortage?

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Soviet and French scientists have pinpointed proteins from petroleum as the answer to an impending world food shortage.

The Soviet delegation to the seventh World Petroleum Congress said a high-protein yeast developed from paraffin by-product of diesel fuel is ready for large-scale production. Meat from animals receiving the yeast could be used for human food.

Alfred Champagnat, managing director of the French International Society of Research, said a world protein shortage is expected to reach 10,000,000 tons by 1988 and 22,000,000 by the year 2000.

"The petroleum industry is the only industry holding all the trump cards," Champagnat told the concluding session of the seven-day forum held every four years by oil and gas scientists.

The U.S.S.R. suggested the discussion here should serve as the first step toward international co-operation in research and developing and organizing the industrial production of protein substances from petroleum.

India Endorses

India endorsed the Russian suggestion at the final session but there was no official reaction from the permanent council of the congress.

Rene Navarre, the council president from Paris, was asked for comment at a press conference but referred the question to Dr. W. J. Sweeney, an American council member.

"I know of four or five very significant studies that are under way in the U.S., France and Russia," Sweeney said without direct reference to the Soviet proposal.

"Food from petorleum will be one of the most important scientific and technological projects of the next 10 to 20 years."

The suggestion brought an immediate rejection from British Petroleum Co. Ltd., a pioneer among several international oil firms that have reported successful proteins from oil experiments.

The British government owns about 45 per cent of the firm. Pat Docksey, British Petroleum general manager of research, said the Soviet research proposal suggests the technical problem is still far from solved.

Gives False Look

"This gives a totally false impression of the present state of progress," Docksey said in a prepared statement. He added: will undoubtedly be beneficial

"Although further research both in improving the process and lowering the cost, it is not essential to the economic and technical solution of the problem."

Champagnat had reported four years ago that French scientists had produced from oil a concentrated protein-vitamin substance that could be eaten by humans.

The Soviets said Saturday the protein content of their yeast cultures exceeds 50 per cent and they also contain about one per cent of Group B vitamins. The yeast was described as a pale greyish-yellow powder with a smell and taste of yeast.

They said that under industrial conditions one ton of digestible protein can be produced a day, while it would take 40 head of cattle 15 to 18 months to produce the same amount.

Can Increase

Docksey said British Petroleum, with large-scale farm animal feeding trials in The Netherlands and Nigeria, sees no difficulty in scaling up its half-ton-per-day semi-commercial plant to full-scale output. He said engineering designs for a full-scale plant are well advanced.

Champagnat said animal protein production would have to be increased at an annual rate of 4 to 4.3 per cent if the anticipated increases in demand are to be met but that the 1952-1964 annual growth rate did not exceed 2.3 per cent.

"This is justification for extensive production of proteins from petroleum fermentation," he added.

UBC Plans Residence

VANCOUVER (CP)—The University of British Columbia has disclosed plans for a 1,200-bed student residence designed for single students over 21. The residence will consist of three buildings and will be split into separate accommodation for 600 men and 600 women. Cost is estimated at about $8,400,000.

8 CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to all my dear friends for the many beautiful floral arrangements, and to all those thoughtful people who sent their well-wishes. I also wish to express my thanks to Dr. Young, Dr. Le Huquet and the staff of the St. Joseph's Hospital who cared for me so kindly. — Mrs. Queen V. Wilkins.

We wish to thank our many friends and relatives for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings. Special thanks to Padre Kendall and William Hayward and Associates Funeral Chapel, in the passing of our brother, David John Burnett. — Margaret, Elsie, Hugh, George and Tommy.

We are deeply grateful to our friends, relatives and neighbors for their many deeds of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended to us during the recent passing of our beloved husband and father. Special thanks to Rev. H. R. Whitmore, Dr. Forgie and nurses and St. Joseph's.—Mrs. Fenton and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CLARKE—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Lily Clarke, who passed away April 22, 1966.

We've nothing left but memories,
With them we'll never part.

—Ever remembered by her husband, Davis, Kathleen and family.

WELLS—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, George Wells, who passed away suddenly April 22, 1965.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.

—Ever remembered by his loving wife, Lilian and daughter, Shirley.

WELLS—In treasured memory of my dear brother, George Wells, April 22, 1965.

More and more each year we miss him.
Friends may think the wound is healed;
Little do they know the sorrow
Lies within our hearts concealed.

—Sadly missed by his only brother, Fred, Thelma Wells and family.

YATES—In loving memory of a beloved husband and father, John W. Yates, who passed away April 22, 1966.

Beyond the sunset he has gone
To rest a little while,
The memory of his loving words,
The sweetness of his smile
Fall like a benediction soft
Upon our lonely ways.

—Lovingly remembered by his wife, Phyl, son and daughter, George and Jeune.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Victor Mollo discusses sacrifice bidding in "Success at Bridge". He starts by giving a horrible example of a man taking a 1,300-point set only to find out later that his adversaries would not have made their game.

Then he is kind enough to give a hand played by Jim Jacoby and Bob Nail against France in the 1963 World's Championships.

Theron of France, sitting West, opened one heart and after Nail passed Desrosseaux, East, jumped to two spaces.

Mollo's comment: "Sitting South was Jin Jacoby with one of those unbalanced hands that seem to run in the family. At the worst Jim could go down five tricks for a 900-point loss at four diamonds but he wanted to make it hard for his opponents to bid their good hands to best advantage. In addition, if he were to go down five at four diamonds then East and West surely had a slam."

Jim's four diamond bid did not stop the French from bidding to the laydown six hearts but it did give Bobby Nail a chance to get into action. Bobby defended at seven diamonds and the best the French could do was to double him, and collect 1,300 points by perfect defence.

Theron opened the queen of hearts. Desrousseaux overtook and returned the ten of clubs. Theron cashed his ace and king and gave his partner a ruff. East proceeded to play ace and another spade, whereupon Theron led his last club and East trumped with his king.

Back to Mollo: "Nail's sacrifice was perfect judgment. He was looking at one trick—the ace of diamonds. He knew that Jim could contribute nothing to the defence and you need two tricks to beat a slam."

65 MOTORCYCLES

PEARSON MOTORCYCLE
SALES LTD.
3400 Douglas St.

A letter to our Friends and motorcycle enthusiasts.

We are introducing our mascot who will make the newspaper quotes from now on.

His name is Alphie the Giraffe. Alphie sits in our window most of the time, but this weekend from Thursday to Saturday he will be at the Sports Show in the Esquimalt arena. Alphie and the staff would like you to come and see our display which introduces the new shaft drive 700 cc Moto Guzzi and the 125 cc models. We will also have the new 750 cc Nortons, Bultaco scramblers and the Hodaka Trail bike.
Alphie hopes you all come and have a good time. Alphie says to watch the paper under our name for a big announcement very soon.

Kind regards,
Doug Pearson

Were you to dive into this fine swim pool but you wouldn't be all wet investment-wise. First off this near-new bungalow is in a mighty fine area; unique sunken living room, sizeable dining. It's a woman's kitchen with built-in luxury stove and oven, etc., and a brilliantly planned adjoining family room. From the double carport your swinging go-go friends may go directly to a reception area then to the special rumpus room and spirits bar. There are three sets of plumbing, sundeck, workshop, etc. Reads like $40,000, but happily only

UNIVERSITY AREA
$24,500

Attractively appointed 3-bedroom stucco and siding home offers considerable privacy on this cul-de-sac. Cedar shake roof, to the attached car port, to the lovely sundeck, even a glimpse of the sea. Definitely a quality home by one of our top-rated builders. Striking raised hearth slate centre wall fireplace leaves ample room for the placing of living room furniture. Open dining room with sliding glass doors to the sundeck. Extra spacious mahogany family kitchen has ample breakfast area. The bedrooms and beautiful 4-piece vanity bath are on a 2-step raised level. Open stairway to full high basement, has smart iron railing in white. I am not generally a "hearts and flowers" ad writer but I honestly do feel this home has all the features and extras to please the most discriminating buyer. However do not take my word for it, call me now and see it for yourself.

MOST MAGNIFICENT VIEWS FROM THIS EXCEPTIONALLY BEAUTIFUL HOME which is on the market for the first time. The setting is unparalleled offering privacy and expansive views at the same time. The landscaping has been so developed to complement the home in a most delightful fashion. Interesting entrance provides privacy for guests. Lovely large entrance hall. Fabulous living room which provides such beautiful expansive views that the whole world becomes your doorstep. Delightful spacious dining area adjacent to living room. Large sundeck across the entire front of the home is the finest I have ever seen, so pretty indeed that it is hard to describe. The kitchen has so many exceptional features such as special cupboards for your TV trays, hostess carts, etc., and extra wide arborite counter tops for easy working. Lovely master bedroom has dressing room off. Two very pretty vanity bathrooms on the main floor plus a second bedroom. Spaciousness is a keynote in this home. Open stairway to lower level is beautiful indeed. Finished recreation room is really large and leads to patio area with the same glorious view. A completely finished third bedroom or study plus a third bathroom and utility are added features and there is still room to develop a fourth bedroom. This home is truly one of quality and beauty in a most magnificent setting. To view please drive out to Rockheights, turn on to Matheson Street, then turn on to Matheson Place. DD DELAYED SIX MONTHS

Direct distance dialing for Victoria area residents has been set back six months.

B.C. Telephone, which hoped to introduce the service by the end of this year, has set a new target date of June, 1968.

A company spokesman blamed a delay in components caused by a strike which closed the manufacturing plant.

Sex Education Panel Topic

Cedar Hill-Braefoot PTA will sponsor a panel discussion on "Sex Education—Whose Responsibility?" at 8 p.m. Monday at Cedar Hill school.

Panelists will be Dr. M. E. Patriarche of the metro health board; Mrs. G. M. Lundy, social worker for the Family and Children's Service; J. E. Hawkins, minister of the Church of Christ; and Don F. McKinnon, principal of Cedar Hill and Braefoot schools.

Campaign Short Of Objective

A fund-raising drive by the Solarium Junior League was only $2,000 short of its $15,000 objective Friday night.

The league is raising money to care for 60 handicapped children at Queen Alexandra Solarium. It has collected $13,000 in a door-to-door and mail campaign.

Persons with uncollected donations are asked to phone 384-9301 or mail them to Box 177, Victoria Post Office.

Trustees Resist Move To Squeeze Them Out

South Vancouver Island school trustees will fight a municipal movement to have school representatives excluded from a regional health body.

In a joint meeting Thursday, trustees from Greater Victoria, Saanich, Sooke and Gulf Islands school districts endorsed the principle of having representation through a proposed regional health board.

"If we are going to pay the piper we want a say in calling the tune," said Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn.

The basis of cost-sharing for such a regional organization is not yet clear, but at present, the school districts of southern Vancouver Island pay about 18 per cent of Metropolitan Health District costs.

The combined sum amounts to more than $100,000 a year on a total budget in excess of $680,000.

"We don't want trustees squeezed out of the health boards," Mr. Bunn said.

Mayor Hugh Stephen was the source of the suggestion, which he offered at a regional district meeting. There were no objections from other municipal leaders.

Mr. Bunn said he wished to make clear that school trustees do not demand seats on the regional board itself, but definitely do want to be included on whatever sub-committee will be responsible for health matters in the district.

Further information is sought from Frank Beinder, of Trail, president of B.C. School Trustees' Association, who will be asked to report on the structure of a reformed health board.

The next joint meeting of trustees wil lbe held in Sooke district June 15, when a Vancouver architect will explain through films the "open school" technique of construction. This method eliminates unnecessary walls and reduces costs as well as improving the teaching environment.

Trustees of the four districts will press the provincial government for written confirmation of a month-old verbal agreement for building a new vocational school in Saanich.

"We were told about a month ago that plans would go ahead and drawings would be prepared for the two first workshop buildings," Mr. Bunn said.

"We want now to have some written assurance or confirmation of intent."

He said the verbal agreement was reached in discussion with deputy education minister Dr. Neil Perry and deputy works minister Arnold Webb, and members of their staffs.

The proposed site of a vocational school—first launched as a definite requirement here about five years ago—is on provincial government property known as Colquitz or Wilkinson jail farm.

A survey shows that 846 out of 3,986 Grade 11 and 12 students want to attend vocational school here.

A district-wide in-training course for industrial arts teachers was approved by the combined boards.

It will bring teachers up to date on sophisticated new machinery in us by industry, particularly in metal working.

District superintendents will be asked to discuss feasibility and lay groundwork for a proposed regional film library.

Trustees also discussed a proposed experimental education laboratory which would work through the University of Victorian, originator of the idea.

Besides serving as a clearing house for educational information in this area, the lab could lead in such experimental work as classroom TV and in the exploration of new ideas that come up through the schools, Mr. Bunn explained.

Spencer Castle Up for Sale

Fifty-year-old hilltop mansion Spencer Castle is up for sale—price $175,000.

The former home of pioneer merchant David Spencer and his wife Kate, Spencer Castle is now a company operated by partners Robert Macmillan and Alex Rawlings.

The well-preserved home featuring granite tower, Windsor-style battlement, Italian marble entrance and rich oak and mahogany panelling, is a tourist attraction together with its rockeries and gardens near the crest of Smith's Hill.

Mr. Macmillan said the company does not have the finances needed to develop the property "the way it should be."

He said his and his partner's other interests are subsidizing the operation by about $40,000 a year.

"If we had the time, we'd do all right. But the bank doesn't allow long-term money."

The property, consisting of 2.5 acres, has alpine gardens considered among the continent's best. Replacement value is estimated at $100,000.

An advertisement for the property is being run in the Los Angeles area, but so far there have been no inquiries, Mr. Macmillan said.

OPENS FRIDAY

Autorama Features $20,000 Car

A 200-miles-per-hour drag-stripper and a 1940 car worth $20,000 are two stars of the Centennial Autorama opening in Esquimalt next Friday.

The annual car show at Esquimalt Sports Centre is sponsored by the Quarter Miler Club.

The drag-stripper is the $10,000 Bidcoliner, a car that will go from zero to 200 m.p.h. in between seven and eight seconds. The specially-constructed motor has to be replaced after every eight races.

The 1940 car is a chrome-plated Ford.

Another 45 cars from California, Oregon, Washington, Alberta and British Columbia will also be on display.

The autorama starts at 5 p.m., April 28, with Attorney-General Robert Bonner opening the show. Cars will be on display until 11 p.m. Doors will be open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. on April 29 as well.

Films of the Indianapolis 500 and Daytona 500 of 1966 will be shown and the Motifs band will perform.

A total of $1,200 in trophies will be awarded in various car categories and a 1967 car worth about $4,000 will be given away.

Impaired Drivers Lose Licences

Two men lost their licences for three months and were each fined $300 when they faced charges of impaired driving in central court, Thursday.

Michael Mosley, 2637 Deville, was charged following a collision on the Old Island Highway March 26.

James Bond, 9019 Patricia Bay Highway, was charged after he almost forced an RCMP car off the road March 21.

William Bradley, 1500 Athlone, was fined $350 and lost his licence for two weeks on an impaired driving charge. Police said he drove at 65 miles an hour in a 30 mph zone.

Bottle Costly

Anthony T. Ross, 1719 Oak Bay Avenue, pleaded guilty to supplying liquor to a minor and was fined $50 in central court, Friday.

The accused bought a bottle of rye for two 17-year-old juveniles.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Gosh, Sorry, Fellas It's the Old Story

By JIM HUME

Hume

Ald. Percy Frampton, who appeared a little niggling in his approach to the tax dollar last year, touched on a sore spot Thursday morning.

This was the day city council, in brief but solemn conclave, approved the expenditure of an extra $15,000 to straighten out the plumbing and the heating in the Crystal Garden.

Ald. Frampton wasn't objecting so much to the extra money needed for the Crystal as he was to the seemingly normal routine of increasing expenditures after a price has already been agreed on.

As he said during that all too short council meeting, since his term in office only one contract has gone through within the originally specified cost.

Even the Douglas Street repaving job didn't quite make it within the first mentioned cost range. Last Tuesday council members were asked to approve and extra $3,000 for that job.

Possibly we are being unfair to mention the Douglas Street project as a specific example because when you start tearing up city streets anything may happen.

But that is just what Ald. Frampton is complaining about.

A job is discussed, the price arrived at. Council, shuddering once more, approves the project.

A couple of weeks later, armed with all the logical arguments in the world, in trots an expert to point out that "gosh, sorry, fellas, but we need an extra thousand or two to complete what you agreed to complete earlier."

And, as a clincher, the expert always points out that since the original decision the work has been started, making it impossible for council to deny the request for the extra cash.

As Ald. Frampton said, somewhere, something is wrong.

Hope the members of municipal councils across B.C. stay on the attack so far as their demands for a full investigation of provincial-municipal responsibilites go.

As Reeve Alan Emmott said Friday, if Premier Bennett and Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell are so sure that existing formulas are the best, why should they fear examination?

There is one other question. If they are also sure that their way is the best and only way, why do they think sensible men such as Mayor Hugh Stephen, Mayor Joe Palyga (Trail) and other municipal leaders are alarmed?

These men, and the dozens like them across the province, cannot all be "politically unspired," to quote Mr. Campbell's somewhat insipid reason for not looking with favor on the royal commission idea.

They are men charged with the responsibility of running local government. They are worried that things are getting out of hand. And they, and the people they represent, deserve an answer from the senior level of government.

Just a reminder to faithful readers.

Last September Clyde Savage, then an alderman, touched off a few sparks of resentment when he suggested that the annual meeting of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities was a waste of time, and would continue to be a waste of time, until all local governments could unite in a common cause.

It took a little time for others to come around to that point of view and maybe now the common front has been found.

And one other friendly reminder: who was it who, two years or more ago, said that if something wasn't soon done about provincial-municipal relations there would be trouble?

The same gentleman, in the same speech from a public platform, forecast that if the then present trend continued, Victoria's tax rate would hit 70 mills in five years.

That was now Mayor Hugh Stephen, friends—and he appears to have come across the 70-mill rate sooner than he expected, and in a position of authority he did not then anticipate.

Those who say Victoria's mill rate will not be 70 mills this year will be correct. But it will be so close that no wild guesses will be required to forecast 70 mills for 1968—still two years shy of the original prophecy.

BLIND MAN DRAFTED FAMOUS LAW

GREEN
. . . Saskatchewan

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Saskatchewan's controversial Automobile Insurance Act, adopted by the legislature in 1944, was written by a man who has been blind since he was 12 years old.

Such a man (and what a man!) is John Green, QC, general counsellor to the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office.

Mr. Green is now appearing before the Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance at Victoria Law Courts with other officials of the Saskatchewan government.

How does a blind man become a lawyer, a Queen's Counsel and the author of a famous, although criticized, piece of legislation?

"I'm a fast Braille reader," the quiet unassuming Mr. Green told me. "Once you get accustomed to Braille you can read almost as fast as a sighted person.

"Your fingers become so sensitized to the impressions you can run your hand over a whole page and get a rough idea of what it says."

Born at Leeds, Yorkshire, England, Mr. Green came to Canada as a child and went to school in Regina.

When he was 12, a scar tissue formed on the optic nerve and he lost his sight. After learning Braille, he completed his high school education and went on to study law at the University of Saskatchewan and the University of California.

He graduated with honors and joined the Saskatchewan government as an assistant economic officer with the rehabilitation council.

When the government decided to draw up a plan of state automobile insurance, Mr. Green produced the act which was adopted by the legislature during the 1944 session.

"He deserves full credit for a most important piece of legislation," said John O. Dutton, general manager of the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office.

Mr. Dutton read a brief on the subject to the royal commission on automobile insurance Wednesday.

He and Mr. Green and W. G. McInnis, chief accident insurance underwriter, are now being cross-examined on the brief by Vancouver lawyer Douglas Brown on behalf of the insurance companies of Canada.

Mr. Green declined comment on the hearing, but said he was happy to answer any questions asked of him.

He is a past president of the Lions Club of Saskatchewan and has just been appointed zone chairman.

When he was asked if he had a favorite hobby, Mr. Dutton broke in and with a smile said:

"The Act."

But Mr. Green said he is a music lover who enjoys stereo recordings, sound tapes of many kinds and CBC talks.

"The world of sound is as comprehensive as the world of sight," he said.

Motoring Offence Costs Man $250

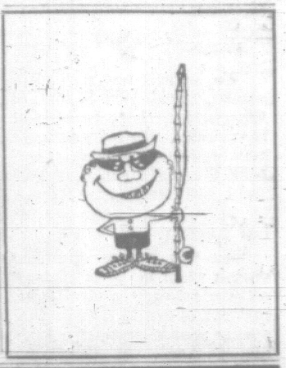
Michael K. Herriott, 4158 Wilkinson Road, was fined $250 and his licence was suspended for one year when he faced a dangerous driving charge Friday.

Evidence showed that Herriott had driven at high speed on Shelbourne, April 1, and had crashed into a tree after his car had travelled for 183 feet out of control.

Mental Health Talk

Psychiatrist Dr. John Phillips of the provincial mental health centre will discuss aspects of his work with adolescents at a meeting Tuesday at the Victoria Association for Emotionally Disturbed Children.

The meeting will be at Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook Street, at 8 p.m.



Hot Spell in June Could Be Trigger For Fraser Flood

VANCOUVER (CP)—In the valleys of the Fraser and Columbia Rivers, people are saying this could be the year—the first big flood since 1948.

It has been a tough winter in British Columbia interior, with more snow on the mountains and high plateaus than in any year since records first were kept in 1935.

And it is a cool spring, which means the runoff has been slow.

The danger is: If, in early June or thereabout, a sudden hot spell hits the interior, the rivers will swell and could inundate thousands of acres of rich farmlands in the valleys and on delta islands near Vancouver.

Provincial government authorities say they are better prepared than ever to deal with serious flooding. They say dikes never have been higher or stronger. They say they are ready for trouble and that emergency food, other supplies and communications have been set up.

PEOPLE REMEMBER

But the wet spectre of 1948 still haunts the lush river valleys.

The valley people remember rainy nights in tent cities on high ground. They remember emergency food airlifts. They remember the muddy Fraser flowing across several miles of rich farmland into the clear blue of Harrison Lake for the first time in anybody's memory.

They remember digging earth with their bare hands to fill the sandbags for the dikes.

In 1948 the authorities estimated 32,000 civilians and 1,500 service personnel took part in flood control and evacuation efforts.

Flood fighters labored through the nights in the eerie glow of army searchlights while trucks carried refugess and livestock to high ground.

All along the Fraser Valley, the river broke through dikes, burrowed underneath and boiled up on the other side.

RAILWAY DISRUPTED

A 15-foot wall of water ripped out the CPR main line near Hatzic Lake. No trans-continental trains arrived in Vancouver for three weeks.

Crops were ruined, families left homeless. Total cost: $13,000,000.

The valley people say this could be another 1948.

Ken Kiernan, minister of recreation and MLA for the Fraser Valley riding of Chilliwack, said:

"I have been observing the situation very closely. I don't think there is any particular advantage in running around making loud noises, but rather the process of quiet organization which is taking place is the way to meet the situation."

The government says it should know in May how the pattern of runoff will go.

SWIFTSURE PROBLEM TACKLED

Race Too Commercialized For Chamber of Commerce

Creeping commercialism in connection with the classic Swiftsure yacht race is to be tackled by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Acting on invitation of Victoria Yacht Club, the chamber is studying means of co-ordinating race information and ancillary activities held during the race May 27 and 28.

Plans are set for the 1967 running of the Swiftsure light race, so there will be no chamber involvement until possibly 1968.

President Courtney Haddock said the yachting fraternity takes a dim view of the increasingly commercial character of some publicity coverage given to the race.

He told a directors' meeting Friday the entry this year consists of 100 vessels—more than ever before—and if the trend continues, "we'll have organized chaos."

Most of the complaints are directed at radio commercials, Mr. Haddock said. But a cigarette firm came in for scorn last year with the use of a briefly-dressed girl handing out samples before a huge sign bearing the company's name.

The race is hoped some day to include British and Australian yachts besides the Canadian and U.S. entries Mr. Haddock said.

Before the handling of race information becomes too big a problem, he suggested a paid publicist be engaged by the chamber, centred perhaps at the Empress Hotel, where many of the wives and families of racers stay.

"We can make a mess of this," Mr. Haddock warned directors.

Tom Denny pointed out there are "not too many expert sailors among us."

He warned directors there are "people who get on the air who don't know the blunt end from the sharp end. They can make us look silly."

The chamber should get Pacific Northwest Sailing Association approval of any service proposed by the chamber in connection with the Swiftsure, Mr. Denny suggested.

He pointed out the Empress would not be as central as the information centre currently used, in a window of Eaton's store.

HARBOR OVERCROWDED

Sooke Harbor is overpopulated by 300 boats, Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors were told Friday.

Speaker John Slemko, president of Sooke Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber is pressing for increased small boat facilities to alleviate the crowding that is being experienced.

It was "ridiculous," he said, for fishing boats to be tied beam-to-beam 13 and 14 deep for want of berthing space.

Mr. Slemko reported on recent Sooke chamber activities, both before and since it became affiliated with Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

A project being explored now is a promotion of the American Motor Transport Association and the Highway 101 Association, which calls for ferry service between Neah Bay, Wash., and Sooke.

Such a link, Mr. Slemko said, would eliminate much driving time between the southern U.S. coast and Alaska or B.C. points between, as well as providing an alternate route for heavy truck traffic, off the popular freeway routes.

Ira Hill, chairman of the Know B.C. Better Air Tour, reported to Victoria members that the 1967 tour had to be cancelled due to a shortage of charter aircraft following the opening of Expo.

Direct Action Costs Sailor Pistol, $25

A sailor who said he preferred to settle his own differences with a pistol rather than go to the police was fined $25 in Central Court this morning when he pleaded guilty to possession of an offensive weapon.

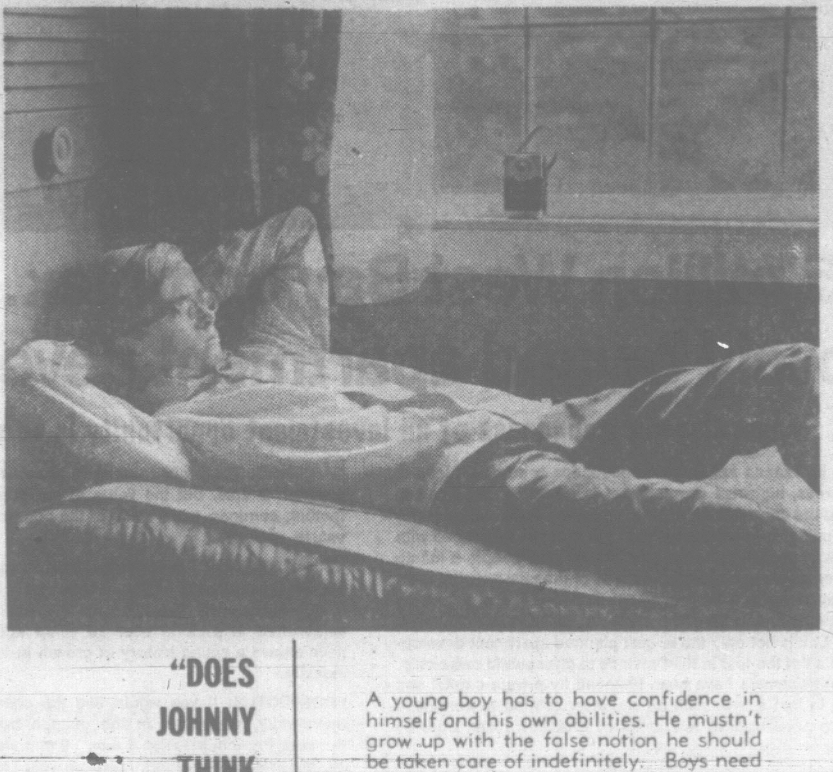
Esquimalt police, acting on information, picked up Kenneth Sevinski, 1330 Esquimalt Road, and found in his possession a .22 target pistol with four rounds in it and a box of .22 long rifle cartridges.

He said that he had been assaulted and was going to settle things himself.

The accused had been drinking, police said.

The court was told that the accused was on probation from July last year when he faced a charge of public mischief.

The court ordered the weapon confiscated.



"DOES JOHNNY THINK THE WORLD OWES HIM A LIVING?"

If interested in a newspaper route for your son, call or write the circulation manager of the VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

A young boy has to have confidence in himself and his own abilities. He mustn't grow up with the false notion he should be taken care of indefinitely. Boys need a little bit of independence when they reach a certain age.

There's no better way to teach your son these things than to let him manage his own newspaper route. He'll learn to budget his time, to keep accurate records; he'll learn the self-confidence that comes through day-to-day responsibility. And his profits will give him a head start on saving . . . toward an education perhaps.

If your son comes up to you someday and asks if he can have a newspaper route, don't give him the brush-off. He's showing a little initiative. And after all, that's how self-reliance is built.

It's Moulting Season Don't Ogle the Gals!

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — It's moulting season for both birds and girls and so the American Society of Girl Watchers has issued guidelines for its 5,000 members.

They are:

Don't ogle.

When passing a girl going in the same direction, don't turn the head around and stare.

Don't use binoculars — except at races.

Don't whistle, pinch, whisper or commit any other overt act.

Maintain eye-ball control at all times.

"We haven't any particular season," said Don Sauers of Eastchester, N.Y., founder of the society. "In fact, some of our best card-carrying members think ski pants in Vermont are sexier than bikinis in Miami or mini-skirts in Los Angeles.

"But this is the moulting season when the girls all take off their heavy over-clothing and get closer to nature. Our spring season starts the middle of April. At this time Fifth Avenue between 42nd Street and Central Park becomes the girl watchers' paradise of the world."

The society started as a gag out of the head of Sauers and grew into an institution.

Sauers, 44, father of five, was sitting around at lunch with some Madison Avenue pals about 10 years ago and a hip-swinging girl swung by the window. Sauers was suddenly struck with an idea.

"Bird watchers have their own organization — the Audubon Society. I suggested there are more girl watchers than bird watchers. Girls are more fun to watch. They all agreed."

The Quarry

The society now occupies quite lush, four - storey headquarters on 38th Street just off Park Avenue. It has members in 45 states and several foreign countries.

It has its own guide book, written by Sauers; its own theme song, Music to Watch Girls By, a popular ditty used by a soft drink firm; a lapel pin, just like the Elks, and a nine-article constitution.

The first article says, "There is nothing in the world more beautiful than a girl, especially not a bird." Another says, "A girl doesn't have to know how to count to be beautiful."

The society is an affiliate of The Professional Sports Management Corp. "After all, there is no greater sport than girl watching," says the current president, Ray Baur, 40, of Westport, Conn., father of six.

The society assesses only a $1 fee for life membership. This barely pays for the lapel pin and literature. The parent organization takes care of the rent.

Sauers says the purpose of the organization is to improve the climate of girl watching.

"A survey shows that the girls, 100 per cent of them, like to be watched," the founder added. "If a watcher is flagrant, the object, like a bird, gets frightened. We teach eye-ball dexterity. We want the girl to know she is being watched and to like it —but for it not to be obvious."

Sauers said one of the rules is not to watch girls in restaurants. "That's like watching birds in a zoo," he said. "They should be watched in their natural habitat—walking on the streets."

Watchers are not supposed to concentrate on any part of the anatomy — face, legs or hair. "We try to watch and appreciate the total girl," Sauers said.

The introduction of miniskirts has hampered rather than stimulated girl watching, President Baur insists.

"When a girl in a mini sits down, it's hard to remain poised and objective," he said.

CONSERVATIVE leadership race lost one of its candidates Friday when Dr. Hugh Horner, MP for Jasper-Edson, announced his withdrawal at a news conference in Edmonton. He will seek nomination for the Tories in the Alberta provincial riding of Lac St. Anne, a seat now held by the Social Credit party. If elected Mr. Horner will resign his seat in the Commons. He said the deciding factor was a telegram sent by Premier Manning to Alberta Conservative leader Peter Lougheed, asking him to support Socred candidates in the provincial election.

SERVICES UNIFICATION BILL

Tories Alone in Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives argued in the Commons Friday that the armed forces unification bill retains and adds to the power of the defence department to break commitments with its servicemen.

They repeated their conviction that officers commissioned into the army, navy or air force should not be compelled to accept commissions in the single new force.

And they claimed the government is hedging on a right of officers and men to get their release on six months' notice.

The Conservatives were almost alone in their fight Friday as the defence bill moved through the first of three final days of debate before the Tuesday night vote imposed by the guillotine rule.

The so-called guillotine move was debated Thursday, followed by a vote Thursday night in which New Democratic, Creditiste, and Social Credit members joined the government in defeating by 124 to 62 Conservative opposition to a three-day limit on further debate.

Two of the six key clauses in the bill were approved Friday, the 14th day of debate on the legislation.

OPPOSED BY PCs

A clause permitting servicemen to be signed on for indefinite as well as fixed terms was approved by a vote of 40 to 20. Only the Conservatives were opposed.

The parties split along the same lines on the clause setting out the single - service rank structure. The vote was 57 to 17.

After a good deal of acrimony over the guillotine rule Thursday, Friday's session started on a harmonious note as spokesmen for all parties offered good wishes to Prime Minister Pearson two days before his 70th birthday.

Mr. Pearson said at one point he wanted to move "closure" on the tributes.

Debate on the defence bill revolved largely on the question of terms of service in the force.

Defence Minister Hellyer said that while an officer or man may normally get his release on six months' notice, he has no right as such to this release.

It is policy to grant them, but "this is subject to the exigencies of the service."

J. Angus MacLean (PC—Queens) said the defence department is obliging servicemen to enter a binding contract when they sign up, but leaving an out to break the bargain itself.

"This is one of the most demoralizing situations a serviceman can find himself in," he said. "If a right exists only at the convenience of the service it is not a right at all."

DRAWS BLAST

The addition of a provision for indefinite terms of service, with retirement on six months notice, also drew Conservative blasts.

Douglas Harkness, former Conservative defence minister, said that if a large number of dissatisfied tradesmen tried to leave the service at one time, the service would either lose its effectiveness or their releases would have to be denied.

Either situation was intolerable.

Mr. Hellyer said the provision for indefinite terms was necessary to provide for flexibility.

The defence minister announced that under a recent policy change all aircrew in the armed forces now are required to serve a minimum of five years after completion of their training.

The expense of aircrew training made it necessary to expect more service time of officers.

SERVING CANADIANS

Canada May Get Biggest Cannon

OSLO, Norway (Reuters) — The biggest cannon of the Second World War, mounted by the Germans at Trondenes, near Harstad, northern Norway, may be used to launch weather satellites or research rockets in Canada.

A defence ministry official says McGill University is anxious to obtain two of the four cannon, nicknamed Adolfs, for space launchings. The West German defence ministry planned to place one in a museum.

The four Adolfs were capable of throwing shells weighing more than a ton for 29 miles.

The Trondenes fortress was completed by the Germans at the end of the war, but was never in action against Allied ships.

The defence ministry official said the Norwegian naval command had recommended the cannon be sold as scrap metal.

Their fate had not been decided yet. West German authorities appeared to be having second thoughts about the project because of the transport costs.

A deadline of Aug. 1 has been set for the West Germans and Canadians to make up their minds, the official said.

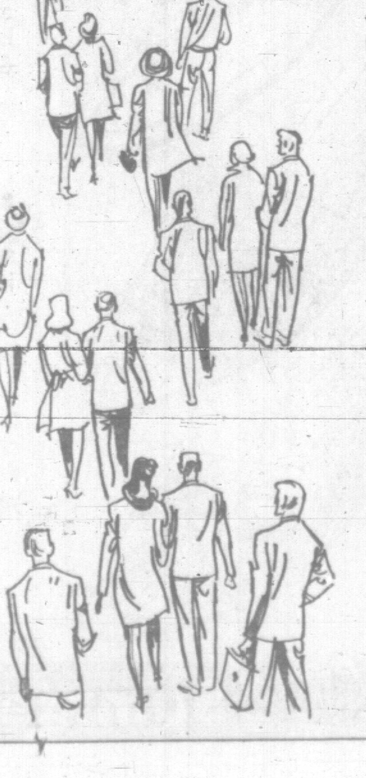
The Princess Patricia.

This is the $7.5 million West Bay complex... B.C.'s first publicly owned apartment development.

The best way to appraise the soundness of an investment opportunity is to study all the facts!



TRENDS: Everywhere in Canada apartment construction is surging forward. In metropolitan city areas, high-rise development is gaining ground and in many cities has passed the construction of single dwelling homes. With population estimates of 40 million or more by the year 2,000, Canada is faced with the overwhelming task of providing housing for 50,000 new people a month from now until then. Ten years ago only 13% or 154 of the new housing units built in Victoria were apartments. Last year 53.5% or 863 of the new housing units built were apartments, a spectacular increase of 560% in just 10 years. West Bay Investments Ltd. is not only the largest planned apartment development in British Columbia but the first in the Province to offer public ownership. Up until now, most developments have been financed by private capital and the profits have gone to just a few. With all statistics pointed to continued apartment construction acceleration, few areas of investment can offer so promising a future.

LOCATION: One of the most important factors in terms of profitability is location. The West Bay Development is less than three minutes from the heart of Victoria and is located in a sprawling 7½ acre park-like setting with ocean frontage. The area itself represents 20% of the total land zoned for high-rise development in the entire city. It is this kind of development that offers apartment dwellers the convenience, privacy and freedom of space they desire.

FACILITIES: The apartment dweller of today is interested in luxury and convenience. Just one look at the Princess Patricia, the first building completed in the five building complex, will convince you here is a building with everything. The many luxury features such as individual mail delivery, intercommunication systems, roof garden, reading lounge, recreation room, sauna bath, heated swimming pool and the magnificent ocean view will all contribute to an "easy-to-rent" situation. With 208 suites, an 85% occupancy exists and the building has only been open a few short months. With the Princess Patricia completed, the second phase of development is now well underway. By 1972 the entire complex will be complete and occupied with all land and park improvements.

EARNINGS: The profit from each apartment is divided among each of the common shares. But the value of the common share is made up of three factors: earnings, book value of the complex and potential rise in property values over cost.

MANAGEMENT: Of great importance in valuing the potential of any investment is the capability of the management . . . West Bay Investments Limited is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Lumber Ltd., a company established in Victoria over 18 years ago. For 18 years, Slegg Brothers have shown a sound history of growth in the construction and development industry.

PROSPECTUS: If you would like the complete details on this investment opportunity, please fill in the coupon below or drop over and visit the Princess Patricia between 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. daily. It's not how much you would be interested in investing, but how well. There is no obligation of course.

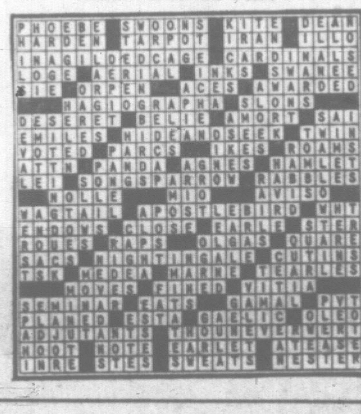
Answers to Previous Puzzle



A BAFFLING TRUTH

When first the marriage knot was tied
Betwixt my wife and me,
My age did hers by far exceed
As three times three does three;
But when ten years and half ten years
We married and wed had been,
My age did come as near to hers
As eight does to sixteen.

What were their ages when married?

Answer: When married he was 45 and she was 15 and at that time his age was thrice ers. After 15 years he was 60 and she was 30 and then his age was twice hers.

IT HAPPENS EVERY TIME

It seems very peculiar but no matter what number is selected between 10 and 1,000, the answer will always be either 9 or 18 if you do the following:

First: Add the digits in the number and subtract the result from the number itself.

Second: Add the digits in the new number.

Let's take an example—721 is a number picked at random. Add its digits and you get 10. Subtract this from 721 and you get 711. Add these digits and the result is 9. Now you try one.

WHO WAS THIS EXPLORER?

He became an authorized scout and hunter at age 14. He won the nickname "Daniel Boone of the Rocky Mountains." His discovery of the geysers and natural wonders of Yellowstone Park and Great Salt Lake were disbelieved until verified by subsequent observers. His stories were sometimes referred to as "Jim ——'s lies." Can you fill the blank?

Answer: He was American trader and explorer Jim Bridger.

Adams, Black, Carter, Dodd and Edgeworth put all their ready cash into a business deal. It was agreed that after the conclusion of the deal, the entire amount would be divided evenly between the five, without regard to the amounts of their original contributions to the pool. The venture was not as successful as expected. In fact after all expenses were paid, the amount remaining was the exact total of the original pool, $16,975. As a result of the even division, Black gained $633, Carter lost $748, Dodd gained $795 and Edgeworth lost $834. Did Adams win or lose?

Solution: One-fifth of $16,975 would have been $3,395. Allowing for losses and gains stated for others, we find Adams profited $154.

RECOGNIZE DOUBLETALK

Natives on island of Glumph don't have pockets, so they carry their valuables, which consist of muffs, huffs, ruffs and buffs, in a wheelbarrow. Two ruffs are worth three buffs and a huff. For 25 muffs they offer three ruffs, 2 huffs and a buff combined. How many muffs is a ruff, a huff, and a buff individually worth?

Answer: A buff is worth two muffs. A huff is worth four muffs. A ruff is worth five muffs.

FIND THE NUMBER

There is a number under 100 that cannot be evenly divided (that is, without a fractional remainder) by any other number except itself, yet it will evenly divide 111, 222, 333, 444, 555, 666, 777, 888, 999. What is the number?

It consists of two odd digits.

Answer: The number is 37.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

It is seldom that an original find of a great rarity comes to light today, for practically all such stamps, like famous works of art, have long pedigrees which can be traced from owner to owner for many years back.

So it is surprising to learn that a famous stamp of which only five copies are known was recently discovered in an old deed box in Bermuda, in an enveope marked "1861 stamp."

The stamp in question is known as the "Perot Crowned Circle" and is named for the man who was postmaster of Bermuda from 1818 to 1862, and who, over 100 years ago, was responsible for its issue.

PRIMITIVE FRANK

Perot as far back as 1847 realized the advantages of prepaying mail by means of adhesive labels, so he manufactured his own by the simple expedient of making a dozen impressions of the Hamilton postmark on sheets of blue paper.

His customers cut these apart as required and stuck them on their letters.

The provisionals exist in two types, the first being a plain circular date stamp reading "Hamilton, Bermuda," with the addition of the value (1d), and Perot's signature in ink to make them official.

The second is somewhat similar, but has a crown added to the design. For some reason the postmaster didn't bother to sign these, or to denote their value. In cancelling his stamps he simply penmakred them with an X.

LONG UNKNOWN

Their rarity may be judged by the fact that the existence of the first type stamps was not know to philatelists until 1897, and that a further 48 years was to elapse before the first "Crowned Circle" came to light.

The recently discovered example was sold at Harmers in London for $6,000 to an American. Even the Royal collection lacks this stamp.

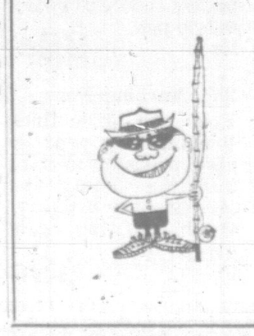
As a Centennial project the Samsonite Co. of Canada at Stratford is preparing a series of covers to commemorate the opening of the city's first heliport, which happens to be located on the roof of the plant.

On July 6th the Canadian Centennial 'copter will arrive with its special covers which will be delivered to the P.O. by the pilot, Frank Ogden. There they will be franked and mailed out to all collectors who request them.

The flight starts at Newfoundland and will end up on the Pacific coast. To get a cover just send your name and address to: Stamp Collector, Samsonite of Canada, Queens Highway E, Stratford Ont.



CALL ROOM SERVICE?

"We have in this room a banker, an author, a dentist and a lawyer whose names are Banks, Law, Tooth and Pen," remarked Mr. Banks.

The dentist, whose surname corresponded to Mr. Pen's profession, responded that it was remarkable, too, that their names did not agree with their respective occupations. What was the name and profession of each? P.S. Banks' bailiwick was books.

Answer: Mr. Banks, author; Mr. Pen, lawyer; Mr. Law, dentist; Mr Tooth, banker.

OLD BUT STILL PUZZLING

This famous old brainbuster is always new when you try to work it out.

Aunt Minnie was on the train leaving New York for Washington travelling at 25 mph. At the same time, Cousin Bessie was on another train leaving Washington for New York speeding along on a parallel track at 50 miles per hour. Both trains left their respective stations at exactly the same instant. When the two trains met, which was nearer New York?

Pencil and paper are not needed for this.

Answer: When the two trains met, both of them were the same distance from New York, of course. If you don't think so, read it over again.

GIVE AND TAKE SUMMONS QUERY

From a certain sum John Dough took away a third and put in its place $50. From the resulting sum he took away one-fourth and put $70 in its place. Then he had $130. What was his original sum?

Answer: The original sum was $45.

3 of 4 Leaders Favor Yes Vote

Three of the four Greater Victoria reeves and mayors have come out in favor of a yes vote in the May 13 school referendum.

The fourth, Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich, said he was not prepared to endorse it without studying the $13,930,234 spending program in detail.

Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant said he would recommend to his council next Monday that it give unanimous support.

"While we reserve our right to dissent with the fiscal arrangements the provincial government imposes upon us, we must also do what we can to ease the critical situation now facing us in the field of education," he said.

A similar stand was taken Thursday by Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria.

Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox Friday said the referendum had his personal support and his council would take a stand after hearing from the school board on its proposals.

If passed, the referendum (actually two: referendum 10 and 11) would allow for borrowing over a 20-year period to buy and develop land, build schools and buy equipment over the next three years.

The school mill rate would not be affected this year but would have to be adjusted next year for the monies borrowed.

The mill rate has already been set for this year at 28.06.

AWARDED this year's Dag Hammarskjold prize for literary merit is William Manchester, author of The Death of a President, it was announced in Stresa, Italy, today.

'STOP VIETNAM WAR' NOT ON EXPO PROGRAM

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal city council Friday night adopted a bylaw banning demonstrations, parades, meetings and unauthorized speeches at the site of Expo 67 or its approaches.

The bylaw, which had been the subject of an orderly demonstration of protest earlier Friday, was described by one municipal leader as not intended to threaten "the fundamental rights of protest recognized in our democracy."

The official, Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the Montreal executive committee, said: "There is a time and a place for everything." Expo was "neither time nor the place for demonstrations."

There need be no fear of measures such as this one being extended to the remainder of the city in future, Mr. Saulnier said.

This was a point on which the Friday demonstrators placed particular stress. They belonged to groups opposing the war in Vietnam.

The executive chairman said the new bylaw is limited as to duration and place. A reading of it would show that it was "perfectly reasonable."

UBCM Calls Emergency Meeting

An emergency meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities executive will be held Friday in New Westminster.

This was announced today by Mayor H. J. Gardner of Williams Lake, president of the UBCM.

The move follows province-wide concern by municipal leaders at the large increase this year in school costs.

"We are very concerned about the rising cost of schools," Mayor Gardner said in a telephone interview.

"What the answer is I'm not too sure."

Municipalities have found they must raise up to an extra five mills towards the cost of schools this year.

Mayor Gardner said he didn't plan on an executive meeting until June, but the widespread concern at school costs brought a response from municipal leaders for an immediate UBCM meeting.

THOUGHT MISTAKE

One interior city mayor, when he saw school costs up 4.29 mills, shrugged it off at first as a mistake.

"It came as a great shock when I realized the figure was accurate," he added.

The increase in the Victoria area is 4.8 mills.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen has received support from other municipal leaders in his call for a royal commission to examine all aspects of provincial-municipal responsibilities and cost-sharing formulas.

This request will be introduced at the annual UBCM meeting in September at Prince George.

Scooped Moon 'Lumpy'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor III dug a trench about three feet long and at least six inches deep in the surface of the moon today but uncovered nothing spectacular.

The trench, the second scooped out by a two-by-five-inch shovel in less than three hours, turned up a considerable amount of lumpy material much like that on the undisturbed surface.

Pictures of the operation, televised to controllers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, showed no surprises and nothing to indicate the moon's surface might be unsafe for manned landings.

Early today the spidery device did its first digging—a foot-long trench in three jerky motions lasting two seconds each.

The scoop made a second pass through the trench about an hour later but spokesmen said the pictures were not clear enough to show whether the trench had been deepened.

Surveyor III first dropped the scoop into the soil between two of its legs, creating a rectangular hole about 1½ nches deep.

After a brief delay to let the electronics of Surveyor's overheating camera cool off, the shovel was moved to the right and lowered again with its scoop opened.

The trench that resulted when the scoop was pulled back appeared sharply defined in photographs. This indicated the lunar soil was strongly cohesive, simílar to wet sand.

A spokesman said the texture and grain of the soil around the spacecraft appeared about as expected—not too soft for a man to walk on nor so hard it would damage a landing vehicle.

Armored Cars Halt Attacks on Chinese

JAKARTA (Reuters) — Indonesian troops and police, using armored cars, today blocked off Chinatown and other business centres in Jakarta after hundreds of young Indonesians ran wild and destroyed Chinese-owned property.

Youths armed with Molotov cocktails, knives, crow bars and bicycle chains marched to the Communist Chinese Embassy for retaliatory against Chinese merchants who staged an anti - government demonstration Thursday.

Troops prevented them from forcing their way into the tightly barred building.

Many Chinese citizens were rescued by troops when their vehicles were stopped by the mob.

The earlier Chinese demonstration was over the death of a Chinese held by the government.

Stopped from entering the embassy by hundreds of troops and police, the angry Indonesians demanded expulsion of the Chinese and a break of relations.

The demonstrators also set fire to Chinese-owned cars near the embassy and stoned Chinese stores.

BUT COURT HARSH ON BURNS

'Bagpipe Skirl Not Noise'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bearded Scot stood resplendent in kilt and sporran in magistrate's court Friday and smiled when his playing' a the pipes was defended.

But he had to turn the other cheek when Magistrate Les Bewley called Robbie Burns a "third rate poet."

Pipe Major Gordon Webb, 26, of the University of British Columbia pipe band was charged with causing a disturbance during a nocturnal skirl outside a downtown apartment on Burns night, last, Jan. 26.

Webb, and two of his companions who had joined in the piping, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Evidence was that an irate apartment dweller tossed four pans of water on the celebrants, but to no avail.

Axel Tuhman testified the three entered his apartment and left only after repeated requests.

Magistrate Bewley dismissed the charges after defence cousel referred to an appeal court decision which ruled the bagpipes are not noise.

The magistrate, who said his background was part-Phoenician and part-Norman, said he was at a loss to understqnd "the veneration of a third-rate poet who talks about that unheard of thing called the haggis."

'Reluctant' King Backs Greek Coup

ATHENS (CP)—King Constantine swore in seven more ministers to complete a new Greek cabinet today after a day of hesitation over whether to put the royal seal on a military administration.

The swearing in was announced by a government spokesman who told journalists: "The king is with us."

He said that three of the seven new ministers were judges. They join the four army officers and the new prime minister, Constantine Kollias, who set up the government Friday night after an army coup.

Some sources said the 26-year-old king was reluctant earlier to sign a decree which would have made the new cabinet and the new emergency laws legal.

KING BALKED

He was reported to have balked at giving his approval until the government was filled with more civilian figures.

Meanwhile, the Greek navy and air force were reported to have thrown full support to the army leaders who took over the government in Friday's pre-dawn coup.

A government source termed as wild some reports that a split had developed between the army, coup leaders and other army officers, the navy and the air force.

"The three arms are fully behind the coup leaders, who are determined to lead the country forward and out of the chaos created by the political bickering," the source said.

Premier Kollias said that the coup had been "bloodless" except for two casualties.

He said "calm and order" prevailed throughout Greece.

As the Greek capital returned toward normal, Kollias issued a statement broadcast by the Greek armed forces radio.

"The army's intervention was bloodless there were only two casualties. One casualty was from a ricocheting bucet and the other when the victim did not obey orders of a soldier under instruction."

Communications were still spotty and news correspondents were told to exercise "self-censorship of responsibility," to avoid speculation and to feport only what they see and are told by officials.

Military units that had ringed Athens were withdrawn.

Diplomatic reports in London and Copenhagen said the king was at Tatoi Palace outside Athens at the time of the predawn coup Friday. This raised a possibility he may have been caught by surprise. A Turkish dispatch said even top army officers also may have been surprised by a coup launched by a handful of officers, joined later by others.

A pooled dispatch by AP correspondent Philip Dopoulos from Athens reported the night was filled with sporadic shooting in and around the Greek capital. The dispatch said there were unconfirmed reports that

Tornado Toll Mounts

CHICAGO (UPI) — The wreckage left by the worst tornado onslaught ever to smash northern Illinois yielded new bodies today.

National guardsmen patrolled devastated towns with orders to shoot looters on sight.

The death toll of the vicious band of twisters which hit eight states Friday stood at 50. Scores of persons, many of them children, were still missing and the fatality count appeared certain to rise.

Total damage was estimated at close to $50 million.

Eighteen twisters carved a 175-mile path across northern Illinois and struck with lethal power at the Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn and the farm town of Belvidere, 55 miles to the northwest.

There were 27 dead at Oak Lawn and 20 at Belvidere. Other deaths were recorded in Chicago, suburban Stone Park, and Jonesville, Mich.

An estimated 1,500 persons were injured in the Illinois cities and communities of Oak Lawn, Belvidere, Chicago, Stone Park, Hometown, Evergreen Park, Barrington, Lake Zurich, North Barrington, Woodstock and Glenview.

Illinois was not alone in suffering the tornadoes' fury. Twisters hit from Oklahoma to Ohio, where the last of the night's funnel clouds were sighted near Fluffton at 2 a.m. today.

Damage in the Grand Rapids, Mich., area was estimated at $3 million and twisters also touched down in Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin and Indiana.

As midwesterners tried to dig out from the tornado's devastation, tornado watches were ordered today for parts of six eastern states—central and eastern New York, northeast Pennsylvania, northwest New Jersey, southeast Virginia, southern and eastern North Carolina, and northeast South Carolina.

With dawn, the search for more bodies began. In Oak Lawn, deputies probed the rubble of what had been the Fairview store and discovered the body of 18-month-old Christine Casey. Across the street, they came upon the body of her mother, Mrs. Joan Casey, 30.

Close to 800 Guardsmen were ordered into Oak Lawn with orders to shoot to kill if vandalism or looting broke out. Sheriff's deputies arrested one man discovered in an abandoned home as a looter. The officers used a police dog to sniff him out.

Gov. Otto Kerner sent an urgent call to the White House for federal aid and hurried to the disaster areas. He flew over the wreckage of Belvidere and described what he saw as "a corridor of destruction."

As Kerner arrived, more than 100 Guardsmen clad in battle fatigues joined with deputies and police from throughout northern Illinois in a grim, foot-by-foot search of the devastated area around the town's high school.

The men formed a human chain as they moved across the area where the roaring black funnel caught children as they emerged from the school Friday.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1967 --PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

For quite a while now, I have been haunted by the realization that something familiar has vanished from the Saanich daylight scene. But what it was didn't dawn on me until yesterday, when a canine acquaintance trotted down our drive.

Here, amiably unrepentant, was the first pooch-on-the-loose spotted in many a day.

This seemed to indicate that the crackdown on strays is enjoying at least temporary success. But appearances can be deceiving, so later I sought information from Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson.

Mr. Pearson confirmed my observation—up to a point. During the daylight hours, Saanich's roving-dog headache has eased considerably.

However, in the early morning and late evening, the situation deteriorates. Then, "great quantities" of dogs are turned loose to frolic at large, and mabye mess up neighbors' gardens.

With the light coming earlier and lasting longer, and with surveillance increasing, this practice is becoming pretty risky, and could bring the dog-owner pound fees and a court fine if warnings fail to take.

Meanwhile, great quantities of law-abiding householders are honestly attempting to keep Bonzo on the right side of the property line, though not always successfully.

Before the present push, they may not have worried too much if the family dog strolled out to the street or across the road to play with a friend. Today such casual excursions can rouse something very like panic.

Witness the frazzled housewife, upon whom the brunt of the problem so often falls.

There she stands, something about to boil over on the stove, peering anxiously from her porch. She toots on a whistle. Indoors, the phone begins to ring.

Since few dogs in residential areas are well trained—or trained at all, for that matter—Bonzo scampers on regardless.

A worried hour, then he comes wagging home, to be clipped on the chain or rope which the head of the house has decreed for him in the back yard.

He fusses, frets and barks. Our housewife goes out to untangle him, and gets a rope-burn across the back of her ankles when he dashes behind her.

For her, as for Bonzo, life has taken on new complications.

The above is a picture after the fact as reported to me at this observation post. It is being repeated often enough each day in Saanich to deserve consideration.

I am speaking here of and to those who honestly want to keep a dog as a family friend. Anyone whose feelings on this matter are lukewarm shouldn't own a dog, and if saddled with one, should turn it in to the SPCA.

The wanted dog, if he and you are to live happily in suburbia, should be trained, not haphazardly, but under expert instruction.

If he happens to be old and set in nis ways, this can be difficult, though not impossible.

Dave Beeching, SPCA Animal Shelter director, strongly recommends an obedience school course as the training agent. He suggests further that if there's a boy or girl of 12 years or over in the family, he or she may well enroll the dog and see him through weekly classes and "homework".

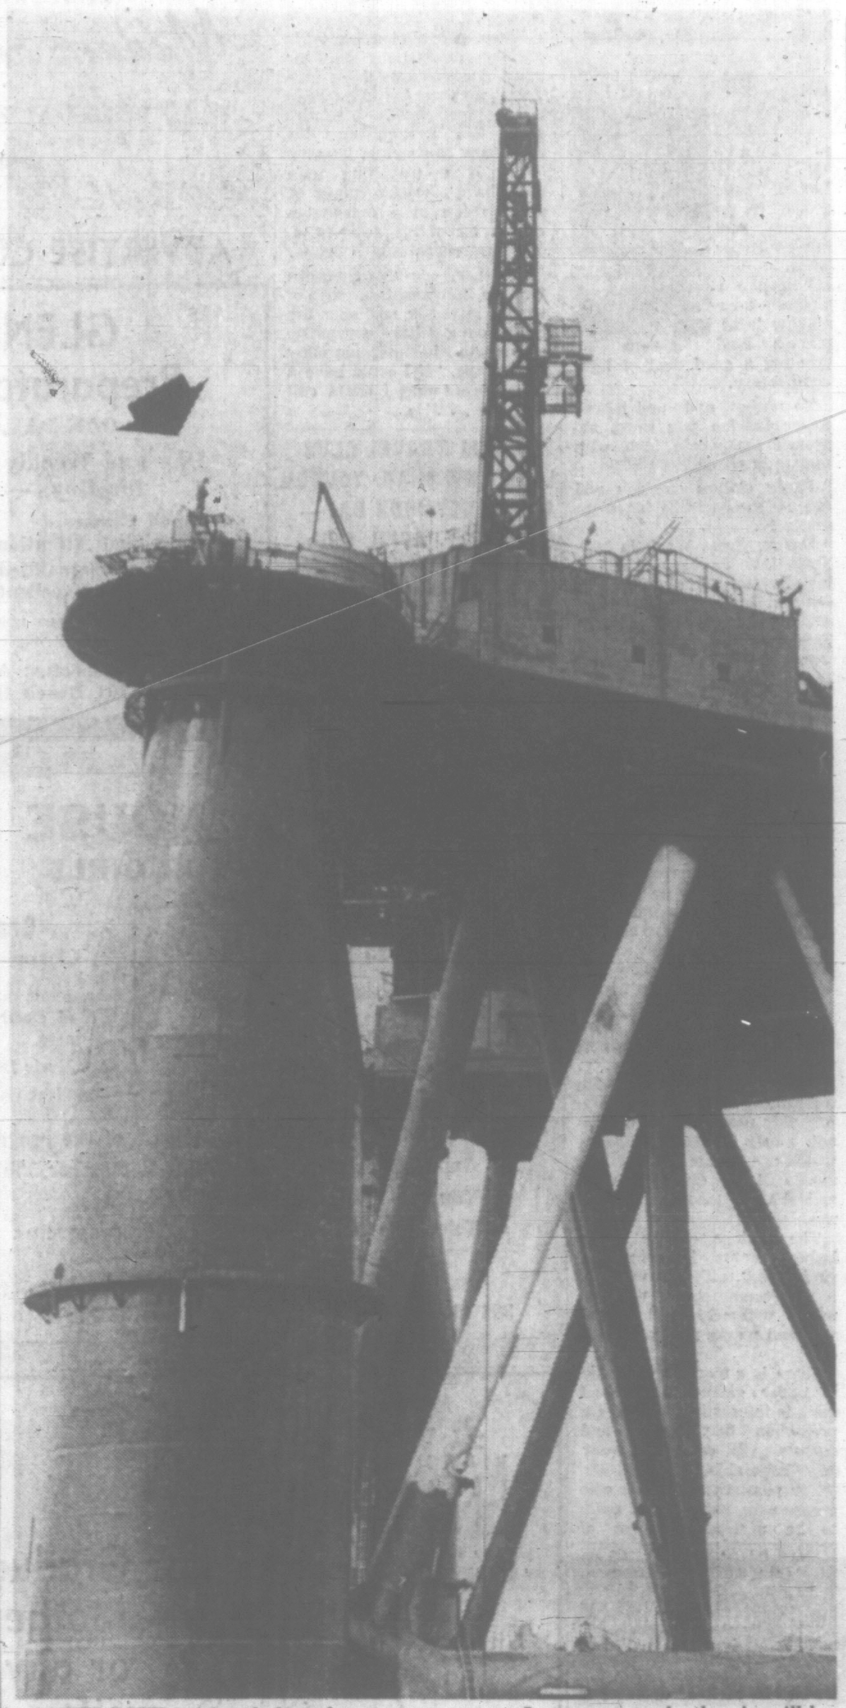
The fee at any of our four dog obedience schools (one of them in Sidney) is modest, and the results remarkable.

Training and exercising a dog demands contributions of family time. But the day is coming up fast when only the trained dog will be tolerated by the community.

However, one further point should be clearly understood.

An ounce or two of tolerance by non-dog owners—and a minimum of heavy-handedness by the municipality—is essential to the success of any dog control attempt.

This business of mild trespass by Zonzo has no place in the courts.



QUIET LIFE in the sheltered waters of Victoria's Inner Harbor is all but over for the world's largest oil drilling rig. Due for completion in five days' time, the rig had its drilling tower erected Friday. Towering 160-feet above the main deck, the derrick dwarfs a workman (arrow). Weighing 72 tons, the derrick took an hour to erect. Late next week, the rig will be towed to sea for a week of trials. Later it will begin work off the west coast boring through the ocean floor. It has been built by Victoria Machinery Depot at a cost of $9 million. Total height is 336 feet. Work was finished a month ahead of schedule. (Irving Strickland photo.)

MAIN UNPLUGGED

Flood Missed Water Chief

A torrent of water sped down the eastern side of Mount Tolmie late Friday, flooding three basements.

Saanich waterworks superintendent Harry Greenwood blamed children for disturbing the blocking that held the plug in a 14-inch main.

The pipe, which splits off the one through the park, is to be connected to the new reservoir on the top of Mount Tolmie.

The flood was reported about 5:30 p.m. and the water was turned off within 40 minutes. Saanich crews continued mopping up until past 10 p.m.

Mr. Greenwood said three basements were flooded to a depth of about one foot.

One of the first to report the flood, but escaping the water, was Ron Upward, commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water District, who lives at 3532 Plymouth.

CANDIDATE for leadership of Canada's Progressive Conservative Party, Hon. Davie Fulton of Kamloops will speak on Priorities in Government at a meeting of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria in the Empress Hotel Wednesday, May 3 at 12:15.

'Beat Government, Act Now on Tax'

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Haddock warned Friday a proposed hotel tax would fall to the provincial government unless Victoria imposes it first.

"If we don't put this tax in ourselves, it will be a provincial tax," he told a meeting of chamber directors.

The proposed tax—suggested by Mayor Hugh Stephen after a visit to Palm Springs where a similar levy raises money—would be for tourist promotion and to help finance a convention centre.

Mr. Haddock said in fairness to the hotel and motel operators who would collect it, the city should allow them a fraction of the tax.

There has been no formal effort made to introduce the tax.

Tourist trade chairman Sam Lane said his group will call a meeting of those in the industry to deal with the suggestion of a tax.

He felt some form of tax would be recommended, whether it will be a room tax or some other form of business levy.

He noted that those in the hotel trade are third in line for "a crack at the tourist dollar".

Referring to dominion bureau of statistics figures, Mr. Lane said the food and beverage industries come first and retail purchases are next.

Indians Trip of a Lifetime All 'a Wrong Impression'

By DON DINGWALL

It was to have been the trip of a lifetime.

A visit to Expo 67 with all expenses paid.

For many of the youngsters in Kuper Island Indian residential school band it would have been their first — and probably last — chance to see the world.

But a simple mix-up has robbed them of that chance.

Said school principal, Father Collins, today: "I just don't know how to tell them.

"They've talked about nothing else for the last two months."

The Big Mistake began in March when school teacher Brother Dufour received a letter saying the Montreal trip would be sponsored by the Indian Arts and Welfare Society of Victoria.

Writer of the letter was Mrs. Hattie Ferguson, a director of the Indian Cultural Society and Indian Centre in Vancouver.

She said today: "I was given a wrong impression by the Victoria society."

Said Mrs. Donald Esselmont, corresponding secretary of the Victoria organization: "We never ever were going to sponsor the band to Expo.

"We never stated or implied that we would and Mrs. Ferguson never was told by us the band would be sent to Montreal."

She said the first she knew of the proposed trip by the colorful fife and drum band was from a story in the Times.

Of her organization's part in the matter she said: "We're not that kind of society nor do we have the funds."

Further misunderstanding arose when Mrs. Esselmont wrote to Brother Dufour congratulating him on the band's forthcoming visit to Expo.

Mrs. Esselmont said she wrote the letter after reading the press report and believing the Cultural Society of Vancouver was acting as sponsor.

She said in issuing a statement about her organization sponsoring the trip, Brother Dufour was misinterpreting her letter.

"I have told him that as far as we are concerned the subject is closed."

Abel Joe, chairman of Cowichan Indian Band's centennial committee, has been trying all week to find ways to raise the money.

But he admitted today: "We haven't been able to get anywhere.

"I don't know how the society was going to raise the $10,000 required but the children should not have been told they were going."

Mrs. Ferguson said Expo officials asked for the bands of the three Indian residential schools in B.C. (Kuper, Alberni and Williams Lake).

But they have to pay their own expenses.

Because one teacher, George Clutesi, is a native Indian, Alberni school is able to claim Indian affairs department grants to assist the band's passage east.

Mrs. Ferguson has written to Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing and Attorney-General Robert Bonner asking help for Kuper and Williams Lake bands.

She said: "I haven't given up hope yet that the children may go to Expo."

But she is more optimistic that Father Collins.

He said Friday: "The sad thing will be telling the children, but I suppose it was just one of those unfortunate things that happens."

Ask The Times

Q. In Ask The Times April 14 a veterinarian said that only four women are accepted (in Canadian colleges) each year. He was wrong. My son graduated in May, 1966, and seven women graduated with him. How about that? W.H.

A. No doubt. But only four women are accepted each year. The others, says the veterinarian, would have joined the course in the second or third year from other courses or might have been repeaters.

Q. How much money do Canadians contribute to the upkeep of the Royal Family? O.K.

A. Nothing. The Canadian government does not budget money for that purpose. The Royal Family income comes from British government appropriations and private income.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Union Opposed By Councillor

C. Saanich, N. Saanich Better Mates

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A Brentwood councillor said today North Saanich should amalgamate with Central Saanich instead of Sidney.

Coun. Philip Benn said his municipality should explore without delay union with the northern area.

Sidney and North Saanich are conducting an amalgamation study.

SIMILAR PROBLEMS

"I feel it would be more to the advantage of North Saanich to join with Central Saanich," he said. "We are both rural and residential and face similar problems."

Once amalgamated, he said, Brentwood could be planned and developed as the major commercial and cultural centre for residents of the northern peninsula.

Installation of a sewage system at Brentwood would permit expansion of public services, he pointed out.

LOOK TO BRENTWOOD

He said in the past three years more and more North Saanich residents have been looking to Brentwood as their commercial centre.

"The only obstacle is the library service which is presently located in Sidney," he said. "But there is no reason why we can't establish a library at Brentwood."

He was disappointed when North Saanich was not given a chance to vote on amalgamation before it became an incorporated district two years ago.

ECONOMIC

The move to incorporate North Saanich and Sidney is prompted by economic reasons.

North Saanich has no commercial and industrial zone and must either develop one for taxation purposes or join its urban neighbor.

Sidney at first reacted slowly to the amalgamation proposal initiated by North Saanich, but lately has shown increased interest.

Borrow Bunting For Centennial

Greater Victoria Centennial Society is offering decorations to all organizations holding Centennial events, co-ordinator Jerry Gosley said today.

Nylon flags, table decorations and banners can be borrowed from the society at 14 Centennial Square.

BANK FIRE DESTROYS RECORDS

A fire in a bank storeroom at the Burnside Plaza early today destroyed some bank records.

Saanich firemen rushed to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 3480 Tillicum, at about 5:30 a.m. when a neighbor turned in the alarm.

A malfunction in a furnace is considered the most likely cause of the blaze. Shelves, walls and ceiling were damaged in the storeroom and light water damage was reported in the adjacent Bedrock Children's Shoes.

No dollar estimate of loss was available.

BY LABOUR BOARD

Order Enforced Against Firm

The Labor Relations Board has filed a directive against a Victoria taxi company with the registrar of the Supreme Court.

The action reported today by the board, was taken after C & C Taxi Service Ltd. failed to comply with a board order last February.

Under the Labor Relations Act, where anyone fails to comply with a board order the board files its order with the registrar of the Supreme Court "and thereupon the order is enforceable as a judgment or order of the court."

The board's action followed representation by Local 234 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, which represents the taxi drivers.

Last February the Labor Relations Board ordered C & C to reinstate John Drury and to pay him $629.43 "being wages lost by reason of his improper discharge."

Impaired Driver Fined $350

A youth whose car was wrecked when it went out of control on Admirals Road Friday night was fined $350 for impaired driving today.

Craig Allistair Campbell, of HMCS Saskatchewan pleaded guilty to the charge when he appeared in central court.

Police said the car skidded almost 300 feet before crashing into a ditch near Craigflower shortly before midnight.

A passenger, Glen Borkowsky, also of HMCS Saskatchewan, was treated for arm injuries.

NO WORD ON SELF-SERVE LIQUOR STORE

The B.C. Liquor Control Board Friday declined to deny rumors that its liquor store at Fort and Foul Bay soon will become the province's fourth "self-serve" operation.

The Safeway store soon will move into new quarters nearby and there has been an indication that the LCB would re-locate its store in the present Safeway building.

Asked if the rumors were true or untrue, an official said "the board has no statement to make."

The first self-serve liquor store was opened in the Brentwood Shopping Centre on the lower mainland in 1962 and proved an instant success. Others have been opened at shopping plazas in North Vancouver and Port Moody areas since then.

UBCM Calls Emergency Meeting

An emergency meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities executive will be held Friday in New Westminster.

This was announced today by Mayor H. J. Gardner of Williams Lake, president of the UBCM.

The move follows province-wide concern by municipal leaders at the large increase this year in school costs.

"We are very concerned about the rising cost of schools," Mayor Gardner said in a telephone interview.

"What the answer is I'm not too sure."

Municipalities have found they must raise up to an extra five mills towards the cost of schools this year.

Mayor Gardner said he didn't plan on an executive meeting until June, but the widespread concern at school costs brought a response from municipal leaders for an immediate UBCM meeting.

THOUGHT MISTAKE

One interior city mayor, when he saw school costs up 4.29 mills, shrugged it off at first as a mistake.

"It came as a great shock when I reaized the figure was accurate," he added.

The increase in the Victoria area is 4.8 mills.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen has received support from other municipal leaders in his call for a royal commission to examine all aspects of provincial-municipal responsibilities and cost-sharing formulas.

This request will be introduced at the annual UBCM meeting in September at Prince George.

Scooped Moon 'Lumpy'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor III dug a trench about three feet long and at least six inches deep in the surface of the moon today but uncovered nothing spectacular.

The trench, the second scooped out by a two-by-five-inch shovel in less than three hours, turned up a considerable amount of lumpy material much like that on the undisturbed surface.

Pictures of the operation, televised to controllers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, showed no surprises and nothing to indicate the moon's surface might be unsafe for manned landings.

Early today the spidery device did its first digging—a foot-long trench in three jerky motions lasting two seconds each.

The scoop made a second pass through the trench about an hour later but spokesmen said the pictures were not clear enough to show whether the trench had been deepened.

Surveyor III first dropped the scoop into the soil between two of its legs, creating a rectangular hole about 1½ inches deep.

After a brief delay to let the electronics of Surveyor's overheating camera cool off, the shovel was moved to the right and lowered again with its scoop opened.

The trench that resulted when the scoop was pulled back appeared sharply defined in photographs. This indicated the lunar soil was strongly cohesive, similar to wet sand.

A spokesman said the texture and grain of the soil around the spacecraft appeared about as expected—not too soft for a man to walk on nor so hard it would damage a landing vehicle.

'Reluctant' King Backs Greek Coup

ATHENS (CP)—King Constantine swore in seven more ministers to complete a new Greek cabinet today after a day of hesitation over whether to put the royal seal on a military administration.

The swearing in was announced by a government spokesman who told journalists: "The king is with us."

He said that three of the seven new ministers were judges. They join the four army officers and the new prime minister, Constantine Kollias, who set up the government Friday night after an army coup.

Some sources said the 26-year-old king was reluctant earlier to sign a decree which would have made the new cabinet and the new emergency laws legal.

KING BALKED

He was reported to have balked at giving his approval until the government was filled with more civilian figures.

Meanwhile, the Greek navy and air force were reported to have thrown full support to the army leaders who took over the government in Friday's pre-dawn coup.

A government source termed as wild some reports that a split had developed between the army coup leaders and other army officers, the navy and the air force.

Armored Cars Halt Attacks on Chinese

JAKARTA (Reuters) — Indonesian troops and police, using armored cars, today blocked off Chinatown and other business centres in Jakarta after hundreds of young Indonesians ran wild and destroyed Chinese-owned property.

Youths armed with Molotov cocktails, knives, crow bars and bicycle chains marched to the Communist Chinese Embassy for retaliation against Chinese merchants who staged an anti-government demonstration Thursday.

Troops prevented them from forcing their way into the tightly barred building.

Many Chinese citizens were rescued by troops when their vehicles were stopped by the mob.

The earlier Chinese demonstration was over the death of a Chinese held by the government.

Stopped from entering the embassy by hundreds of troops and police, the angry Indonesians demanded expulsion of the Chinese and a break of relations.

The demonstrators also set fire to Chinese-owned cars near the embassy and stoned Chinese stores.

BUT COURT HARSH ON BURNS

'Bagpipe Skirl Not Noise'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bearded Scot stood resplendent in kilt and sporran in magistrate's court Friday and smiled when his playing 'a the pipes was defended.

But he had to turn the other cheek when Magistrate Les Bewley called Robbie Burns a "third rate poet."

Pipe Major Gordon Webb, 26, of the University of British Columbia pipe band was charged with causing a disturbance during a nocturnal skirl outside a downtown apartment on Burns Night, last Jan. 26.

Webb, and two of his companions who had joined in the piping, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Evidence was that an irate apartment dweller tossed four pans of water on the celebrants, but to no avail.

Axel Tuhman testified the three entered his apartment and left only after repeated requests.

Magistrate Bewley dismissed the charges after defence counsel referred to an appeal court decision which ruled the bagpipes are not noise.

The magistrate, who said his background was part-Phoenician and part-Norman, said he was at a loss to understand "the veneration of a third-rate poet who talks about that unheard-of thing called the haggis."

DAZZLING STYLE and fire of these Russian dancers rouse audiences everywhere to fervent enthusiasm. Gravity-defying leaps, incredible speed and flexibility are trade-marks of the group accompanying the famous Red Army Chorus and musicians who are preceding an Expo appearance with a limited Canadian tour. Their single appearance at Memorial Arena next Saturday night, is sandwiched between six performances at Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth Theatre. Dancers at left shows traditional leaping form while accordionist above desn't miss a note in flight.

By BRAD NUGENT

The 7th Edition, a Victoria group which is undobtedly the most versatile band in town, are finally getting the recognition they deserve.

Placing second in last month's city wide Battle of the Bands, at the Tango, they showed the crowds how they can mix a taste-of-brass with all the chart-topping songs of today as well as being experts at the Tijuana slund that is currently so popular.

Formerly known as D. J. and The Syndicate, Vic Summerfeldt, guitar; Reg Young, bass; John McGrath, trumpet; Ted Keehn, saxophone; Scott Summerfeldt, organ; and drummer Dave Johl, are being sought for many teen dances as well as dances geared for the older set and are receiving rounds and rounds of applause whenever they take the stage.

Due to be released next week in Canada is a double LP Live at the Grooveyard.

Recorded at the Vancouver teen spot, The Grooveyard, the records feature seven of Vancouver's top bands.

Included are The Night Train Revue, Kentish Steele and the Shantelles, The Soul Unlimited, Jayson Hoover and The Epics, The Nocturnals, The Stags and The Schockers.

Retailing at $5.98 the records were ready a few weeks ago but some difficulty in the cover set things back a bit.

While on the Vancouver music scene, The Collectors, whose first recording effort has climbed ski-high on charts all over Canada and the United States, might just be coming to Victoria in the next little while with their hit, Looking At a Baby.

A promoter in town is busy trying to set a date for a dance and show with Collectors' Claire Lawrence, saxophone, organ, flute and vocals; Howie Vickers, organ and lead singer; Bill Henderson, guitar and vocals; Glenn Miller, bass and vocals; and drummer Ross Turney.

BITS AND PIECES

Brian Jones, the blond rhythm guitarist with the Rolling Stones has just completed writing and producing the background score for A Degree of Murder now being filmed in Europe . . . With The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band climbing the charts with Buy Me For the Rain it makes me wonder why Victoria's own primitive instrumented band The Double Breasted Galvanized Jazz Whistle hasn't done as well . . . Strange that the Guess Who's newest His Girl isn't available yet in Canada even though the group hails from Winnipeg . . . California Nights by Leslie Gore seems to have made it everywhere except California . . . A new pic You're a Big Boy Now features songs written and performed by The lovin' Spoonful . . . Sonny and Cher's first film effort, Good Times should be reaching this area soon.

Victoria's second Mod fashion show complete with Playhouse next live bands invades McPherson month.

After only 50 or so patrons turned out for the Night Train Revue dance and show at the Tango a couple of weeks back the promoter has dropped all plans to bring Don and The Goodtimes, The Sonics, The Nocturnals and a few other out-of-town groups to Victoria.

Leading Organist At Cathedral Wednesday Night

Christ Church Cathedral, where a tradition of presenting the finest of music has been maintained for many years, will host one of the world's major organists next Wednesday night.

Dr. Francis Jackson, organist of famous York Minster, will give a recital of sacred and secular works in the cathedral, starting at 8.

As usual with the cathedral, there is no admission charge, but a collection will be taken.

Dr. Jackson's distinguished career includes his appointment in 1960 as president of the Incorporated Association of Organists and to the advisory committee of the Central Council for the care of Churches in London, a body that deals with historic organs.

He has appeared in many cathedrals, has toured Europe and Canada and broadcasts frequently.

At the International Congress of Organists in 1957 in London, Dr. Jackson gave the opening recital in Westminster Abbey and in 1966 was one of the recitalists in a series commemorating the Abbey's 900th anniversary.

His virtuoso technique and brilliance of style are noted wherever he plays.

JILL PAVER . . . best of five

Jill Wins Rose Bowl In Music Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Two major trophies in the Greater Victoria Music Festival were carried off, Friday night, by a 19-year-old soprano and a 16-year-old pianist.

Jill Paver competed with five other A class winners for the coveted Rose Bowl, but Linn Hendry, having won all open classes in which she had competition, was unchallenged for the City of Victoria Medallion.

The Festival Highlights concert, ending the two week festival, was attended by a near-capacity audience at McPherson Playhouse.

It was an audience that was instantly won over as Penny Beavan opened the program with a poised, artistic unaccompanied performance of the folksong, Blow the Wind Southerly.

The exceptional quality was sustained, from that auspicious beginning, throughout the evening that concluded with Linn Hendry playing the Chopin F sharp minor Impromptu and some exquisite singing by the Amity Singers.

BURSARY AWARD

Other competitors were Carla Levinson, Norma Selwood and Don Twine.

The opening address was given by Mayor Hugh Steven. Dr. J. F. K. English was chairman and Mrs. Norma Mickelson presided over the awards. Presentation were made by festival president H. C. O'Donnell.

Awards, mostly in the form of bursaries and some book prizes were made as follows: The Aldyen Hamber Chapter IODE bursary to solo accordionist Sheila Woolsey; Banff School of Fine Arts Scholarship, cellist George Kiraly; Congress of Strings Scholarship, Edward John Lees, violinist; the Edith Ellis bursary, Don Mayer, clarinetist.

The Canadina Broadcasting Corporation Award which includes a half-hour broadcast by the winning choir, went to the Amity Singers, conducted by Rodney Webster.

SIGHT PLAYING

A Hilda King Bursary for piano sight playing was won by Frances Crampton: the Royal Conservatory of Music Alumni Scholarship by Linn Hendry who also won the Victoria North Kiwanis junior bursary. The Bernard Rain Strings award went to Mary Chard.

Bill Dyson and Donna Dougan won the Royal Canadian College of Organists, Victoria Centre, awards for junior and senior organ classes respectively, and Kathryn Allison won the Audrey Johnson speech arts bursary.

Three bursaries went to Pat Patterson in piano classes. These were the Victoria School of Music, Xi Nu Chapter Beta Sigma Phi Sorority and Royal Schools of Music Association awards.

Victoria Musical Art Society bursaries went to Darien Hunt for violin and Rosemary Sims for voice. The North Kiwanis vocal bursary went to Miss Paver.

Registered Music Teachers' Association awards went to Wendy Stofer (two), David Sims and Irene Boese, and the School of Music string bursary to Nancy Meredith.

BOOK AWARDS

Henry Birks and Sons prize of a watch was awarded to pianist Jane Tsai and the Ethel James and J. Ingram Smith book awards to singers Frances Smith and Carla Levinson.

'On Monday Next' To Open Tonight

Several experienced and favorite local actors as well as some promising newcomers make up the cast of Victoria Theatre Guild's On Monday Next, the comedy which opens tonight at Langham Court Theatre.

Ted Gaskell directs the play. It is scheduled to play nightly through next week, Monday to Saturday.

Phillip King's light farce spoofs a theatrical company preparing for an opening, and playing the role of the producer is Richard Litt whose stage experience actually includes professional rep in England.

Mr. Litt has played many outstanding roles in this city, his last being as leader of the four knight-tempters in Murder in the Cathedral.

Connie Thomson is another whose role in the play reflects her background. Miss Thomson plays a veteran actress who has been in the theatre all her life.

As a matter of fact, Connie can scarcely recall a time when she was not occupied with the theatre, and finds it impossible to remember the many roles she has taken.

Stanley Bowles won an acting award in the 1965 Dominion Drama Festival, acted in the Disney film, The Wild Heart, and played several parts on the local stage.

GLAD TO SPEAK

Denise Wood who made her Theatre Guild debut in The Miracle Worker, with an unforgettable performance as blind Helen Keller, is rather glad she gets to speak in this one, considering she was a speech arts medalist for B.C. in 1965 and '66.

Roles in Cradle Song, Seven Nuns and Dead On Nine, have been Doreen Renton's preparation for a leading part in the current production.

Completing the cast are two newcomers to the Theatre Guild, Barbara Copeland and Alan Wyatt.

Curtain time for all performances is 8:30. All seats are reserved and tickets are available at Eaton's.

Coming out from their busy habitual haunts behind the scenes to make rare on-stage appearances are Dave Foster, Rene Larkin, Jim Cotton and Bud Bishop.

Arion Club Songfest On May 6

Theme song with which members of the Arion Club have opened each rehearsal and concert for the past 75 years is Ecce Quam Bonum, Latin version of the first verse of Psalm 134.

In English it reads, "Behold how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Arion's 75 years of continuous activity is evidence of how well they have taken their motto to heart.

Canada's oldest established male chorus, the Arion Club will celebrate its 75th anniversary May 6 with a Centennial Festival of Song at Central Junior Secondary School.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

Assisting in the diamond jubilee celebration will be two troups which owe their existence to the parent club. From Eugene, Ore., will come the noted Gleemen and also featured will be the Rotary Boys' Choir.

The occasion also celebrates conductor Frank Tupman's 50th anniversary as a choral director.

Major works will include Handel's Let Their Celestial Concerts All Unite; a Manx folk tune, Fishermen's Night Hymn; Schubert's Sanctus; Bach's Now Let Every Tongue, and the Soldiers' Chorus from Faust.

Ted Boulden, associate conductor of the Arion Club, will also participate.

FANTASY OF IAN FLEMING

BOND, JAMES BOND

Who Will Remember the Name 007 in Years Ahead?

THE LIFE OF IAN FLEMING by John Pearson; Clarke, Irwin and Company, 1966; $7.25.

Reviewed by Marjorie Menhenett

"James Bond was born at Goldeneye on the morning of the third Tuesday of January, 1952"—thus formally does John Pearson announce the birth at Ian Fleming's Jamaican estate of the most popular fictional hero of our time.

However, this announcement occurs over half way through the biography, and James Bond was the creation of a man then 43 years old; the secret agent sprang full-grown from Fleming's brain, but he had been developing to adulthood for most of Fleming's lifetime.

The character who emerged from Fleming's imagination on that January morning has always seemed to me precisely what his creator himself was wont at times to call him: "that cardboard dummy". And the milieu in which he moved, on which Ian Fleming lavished careful attention and research, was never more than the backdrop for essentially vicious escapades.

I have not found James Bond a satisfactory character.

But Bond was, from the very beginning, modelled after Fleming himself: not so much as he was, but as he would have liked to have been. As John Pearson puts it: "James Bond is not Ian Fleming, nor is he an Ian Fleming that ever was. He is Fleming's dream of a self that might have been—a tougher, stronger, more effective, duller, far less admirable character than the real Fleming."

In this biography Pearson has done with his hero what Fleming (an almost pathologically reserved man) never, perhaps, cared to do with Bond: supplied the background and the psychological stuffing that makes the subject come alive and turn into a human being.

Marjorie Menhenett teaches English at the University of Victoria.

Bond, of course, remains the "cardboard dummy" that he always was; but he is nevertheless an integral part of Fleming's makeup—the embodiment of his dreams of action and achievement. And just as an understanding of Fleming helps to explain the phenomenon of James Bond, so Bond helps to illuminate Fleming. They are parts of the same whole.

Ian Fleming's life had a kind of superficial glamour which did nothing to alleviate the pain and difficulty he had in coming to terms with the world. According to Pearson, "evidently from the start he had one of those natures for which the world is uncomfortable in whatever shape they find it." Born into an enormously wealthy family, Fleming's own share in the family fortune was entirely subject to his mother's approval of his activities; his father was killed in action in 1917, leaving Mrs. Fleming with the absolute power to disinherit any of their sons.

Living up to his mother's expectations did not come easily to Ian Fleming.

He had a very poor record at Eton and was equally unsuccessful in his one term at Sandhurst where his mother had entered him in hopes that the discipline of military life would bring him into line.

Only at the Forbes Dennis' school in the Tyrol did Ian Fleming finally begin to fulfil his intellectual promise, get to work, and largely make up for the college education he had missed.

Under the Forbes Dennis' guidance, Ian decided to aim for the Foreign Service.

However he failed to qualify in the entrance examinations, and turned instead to the first of a series of jobs which he was to take in the hope that in one of them he would find the freedom, the excitement, and the scope for his active imagination that he needed to sustain his interest and escape the boredom that always threatened to engulf him when he was subjected to routine.

As a sub-editor for Reuters and then in his six-year stint in finance, first as a merchant banker and then as a stockbroker, he sought without success the role which would suit his eccentric capabilities.

Only during the Second World War, as personal assistant to Admiral Godfrey in the Admiralty, did Ian Fleming ever find "the one career in which he was to be completely at home and in which every side of his complex and contradictory nature could be made the most of."

Located at the "nerve centre of the Naval Intelligence Division," Fleming "had a finger in virtually everything" and latitude, furthermore, to follow up his own imaginative ideas on how to deal with the enemy. The role pleased him. But the war ended and Fleming returned to the restless search for a civilian niche.

A similar yearning for the romantic, the exciting, characterized his private life. But here he was not even temporarily successful in realizing his fantasies. Fleming would have liked to have been a connoisseur of fine things—wine, food, books—but in point of fact, though his collection of first editions was a valuable one, he did little of the work of collecting himself, and soon came to regard his library merely as a capital investment. "He had his bright idea and moved on, as he always did."

As for his gastronomic pretensions, it is Pearson's opinion that Fleming "was never really interested in food and wine—it was the idea of the perfect meal that excited him."

He was a romantic without either the patience or the perseverence to realize his dreams. Only through James Bond did Fleming realize his fantasy of being a connoisseur.

The reality of Fleming's erotic life more nearly approached that which he attributed to his fictional hero.

Pearson defines him as "something more than a philanderer, something less than a rake"—"a womanizer who did not really like women." Fleming was enormously successful with women, but refused to recognize them as human beings they were "there to be slept with and then forgotten."

Like James Bond, though for different reasons, Fleming would not risk emotional involvement. It is Pearson's belief that "by refusing to accept that a mistress could also have a mind, he remained safe from love and all its uncomfortable complexities and safe from being found out."

He could maintain his mystery.

"For Ian Fleming was a mystery. Not even his best friends, male or female, felt that they knew or understood him. He had onstructed for himself a "solitary dream world" and in order to preserve it "he would never risk revealing himself to another human being."

James Bond is the product of this dream-world. His world is Fleming's fantasy world. And this fact accounts, Pearson believes, for what he calls the "odd, airless landscape of the Bond novels, "for their oddly claustrophic atmosphere": "all the emotions are Fleming's emotions, the fads and beliefs are his fads and beliefs, and even when he bases his action on a genuine incident from real life it has a habit of becoming so overlaid by the fantasies with which he enhanced ordinary existence that it too becomes indelibly his own." Bond is a dream figure, in a dream world.

In assessing this biography, the question which must be asked is whether Ian Fleming, creator of James Bond, merits Pearson's careful research, this beautifully-done book? And this becomés, essentially, the question: does James Bond merit them?

From one point of view it seems to me, the answer must be no. Ian Fleming is dead.

James Bond is an ephemeral phenomenon. In 20 years, or 50, his name must be totally forgotten.

But this is not the whole story. Today, over much of the English-speaking world, James Bond is still a by-word. His appeal to millions of readers warrants investigation. And Pearson's biography serves the very worthwhile purpose of explaining how he came to be: born of the life and dreams of a man who grew up between the world wars, the stunted shoot of a particular social class at a particular moment in time.

Bond is the creation of a man who was alienated from the values of his society and found no other, of a dilettante who committed himself to nothing but found his only happy role in the challenge offered his ingenuity in time of war, of a man who finally looked at himself in the mirror and created a hero who has appealed to millions: 007 (licence to kill).

James Bond is, says Pearson, "the ideal Mitty figure for Fleming and for all of us who watch and want but do not do." The judgment has an uncomfortable validity.

LOOKING AT BOOKS

By Guess and By Gosh It's Bard's Birthday

By JOAN COLDWELL

Every year at this time a service is held in London's Southwark Cathedral to celebrate Shakespeare's birthday and flags fly in Stratford-on-Avon.

COLDWELL

Actually it is only by guesswork, with a touch of sentimentality that the 23rd of April has been proclaimed the day Shakespeare was born. The Stratford parish register tells only that he was baptized on the 26th of April, 1564. But it records the day of his death, 52 years later, as the 23rd of April and, this being St. George's Day, what more neat and economical arrangement? Patron saint of England and patron writer sharing the festivities.

And why Southwark Cathedral?

It was of course in the diocese of Southwark, more specifically in the part delightfully named the Liberty of the Clink, that Shakespeare spent much of his working life, writing plays for the Globe Theatre on the south bank of the Thames.

Stratford has managed to preserve little oases of Elizabethan atmosphere in its old buildings and uncluttered riverbank, but Southwark isn't exactly a tourist's paradise.

You can go on a guided walking tour, down between the gasworks and the brewery, to see the plaque marking the spot where the Globe once stood. In the cathedral there is, as well as a modern monument to the dramatist, the grave of a younger brother "Edmund Shakespeare, a player."

But there's one little bit of sixteenth century atmosphere in Southwark. The old George Inn has an open courtyard, of the sort in which travelling actors used to perform, and a surrounding gallery for spectators. Here every summer a local company stages a couple of Shakespeare's plays, providing an unusual experience for theatregoers.

Two recent books offer new angles for the stay-at-home Shakespeare enthusiast. Both are far removed from the usual critical analyses and there is nothing the least bit pedantic about them.

The first, it is true, is the work of a scholar, one-time head of the department of English at the University of Saskatchewan and then professor at Aberdeen. And the book is based on an academic interest in a kind of character-sketch popular in the seventeenth century, a short piece known simply as a "character."

John Lothian prefaces his Shakespeare's Charactery with an essay describing some of the usual forms of "characters" and he claims that Shakespeare incorporated this type of thumb-nail sketch into his plays, often superfluously, well before the vogue of charactery started. He quotes from the main character-writers, Earle, Overbury and Hall, to show that their work often imitated Shakespeare's descriptions.

Professor Lothian's book is an anthology of over 400 brief character sketches from the plays, grouped under such headings as "Professions and Trades," "Villains" and "Social Types." While a scholar might question whether some of these selections bear any resemblance at all to the conventional "characters" and might quibble about counting any of them dramatically unnecessary, the general reader will find this a pleasant browsing book, placing familiar and not-so-familiar passages in a novel arrangement.

An actor's approach to Shakespeare is given in a book by William Redfield, the Guildenstern of the 1964 Gielgud-Burton Hamlet. (This was the production made notorious by the Burton-Taylor romance: "crowds of two thousand or more . . . gathered nightly outside the theatre . . . This was star-gazing at its most intense . . .")

During the period from the casting of the play to rehearsals and previews in Toronto and Boston and then to the New York opening, Redfield wrote a series of letters to a friend describing the progress of the production. These, much expanded and edited, form Letters From An Actor.

The idea of this book is excellent. A record of an entire production, with its problems of interpretation and staging discussed by two of our greatest actors, and written by one who is himself a fine actor, could be a stupendous contribution to our understanding both of Shakespeare and the theatre.

But Redfield threw away an opportunity to create something of real worth; I can't help feeling that he used the notoriety of this production to sell a book he might just as well have written on any other occasion—a book of his own observations on the acting profession and of theatrical anecdotes, too often what he himself calls: "High camp among the pros."

Consequently this becomes another amusing book for browsing. Dip into it for entertaining and admittedly apocryphal anecdotes about Larry (Olivier), Rafe (Richardson) and "dear old John G." If one overlooks a lot of trivia and silly schoolboy comments (on Polonius' eavesdropping: "who picks up the eaves Polonius drops?) one finds a few worthwhile passages on different acting methods and an occasional interesting remark about Hamlet.

No Doctrine Plowing In Shakespeare Book

Reviewed by M. D. Faber

Mr. Eagleton's brief and pleasantly written volume strives to explore in Shakespeare what a good many individuals today would regard as the fundamental human problem, namely, how does one reconcile his private self with his public self, his inner man with his outer man, the demands of society with the demands of the self-concept?

To be responsible, indeed to be whole, one must be social; but being social has its dangers, for it can and often does lead to the stifling of the "true" or "spontaneous" self.

One becomes a puppet, a tool, a Rosencrantz, an Osric.

Again, because the self is not "objective," "an object," because it is constantly changing in the face of its encounters with other selves, it is perepetually involved in working out a kind of modus vivendi with the relatively fixed values of the society in which it exists.

For example, Troilus regards society as hostile and repressive, threatening authentic fulfillment. Yet a man cannot totally escape from society; thus Troilus tries to act in society without ever seeing himself objectified in an action or social role.

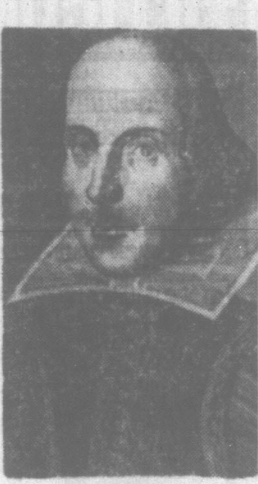
His situation is inherently tragic. Mr. Eagleton examines the chief characters of Hamlet, Measure for Measure, Coriolanus, Antony and Cleopatra, Macbeth, The Winter's Tale, and The Tempest in similar terms.

One of the nice things about Mr. Eagleton's contribution is that it is remarkably free of pedantry. The reader is not asked to plow through dreary masses of Tudor "social doctrine" or to interpret timeless characters in the light of Elizabethan lore; the usual formulae for placing Shakespeare's creations on broad backgrounds.



SHAKESPEARE
. . . his day

Mr. Eagleton, who has somehow escaped the deadening influence of current Shakespearean scholarship, goes straight to the playwright for his "data". It is partly for this reason that his book is effective. By contrast, the conclusion of Mr. Eagleton's volume is something of a disappointment. Attempting to discuss the problem of spontaneous self versus society's demands as it applies to the individual living in the 20th century, the author relies almost exclusively upon the thought of Arnold, Mill, Browning, Carlyle, and other Victorians, instead of upon those of our contemporaries who have really brought home this problem to us: Sartre, Binswanger, Erikson, Marcel, May.

I wonder if Mr. Eagleton realizes the degree to which he is indebted to these authors (he uses the word "existential" again and again)? At any rate, Shakespeare and Society is worth the price and the time. I suspect it will inspire further existential-psychological examinations of Shakespeare, and that is good.

Sensible Look At 'Growing Up'

TIME TO GROW UP, by H. W. Tame, Macmillan of Canada. $2.25.

Reviewed by Judith Terry

A book for children explaining sex must be incredibly difficult to write, since the moral and psychological aspects of sex are impossible to encompass in the straightforward and simple style required.

In Time To Grow Up H. W. Tame takes what is perhaps the best way out. He concerns himself merely with the physical, and as regards these other issues contents himself with the unexceptionable remark that "although he (the adolescent boy) is capable of sexual intercourse, a restraint is imposed upon him by the society in which he lives."

Parents and teachers should then be able to promote the discussion and thought that the book will inevitably give rise to.

This is a sensible book.

It contains much informative material that is relevant but not central to the subject. This has the distinct advantage that the sexual act itself, by being set amongst details of a baby's growth in the womb, simple explanations of genes and chromosomes and other such, does not become disproportionately important.

The disadvantage of the book is that it is geared to the needs of English children. Tame makes reference to the "chemist's shop," the "primary school"; the illustrations (which are uniformly lifeless) show the boys playing football, the girls dressed in gym-slips, the teacher wearing a gown.

It is a pity that the book could not have been adapted slightly to make it more relevant to the needs, and closer to the experience, of the Canadian child of 10-12.

Solo Trip In Sailboat Recalled

TINKERBELLE, by Robert Manry; published by Fitzhenry and Waterside Ltd., Scarborough, Ont., 1966; price $7.50; 254 pages. Illustrated (photographs and sketches).

A former reporter, then working on the copy desk of The Cleveland Plain Dealer, recounts his adventure when, as solo pilot, he brought his 13½-foot, single-masted, 30-year-old sailboat across the Atalantic.

Alone and unaided, relying solely upon her canvas and with her only "auxiliary power" a pair of oars, he sailed Tinkerbelle from Falmouth, Mass., to Falmouth, Cornwall, in 78 days.

This bold adventurer tell his story in minute detail, from his family, employers, co- idea, to the triumphant arrival of Tinkerbelle at journey's end amid the wildly enthusiastic welcome from the Cornish populace.

He describes the considerable reconditioning and additions he made to the structure of his original $160 purchase; the loyal support of his family, employers, coworkers and friends; finally the incredibly daring, nightmarish but all too real adventure itself—alone on the vast ocean in this tiny, but seaworthy and self-bailing cockleshell.

Anthology

What needs my Shakespeare for his honoured bones,
The labour of an age in piled stones,
Or that his hallowed relics should be hid
Under a star-y pointed Pyramid?
Dear son of memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?
Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a live-long Monument.
For whilst to th' shame of slow-endeavouring art,
Thy easy numbers flow, and that each heart
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued Book,
Those Delphic lines with deep impression took,
Then thou our fancy of itself bereaving,
Dost make us marble with too much conceiving;
And so sepulchered in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

—John Milton, 1608-1674.

U.S. Moves Troops North

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. headquarters disclosed today it has moved thousands of fresh American troops into the northern provinces and set up a special army task force to reinforce marines facing an estimated five Communist divisions.

Victoria Soccer Team Beaten

VANCOUVER (CP)—Burnaby Norburns whipped Victoria Gorge 3-0 here in the Division Two final of the British Columbia Juvenile Soccer Association championships today.

Burnaby led 1-0 at the half. Glen Jackson, Bruce Wilson and Malcolm McLeod scored.

Reflected Glory Out of Derby

NEW YORK (AP)—Reflected Glory, winner of three Florida stakes including the Flamingo was declared out of the Kentucky Derby today by trainer Hirsch Jacobs. Reflected Glory, who carried the silks of the trainer's wife, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs, was withdrawn from the May 6 race at Churchill Downs because of sore shins.

Tim Buck Visiting Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP)—A delegation of Canadian Communists was received today by Mikhail A. Suslov, a member of the Soviet Communist party's ruling politburo. The group was headed by the Canadian party's national chairman, Tim Buck.

Randy Breaks Shot Put Mark

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—Randy Matson broke his own world record when he put the shot 71 feet 5½ inches here today in a triangular field meet between Texas A and M, Baylor and Texas Tech. The huge athlete set his previous mark of 70 feet, 7¼ inches here in 1965 during a southwest conference track and field meet.

Tornado Toll Mounting

CHICAGO (UPI) — The wreckage left by the worst tornado onslaught ever to smash northern Illinois yielded new bodies today.

National guardsmen patrolled devastated towns with orders to shoot looters on sight.

The death toll of the vicious band of twisters which hit eight states Friday stood at 53. Scores of persons, many of them children, were still missing and the fatality count appeared certain to rise.

Total damage was estimated at close to $50 million.

Eighteen twisters carved a 175-mile path across northern Illinois and struck with lethal power at the Chicago suburb of Oak Lawn and the farm town of Belvidere, 55 miles to the northwest.

There were 27 dead at Oak Lawn and 20 at Belvidere. Other deaths were recorded in Chicago, suburban Stone Park, and Jonesville, Mich.

An estimated 1,500 persons were injured in the Illinois cities and communities of Oak Lawn, Belvidere, Chicago, Stone Park, Hometown, Evergreen Park, Barrington, Lake Zurich, North Barrington, Woodstock and Glenview.

Illinois was not alone in suffering the tornadoes' fury. Twisters hit from Oklahoma to Ohio, where the last of the night's funnel clouds were sighted near Fluffton at 2 a.m. today.

Damage in the Grand Rapids, Mich., area was estimated at $3 million and twisters also touched down in Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin and Indiana.

As midwesterners tried to dig out from the tornadoe's devastation, tornado watches were ordered today for parts of six eastern states—central and eastern New York, northeast Pennsylvania, northwest New Jersey, southeast Virginia, southern and eastern North Carolina, and northeast South Carolina.

With dawn, the search for more bodies began. In Oak Lawn, deputies probed the rubble of what had been the Fairview store and discovered the body of 18-month-old Christine Casey. Across the street, they came upon the body of her mother, Mrs. Joan Casey, 30.

Close to 800 Guardsmen were ordered into Oak Lawn with orders to shoot to kill if vandalism or looting broke out. Sheriff's deputies arrested one man discovered in an abandoned home as a looter. The officers used a police dog to sniff him out.

Gov. Otto Kerner sent an urgent call to the White House for federal aid and hurried to the disaster areas. He flew over the wreckage of Belvidere and described what he saw as "a corridor of destruction."

As Kerner arrived, more than 100 Guardsmen clad in battle fatigues joined with deputies and police from throughout northern Illinois in a grim, foot-by-foot search of the devastated area around the town's high school.

The men formed a human chain as they moved across the area where the roaring black funnel caught children as they emerged from the school Friday.

It was here that children were crushed to death

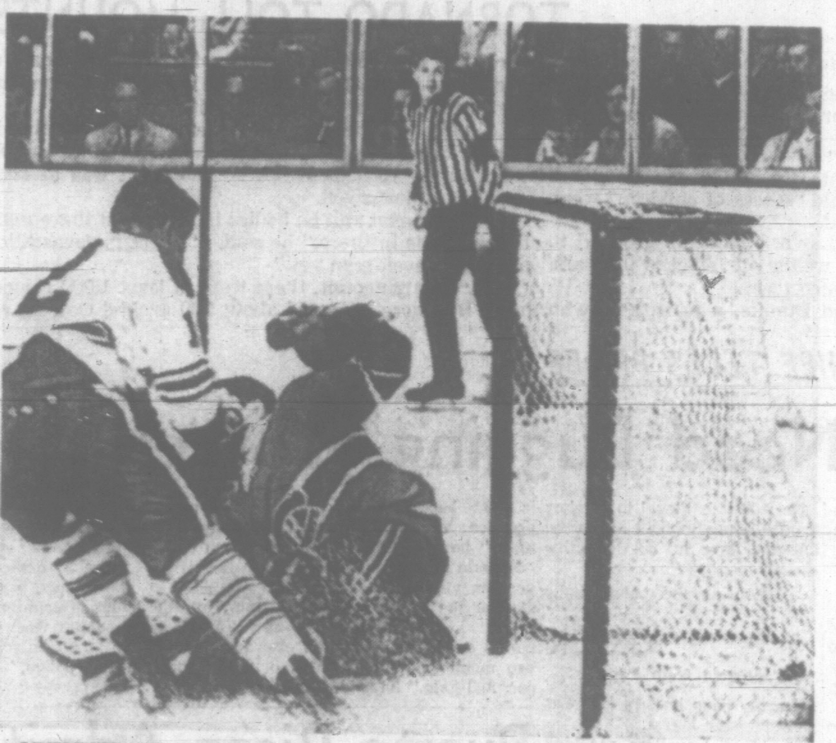
Leafs Blank Canadiens



OPENING GOAL of today's Stanley Cup hockey game at Montreal between Canadiens and Toronto shows Leafs' centre Peter Stemkowski putting on brakes to avoid crash into Montreal goalie Rogatien Vachon after putting puck into net. Victory enabled Leafs to tie best-of-seven series at one win apiece. Next game will be Tuesday. (CP Wirephoto.)

Stanley Cup Series Tied

MONTREAL (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs combined tremendous forechecking with the scintillating goaltending of veteran Johnny Bower to shut out Montreal Canadiens 3-0 today and tie the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final series at one game apiece.

JOHNNY BOWER
. . . he was star

The Toronto club scored on a power play goal by centre Peter Stemkowski in the first period and one by rookie Mike Walton in the second period.

Tim Horton, veteran defence stalwart, also scored the Leafs' third goal in the second period.

It was Bower's 10th appearance in a Stanley Cup playoff game and his fifth shutout.

The shots-on-goal department was a direct reversal from the first game as the Leafs bombarded rookie Rogatien Vachon in the Montreal nets with 43 shots, while Bower had 31 to handle.

The Leafs' tenacious checking forced the Canadiens to lose the puck continually before they could get an organized attack assembled.

GAME SLOWED DOWN

It slowed the Montrealers down to the over-all slower pace preferred by the Leafs.

After Stemkowski gave the Canadiens an early scare in the first 10 seconds of the game, the first seven minutes of the opening period looked as if it could be a repitition of Thursday night's 6-2 win by Montreal.

However, Stemkowski's shot bounced off the post and Toronto were unable to muster a shot on Vachon until the 7:02 mark.

Stemkowski's goal came at 12:14 when he took a goal-mouth pass from Bob Pulford and converted a deflection behind Vachon.

The goal was set up when Montreal defenceman J. C. Tremblay lost the puck to Pulford along the boards. Defenceman Terry Harper of the Canadiens was off for roughing at the time.

Walton beat Vachon at 9:12 of the second period with a hard blast from just inside the Montreal blue line. Vachon appeared to be screened on the drive.

Montreal's Yvon Cournoyer had been sent off for slashing at 7:18 and had six seconds remaining in his penalty when Walton scored.

SAT STILL

Horton rounded out the scoring at 16:57 of the middle period when he hit the Montreal net with a sizzling screened drive that moved in low from just inside the Canadiens' blue line. Vachon didn't move on the play until the puck was behind him in the net.

As early as the two-minute mark of the first period, Bower moved to the fore as he made a fine skate save off Cournoyer, with Toronto's Ron Ellis in the penalty box.

Twelve minutes later he stopped Cournoyer and Bobby Rousseau with Alan Stanley sitting out a tripping penalty.

Again in the second period with the Leafs shorthanded it was Bower who stemmed the tide as he somehow got in front of close-in thrusts from Rousseau, Jean Beliveau and Rousseau again in rapid succession.

At the 42-second mark of the final period, Bower was caught by Ferguson's stick as the Canadiens' left winger became locked around Stemkowski in the Toronto crease. The Leafs goalie continued after a brief rest.

The Leafs drew eight of 1 minors called by referee Ver Buffey.

UBCM Calls Emergency Meeting

An emergency meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities executive will be held Friday in New Westminster.

This was announced today by Mayor H. J. Gardner of Williams Lake, president of the UBCM.

The move follows province-wide concern by municipal leaders at the large increase this year in school costs.

"We are very concerned about the rising cost of schools," Mayor Gardner said in a telephone interview.

"What the answer is I'm not too sure."

Municipalities have found they must raise up to an extra five mills towards the cost of schools this year.

Mayor Gardner said he didn't plan on an executive meeting until June, but the widespread concern at school costs brought a response from municipal leaders for an immediate UBCM meeting.

THOUGHT MISTAKE

One interior city mayor, when he saw school costs up 4.29 mills, shrugged it off at first as a mistake.

"It came as a great shock when I reaized the figure was accurate," he added.

The increase in the Victoria area is 4.8 mills.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen has received support from other municipal leaders in his call for a royal commission to examine all aspects of provincial-municipal responsibilities and cost-sharing formulas.

This request will be introduced at the annual UBCM meeting in September at Prince George.

Scooped Moon 'Lumpy'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor III dug a trench about three feet long and at least six inches deep in the surface of the moon today but uncovered nothing spectacular.

The trench, the second scooped out by a two-by-five-inch shovel in less than three hours, turned up a considerable amount of lumpy material much like that on the undisturbed surface.

Pictures of the operation, televised to controllers at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, showed no surprises and nothing to indicate the moon's surface might be unsafe for manned landings.

Early today the spidery device did its first digging—a foot-long trench in three jerky motions lasting two seconds each.

The scoop made a second pass through the trench about an hour later but spokesmen said the pictures were not clear enough to show whether the trench had been deepened.

Surveyor III first dropped the scoop into the soil between two of its legs, creating a rectangular hole about 1½ inches deep.

After a brief delay to let the electronics of Surveyor's overheating camera cool off, the shovel was moved to the right and lowered again with its scoop opened.

The trench that resulted when the scoop was pulled back appeared sharply defined in photographs. This indicated the lunar soil was strongly cohesive, similar to wet sand.

A spokesman said the texture and grain of the soil around the spacecraft appeared about as expected—not too soft for a man to walk on nor so hard it would damage a landing vehicle.

'Reluctant' King Backs Greek Coup

ATHENS (CP)—King Constantine swore in seven more ministers to complete a new Greek cabinet today after a day of hesitation over whether to put the royal seal on a military administration.

The swearing in was announced by a government spokesman who told journalists: "The king is with us."

He said that three of the seven new ministers were judges. They join the four army officers and the new prime minister, Constantine Kollias, who set up the government Friday night after an army coup.

Some sources said the 26-year-old king was reluctant earlier to sign a decree which would have made the new cabinet and the new emergency laws legal.

KING BALKED

He was reported to have balked at giving his approval until the government was filled with more civilian figures.

Meanwhile, the Greek navy and air force were reported to have thrown full support to the army leaders who took over the government in Friday's predawn coup.

A government source termed as wild some reports that a split had developed between the army coup leaders and other army officers, the navy and the air force.

"The three arms are fully behind the coup leaders, who are determined to lead the country forward and out of the chaos created by the political bickering," the source said.

Premier Kollias said that the coup had been "bloodless" except for two casualties.

He said "calm and order" prevailed throughout Greece.

As the Greek capital returned toward normal, Kollias issued a statement broadcast by the Greek armed forces radio.

"The army's intervention was bloodless there were only two casualties. One casualty was from a ricocheting bullet and the other when the victim did not obey orders of a soldier under instruction."

Communications were still spotty and news correspondents were told to exercise "self-censorship of responsibility," to avoid speculation and to report only what they see and are told by officials.

Military units that had ringed Athens were withdrawn.

Diplomatic reports in London and Copenhagen said the king was at Tatoi Palace outside Athens at the time of the predawn coup Friday. This raised a possibility he may have been caught by surprise. A Turkish dispatch said even top army officers also may have been surprised by a coup launched by a handful of officers, joined later by others.

A pooled dispatch by AP correspondent Philip Dopoulos from Athens reported the night was filled with sporadic shooting in and around the Greek capital. The dispatch said there were unconfirmed reports that one person was killed and 10 wounded.

The Athens account said there also were unconfirmed reports that the navy commander, Admiral Constantine Engolfopoulos, refused to co-operate with

Armored Cars Halt Attacks on Chinese

JAKARTA (Reuters) — Indonesian troops and police, using armored cars, today blocked off Chinatown and other business centres in Jakarta after hundreds of young Indonesians ran wild and destroyed Chinese-owned property.

Youths armed with Molotov cocktails, knives, crow bars and bicycle chains marched to the Communist Chinese Embassy for retaliation against Chinese merchants who staged an anti - government demonstration Thursday.

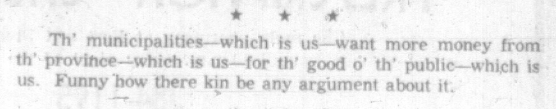
Troops prevented them from forcing their way into the tightly barred building.

Many Chinese citizens were rescued by troops when their vehicles were stopped by the mob.

The earlier Chinese demonstration was over the death of a Chinese held by the government.

Stopped from entering the embassy by hundreds of troops and police, the angry Indonesians demanded expulsion of the Chinese and a break of relations.

The demonstrators also set fire to Chinese-owned cars near the embassy and stoned Chinese stores.



It ain't clear jist whut's goin' on in Greece. So whut's diff'rent?

BUSES ARE OVERTURNED and piled one upon another at suburban bus terminal southwest of Chicago today, attesting to the force of tornado that struck area late Friday. (AP Wirephoto.)

when the twister flung their school buses against the wall of the school and more fell inside the building—in the words of a survivor—"lying all over, their faces mostly covered with blood."

Others were blown into the fields and Belvidere Mayor Clark M. Hetland said "scores of children" were still missing and feared dead.

In Belvidere and Oak Lawn, bulldozers groaned to plow paths through the welter of stacked-up cars, demolished homes and downed trees.

Oak Lawn Mayor Fred Dumke, a paraplegic who toured the devastation walking with the aid of painful braces, issued a call for help and added, "Anyone who is not coming here to help, stay the hell out."

Dumke was fearful of what searchers would find in a trailer court which looked like the target of a bombing attack in the tornado's wake. The court was at least 50 per cent destroyed.

"There must still be bodies in there and there must still be people in there," he said. "There is devastation we haven't even seen yet."

By a rough count, there were at least 1,000 injured in the Belvidere area and about 500 around Oak Lawn.

VANCOUVER CHIEF TELLS PROBE

Police Need Bugging Protection

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Police Chief Ralph Booth complained Friday that city police are being bugged.

The chief told the royal commission on invasion of privacy that criminals and business firms are invading the force's privacy by monitoring police radio transmissions.

"It is in the public interest to see that the police department is protected from these intrusions," Mr. Booth said.

He said it is illegal to monitor transmissions without authority, but the law in not effective enough to prosecute.

"Monitoring the police radio is fast becoming a common practice by the criminal element," he said.

He said news media and other persons are duly authorized to monitor the transmissions.

"But local car towing companies and who knows who else are monitoring for business or personal gain," he said.

The chief presented a brief to Commissioner R. A. Sargent in which he said controls over police use of bugging devices, suggested in other briefs, would play into the hands of criminals.

"A criminal couldn't wish for anything better than placing restrictions on the police," he said.

ACCUSED MAN KILLS SELF

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Michael Wilfred Burke, 30, charged with murdering his business partner earlier this month near Kamloops, has been found shot to death in a hotel here.

Las Vegas police said Burke took his own life.

He had been sought since April 4 when the body of Frederick Harrison, 53, was found in an industrial development on the Kamloops Indian Reserve.

the army coup leaders and was placed under arrest.

The first travellers reaching Rome from Greece reported today they heard gunfire in the streets but witnessed no bloodshed. Some said, however, they had heard rumors in Greece that three persons were killed in Athens and six in the Salonika area in northern Greece.

The diplomatic reports reaching London and Copenhagen said the army leaders who pulled off the coup in the king's name may have forced him to sign the royal proclamation putting the military in charge.

Martial law still was in force throughout Greece, but coup leaders relaxed restrictions and appealed for calm and order. Workers were told to return to their jobs.

Political leaders and about 8,500 known leftists remained in custody in military detention centres.

Puerto Rican Admits Link with JFK Plot

MANILA (AP) — A Puerto Rican described as a Communist agent for Cuba was the centre of controversy Saturday following reports that he had suggested he was drawn into a plot to assassinate president John F. Kennedy.

Luis Castillo, 24, was presented Friday by officials of the Philippines National Bureau of Investigation to some local reporters after NBI agents said he had confessed under questioning that:

- He had been in Dallas, Tex., at the time of the 1963 Kennedy assassination and had been given a rifle to shoot "a man in an open car."
- He entered the Philippines in the guise of a Filipino to contact Communist leaders here.

University-Run Hospitals Urged By Quebec MDs

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons Friday called for the establishment of university-run hospital centres which, the organization said, would serve to improve the quality of medical teaching and ultimately to produce more highly qualified professors.

The college made the recommendation in a brief to the provincial commission investigating health and welfare.

The organization also reiterated a stand in favor of a government-backed plan for medical care which would cover the whole population and provide for all medical needs.

But doctors should be allowed to opt out of such a plan, there should be some measure of fees designed as a deterrent to any exploitation of the plan and doctors should be paid on a fee basis rather than as salaried employees.

The college is supported in its stand on the medical care question by the Federation of General Practitioners, the Professional Association of Dental Surgeons, the Professional Association of Pharmacists, the Professional Association of Optometrists, the Professional Association of Dispensing Opticians and the Associations of Doctors of the Public Health Service of the City of Montreal.

SOME VOICE CRITICSM

Several other medical groups, however, came out strongly against any form of government control of medical care. These groups say they include large segments of the doctors who come under the Quebec college.

The groups against a government plan said government should be called on to foot the medical bills of the needy and, in what they call a relative way, for those who qualify neither as needy or as well off.

Dr. Gustave Gingras, president of the college and its official spokesman, said the group was appearing before the commission for the second time in eight days because it wanted to expand on some points left unexplained in its previous submission.

The brief said university-run hospital centres were needed because students now enrolled in the three largest faculties of medicine in Quebec—those at the universities of Montreal, McGill and Laval—do not have the opportunity to come into contact with the sick during their first two years of studies.

The quality of medical training and the calibre of future professors of medicine would improve if provision were made for the bringing together of medical students and hospital patients.

Dentists and specialists in other medical and allied disciplines should also have access to the hospital centres, the brief said.

The brief said the college recognized the right of resident doctors to receive higher pay than they are getting now. However, interns and residents should not be allowed to supplement their incomes during the period of post-university training by taking on a private practice or by assisting a practising physician.

LIFER GIVEN DEATH FOR PRISON KILLING

MONTREAL (CP)—Henri Boivin, 31, already serving a life sentence for non-capital murder, was sentenced Friday night to death for slaying a fellow penitentiary prisoner.

Laing Interested In Indian Plan

Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing has agreed to meet B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to discuss self-governing municipalities for Indian reserves.

In a letter to Mr. Campbell, Mr. Laing said the meeting should be after May 1 when he will hold talks with the National Indian Advisory Board on the same question.

Mr. Laing said he wrote Mr. Campbell because the latter had quoted him in a public speech as showing no interest in the idea.

He told Mr. Campbell in the letter that the federal government is most interested in municipal systems for reserves.

Mr. Laing said Mr. Campbell seemed to suggest that the reserve lands be turned over to individuals rather than the Indian band before achieving municipal status.

The federal government is afraid that the reserves might fall more and more into the hands of a few individuals, depriving the Indians of their livelihood.

He said: "These are lands held by the Indians and I have laid down a general policy of no more land sales. We want to develop them. There is 6 million acres involved."
